(2) how many officials working on the departmental central index have been (a) suspended, (b) disciplined, (c) dismissed and (d) prosecuted for each of the last 30 years for irregularities in connection with benefit fraud from which they or their associates have gained. [24613]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This information is not available in the form requested and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Benefit fraud by staff is treated very seriously, resulting in dismissal and prosecution when proven. A total of 34 staff have been prosecuted for matters relating to benefit fraud since 1 April 1994; it is not possible to say how many of these had access to the departmental central index. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 8 March, Official Report, columns 693–94.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list those local authorities who use (a) auditors and (b) specialist trained fraud investigators to investigate housing benefit fraud; and if he will detail each authority and the total number of staff who have been employed for each of the last 10 years. [24614]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is not available.

Family Credit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of (a) new family credit claims and (b) renewal family credit claims are being processed within one week, four weeks, six weeks, eight weeks and longer than eight weeks. [23623]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of family credit is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 15 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the clearance times of new and renewal claims to Family Credit.

The table below details the information you have requested. Such figures are produced on a monthly basis and I have therefore provided information for the month ending 30 April 1995 which is the latest full month available. For the purposes of this question, one week has been calculated as 5 working days.

Percentage

	1 week (1–5 days)	4 weeks (6–20 days)	6 weeks (21-30 days)	8 weeks (31–40 days)	Over 8 weeks (41+ days)
New claims	46.65	40.34	8.08	3.01	1.92
Renewal claims	45.92	44.6	646	1.88	1.14

The Family Credit Unit is currently operating a pilot section, introduced during April 1995, which is processing new claims from customers who have not previously claimed Family Credit. The pilot section accepts new (first-time) claims from one of the ten operational areas that process claims within the Family Credit Unit. These claims can be from customers who have recently started work but have not used the Fast Track service available through the Employment Service, had a change of hours and earnings, or have simply not previously claimed Family Credit.

A claim form is submitted and any additional information required is, wherever possible, taken over the telephone which allows the claims to be processed more quickly. A verification exercise is then conducted on a sample of the claims where telephone evidence has been accepted. Figures for the month ending 30 April showed that 97.5% of customers using this system had their claim decided in 5 working days.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

SCOTLAND

Chernobyl

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total compensation paid to farmers for loss of earnings and clean-up of radioactive contamination of Scottish farms arising from the fallout from the Chernobyl nuclear accident in 1986. [22025]

Sir Hector Monro: The sheep compensation scheme was introduced in July 1986 to compensate farmers whose enterprises had been disrupted as a result of statutory movement and slaughter restrictions following the Chernobyl accident. The total paid out under the scheme in Scotland up to the end of March 1995 was £2,491,842.

Drumkinnon Bay

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what direct representations the Minister with responsibility for industry and local government received in writing or in person from Drumkinnon Development Company Ltd. or any associated companies regarding the latter's negotiations with Dumbarton district council and its subsequent sale of land to Dumbartonshire Enterprise. [23057]

Mr. Kynoch: Neither I nor my predecessor received any representation from Drumkinnon Development Company Ltd. or any associated company on the matter to which the question refers, although the Scottish Office Environment Department was approached by agents of the Drumkinnon Development Company Ltd. in support of a request from Dumbarton district council that the decision on the planning appeal should be deferred for an additional month to allow the discussions between the district council and the Drumkinnon Development Company Ltd. to be completed.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what date the Minister with responsibility for industry and local government was informed of Dumbartonshire Enterprise's interest in the acquisition of Drumkinnon bay from the Drumkinnon Development Company. [23059]

Mr. Kynoch: I first learned of Dumbartonshire Enterprise's interest in the acquisition on 8 March 1995.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) on what date the Drumkinnon Development Company approached Dumbartonshire Enterprise to negotiate the purchase by the latter of Drumkinnon bay, Balloch; [23060]

(2) what information the Drumkinnon Development Company provided to Dumbartonshire Enterprise regarding the original price paid by the former for the land eventually acquired by the latter at Drumkinnon bay; [23054]

(3) what is the name of the company employed by Dumbartonshire Enterprise which assessed the value of the Drumkinnon bay site at £2.743 million; and what was the date of this assessment; [23061]

(4) when the Scottish Enterprise Board agreed in principle to allow Dumbartonshire Enterprise to acquire Drumkinnon bay from the developers. [23063]

Mr. Kynoch: This is an operational matter for Scottish Enterprise. I have asked its chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what date he became aware of Dumbartonshire Enterprise's interest in acquiring Drumkinnon bay from the developers. [23062]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend became aware of Dumbartonshire Enterprise's interest in the acquisition on 8 March 1995.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Sctoland what ministerial discussions took place either with Scottish Enterprise or Dumbartonshire Enterprise regarding the acquisition of Drumkinnon bay by the latter; and on what date ministerial consent was given. [23056]

Mr. Kynoch: No such discussions took place. Ministerial consent was not required in this case and no request for such consent was made.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the involvement of Dumbartonshire Enterprise or Scottish Enterprise in written or oral communication with the Minister with responsibility for industry and local government on the subject of the development at Drumkinnon bay. [23058]

Mr. Kynoch: There has been no written or oral communication between me or my predecessor and Dumbartonshire Enterprise or Scottish Enterprise on the subject of the development at Drumkinnon bay.

Scottish Enterprise

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what (a) formal or (b) informal reporting mechanisms operate to ensure that Scottish Enterprise is made aware of developments being undertaken by local enterprise councils which involve projects greater than £250,000; and how and to whom these are communicated by Highlands and Islands Enterprise or Scottish Enterprise to the Industry Department. [23064]

Mr. Kynoch: A local enterprise company is required by its operating contract to refer to Scottish Enterprise or Highlands and Islands Enterprise proposals which wouldinvolve expenditure in excess of specified delegated limits. The amounts of these limits vary according to the nature and purpose of the proposed expenditure, but expenditure exceeding £250,000 in any of the categories would require to be referred to Scottish Enterprise or Highlands and Islands Enterprise as appropriate.

Similarly, Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise are required to refer to the Secretary of State proposals which would involve expenditure in excess of certain limits, although these limits are generally higher than those which apply to local enterprise companies. Again, the amounts of the limits vary according to the nature and purpose of the proposed expenditure, but are for the most part set at amounts above £250,000. Cases involving property acquisition have to be referred to my right hon. Friend if the expenditure involved exceeds £5 million.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the project capital threshold expended by either Dumbartonshire Enterprise or Scottish Enterprise above which the Minister with responsibility for industry and local government is consulted.

Mr. Kynoch: The delegated authorities which apply to the Scottish Enterprise network vary according to the nature and purpose of the proposed expenditure. Cases involving property acquisition have to be referred to my right hon. Friend if the expenditure involved exceeds £5 million.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total revenue derived from Forestry Commission woodland disposals for each year since 1981 in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland. [23402]

Sir Hector Monro: The information is as follows:

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what will be the estimated targets in terms of (a) hectarage and (b) revenue for the disposal of Forestry Commission woodlands after 2000 in (i) England, (ii) Wales and (iii) Scotland. [23404]

Sir Hector Monro: No decisions have been taken on the Forestry Commission's disposals programme beyond the year 2000.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by county in respect of England and Wales and region in respect of Scotland the name and hectarage of Forestry Commission woodlands that are currently for sale. [23401]

Sir Hector Monro: The following Forestry Commission woodlands are currently for sale on the open market:

Cable Installers

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to require cable communication installers to restore all pavements and roads to their former standard and to replace trees which die within five years of the installation work; and if he will make a statement. [23298]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The New Roads and Street Works Act 1991 and associated regulations and codes of practice already require undertakers, such as cable operators, executing road works to comply with prescribed material specifications and standards of workmanship when reinstating a road or footway and to guarantee the performance of the reinstatement for a minimum period of two years. If an undertaker fails to comply with his duties under the Act regarding reinstatements then he commits an offence. Provision is made for road works authorities to inspect reinstatements and to require corrective work where a reinstatement is defective. Ultimately, the road works authority may carry out the work themselves and recover costs from the undertaker.

Particular attention is drawn by the codes of practice to the need to excavate carefully where trees, shrubs and other planted areas are involved. The National Joint Utilities Group has also recently published, in collaboration with the Cable Communications Association and arboriculturists, "Guidelines for the Planning, Installation and Maintenance of Utility Services in Proximity to Trees". A copy of the paper is available in the Library. The Government do not consider that it is necessary to legislate for the replacement of trees in the way suggested.

Police Deaths (Convictions)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will name those persons convicted of murdering police officers since 1960 (a) who are still serving prison sentences and (b) who have been released under licence; and if he will make a statement. [23299]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned friend the Minister of State will write to the hon. Member.

NHS Trusts

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will include in the new code of openness in the national health service a requirement for NHS trusts to hold their meetings in public and for health authorities to cease the practice of routinely closing their meetings to the public for items on their agendas which are not confidential. [23300]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble Friend the Minster of State will be publishing the code of practice on openness in the NHS in Scotland later this month. It will require health boards and NHS trusts to be as open as possible about their activities and plans.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the capital allocation for each NHS trust in Scotland for 1995–96, 1996–97 and any subsequent year for which allocations have been made. [24055]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton [holding answer 15 May 1995]: The capital provision included in the current external financing limit for 1995–96 is as in the table.

Further provisions will be made throughout 1995–96 as business cases are approved for projects above trust's delegated limits.

Capital provision on a trust-by-trust basis for 1996–97 and subsequent years has yet to be determined.

Medical Negligence

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of alleged medical negligence by (a) NHS consultants and (b) general practitioners were awaiting settlement or court hearing at 30 March in each of the last six years. [23301]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Details of the number of cases of alleged medical negligence by NHS consultants awaiting either settlement or court hearing is available from 30 March 1991 only. The information available is set out in the table:

Year	Number of claims awaiting settlement at 30 March
1992	214
1993	222
1995	93

Information on general medical practitioners is not collected centrally. They are independent contractors and as such insure themselves.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average time taken for an alleged medical negligence case to be settled; and if he will make a statement on how this average time has changed over the past six years. [22302]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The length of time taken to settle claims on medical negligence will vary depending on the nature of the case. If agreement is reached before the case goes to court, it can be settled within six to nine months of the claim being lodged. Where the claim is determined by the courts, the average time taken to reach a conclusion is around five years. Both averages have remained relatively static since 1990, when information on settlements was first collected centrally.

Child Protection

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce safeguards to protect parents with care and their children from violent or abusive absent parents who wish to claim parental rights and responsibilities. [24603]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As I indicated on 1 May 1995 on the Floor of the House, Official Report, column 84, during the Report stage of the Children (Scotland) Bill, the Government will consider whether through rules of court a parent's address might be kept confidential during the lead-up to a court hearing an application for parental rights and responsibilities by the other parent. That apart, we consider the law contains adequate safeguards for a parent and children against the other parent who is violent or abusive.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to reform section 12(7) of the Children and Young Persons (Scotland) Act 1937 to ensure that striking a child so as to cause or risk causing, injury will not be lawful whether or not the action was undertaken in terms of a parental right to chastise. [24605]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no plans to reform section 12(7) of the Children and Young Persons (Scotland) Act 1937 in the way suggested. As was made clear in the Report Stage debate on the Children (Scotland) Bill on 1 May, Official Report columns 49-75, the law as it stands—both statutory and common law—already offers sufficient protection to children from assault.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to ensure that registration of an agreement between a mother and a father on parental rights and responsibilities will have safeguards against duress or coercion. [24604]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The arrangements set out in clauses 4 and 11 of the Children (Scotland) Bill provide adequate protection for the mother and child. This was made clear on 23 February when, in Committee, amendments Nos. 238 and 239 were considered. Consequently, my right hon. Friend has no plans to change the arrangements which the Bill will bring into play.

NHS Pay

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each NHS trust in Scotland what decision has been taken on the claim by nurses for an increase in wages for the current year; and if he will make a statement. [24054]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 15 May 1995]: To date, 43 out of the 47 NHS trusts in Scotland have either made offers to nursing staff at local level or have indicated their intention to do so in the near future.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total wage and salary costs in each year since 1988 in (a) actual terms and (b) at current prices, of health service employees, including management and clerical grades, in respect of each health board area and NHS trust in Scotland; and what percentage each sum represented of the total wage and salary costs of the respective health board or NHS trust. [20606]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 May 1995]: The information is set out in the table. Figures for 1994–95 are not yet available.

The figures for administrative and clerical staff costs include amounts for those senior nurses and clinicians who have transferred to the general/senior managers' pay scales, particularly in latter years.

Fishing Industry

Dr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects European Union PESCA funds to be distributed to fishing communities; how much money he anticipates being paid for (a) the fishing industry and (b) the retraining of fishermen; if he will make it his policy to invite representatives of the fishing communities to take part in the decision and the distribution of such monies, and if he will make a statement. [24178]

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 15 May 1995]: The United Kingdom PESCA programme is still subject to final agreement with the European Commission. It is not yet possible to say when funds will be available. The sum of some 16.5 mecu—£13.8 million at present exchange rates—has been proposed for projects in Scotland over the next five years of which £7.4 million will be available for European regional development fund spending, £2.6 million for European social fund spending, and £3.8 million under the financial instrument of fisheries guidance. The precise allocation will depend on the projects approved for EC support. Decisions on which projects should be supported will be based on discussion in local action groups which may involve representatives of the fishing industry.

Telephones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many mobile telephones being used by his Department have been cloned during the last 12 months. [23434]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 9 May 1995]: I am aware of five instances of cloning of mobile telephones being used by the Scottish Office and its agencies during the last 12 months.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations his Department has made to the Department of Trade and Industry concerning the need for legislation to prevent the cloning of mobile telephones. [23475]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 9 May 1995]: No representations have been made by the Scottish Office to the Department of Trade and Industry concerning the need for legislation to prevent the cloning of mobile telephones.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what use his Department makes of hand-held and car-based mobile telephones; what were the costs for each financial year of these services since mobile telephones were first introduced to this Department; and how many mobile telephones are currently in use. [23442]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 9 May 1995]: Use of hand-held and car-based mobile telephones is made by travelling officers to facilitate communications while on official business. Mobile telephones were first introduced into The Scottish Office in the financial year 1986–87 but records of costs are only retained for the past three financial years. These indicate total cost of:

Our records show 380 mobile telephones as being currently in use throughout the Scottish Office and its agencies.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what costs his Department has incurred during the last 12 months as a result of cloning of mobile telephones being used by his Department, with particular reference to the making of unauthorised calls. [23482]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 9 May 1995]: No costs have been incurred during the last 12 months as a result of cloning of mobile telephones.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps his Department has taken to prevent the cloning of telephones being used by his Department; and if his Department has discussed this matter with any official agencies. [23462]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 9 May 1995]: All departmental users are encouraged to ensure the physical security of their mobile telephones but nothing can be done of a technical nature to prevent cloning. There have been no discussions with any official agencies on this subject.

Civil Defence Facilities

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many civil defence facilities in Scotland it is envisaged would be used as emergency centres of government in time of war; and if he will make a statement. [23171]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 11 May 1995]: There is one purpose-built civil defence facility, at Cultybraggan, which would be available to be used as an emergency centre of government during a war.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what future plans he has for the civil defence facility underneath Cultybraggan training camp, near Comrie; and if he will make a statement. [23189]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 11 May 1995]: While much of the former civil defence infrastructure has been sold or dismantled, the Cultybraggan facility will be retained, since it houses the central node of the emergency communications network. The ECN links together all local authorities, the emergency services, a number of central Government locations, and other sites such as nuclear industry off-site emergency centres. This network is available to local authorities when responding to civil emergencies in peace time and proved to be most useful during the severe weather emergencies of 1993 and 1994.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the final cost of (a) constructing the civil defence facility located underneath Cultybraggan training camp, near Comrie and (b) the unfinished civil defence facility at the grounds of Peel hospital near Galashiels; and if he will make a statement. [23187]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 11 May 1995]: The final cost of the facility at Cultybraggan training camp was £3.6 million. The Scottish Office purchased the site at the former Peel hospital at a cost of £100,000. Because of the change in the perceived threat of a major conflict; no start was made on construction work, and the site is currently being offered for sale.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the total number of hospital beds in (a) medical and (b) surgical specialisms in each health board area as at 1st April 1993, 1994 and 1995; and what are the projected figures for 1996 and 1997. [24053]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 15 May 1995]: The information requested is shown in the table.

Hospital bed numbers are not projected on a national basis and the availability of beds in any specialty is primarily a matter for health boards and the appropriate health care providers to agree.

Departmental Accounting Officer

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many times in the last 10 years, and on which dates, his departmental accounting officer has issued a minute in that role; and what was the issue in each case. [22564]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 9 May 1995]: Where a Minister overrules an accounting officer's advice on an issue of propriety or regularity or one of value for money, the accounting officer should request a written instruction from the Minister to take the action in question.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney (Mr. Rowlands) on 2 March 1994, Official Report, column 783, when I advised that no such occasion had been identified. No direction has been issued since that date.

Any such instruction would be reported to the Comptroller and Auditor General who, after making whatever investigations he considers appropriate, would report his findings to the Committee of Public Accounts.

NHS Administration

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many health service employees, including management and clerical grades, in respect of each health board area and NHS trust in Scotland, were engaged in administration on 31 March in each year since 1988; and what percentage they represented of the total number of persons employed by each health board and NHS Trust in each of these years. [20605]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 May 1995]: Information is not available centrally on which staff are engaged in administration as a whole or part of their work. The table shows, therefore, the number of staff employed on senior manager, and administrative and clerical payscales. Increases in numbers can be accounted for in part due to the assimilation of some professional staff into senior manager grades. Data are shown for 30 September, the only date for which a complete census of all NHS staff is available. Information at trust level is not available centrally.

[1] These data need to be interpreted carefully because of the possible inclusion of supra-area functions in the data of some boards eg computer consortia staff may appear on one health board payroll but supply a service across several health boards.
[2] Comprises staff on senior management grades and A to C grades one to 10.
[3] The increase in numbers can be partially accounted for by the assimilation of some professional staff to senior manager grades.
[4] Excludes nurses in training.

Cervical Smears

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many women underwent surgical treatment and medical care as a result of the maladministration of the cervical smear programme at the Inverclyde royal hospital, Greenock; what types of surgical operations and treatment were involved; and if he will make a statement. [21613]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 May 1995]: Following the re-reading of 1,954 cervical smear slides at Inverclyde royal hospital, 400 women received a result which indicated assessment by colposcopy. Approximately 2,000 additional cervical smear tests were carried out. Some 346 women were assessed for colposcopy in Inverclyde royal hospital. Some 147 had cervical biopsies with associated appropriate treatment of the cervix either in Inverclyde or elsewhere.

The forms of treatment include colposcopy without biopsy, colposcopically directed selective biopsy, cold coagulation and conization of the cervix.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many women have instituted legal proceedings against the Argyll and Clyde health board and the Inverclyde royal hospital, Greenock, as a result of the maladministration of the cervical smear programme at the aforesaid hospital; of such cases, how many have (a) been settled out of court, (b) resulted in court cases and (c) are still waiting a court hearing; what financial compensation has been paid; and if he will make a statement. [21614]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 May 1995]: Argyll and Clyde health board has received 105 legal claims as a result of the re-reading of cervical smear slides at Inverclyde royal hospital. Two claims have proceeded to a settlement. A further 10 settlements are in the process of negotiation. Once all the claims have been settled, I will be in a position to give an indication of the total amount of settlements made. No claims have resulted in a court case or are at present awaiting a court hearing.

DEFENCE

Nuclear-powered Submarines

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the availability of docking facilities for nuclear-powered submarines. [25183]

Mr. Freeman: We are currently assessing the availability of the facilities for docking RN nuclear-powered submarines, taking into account nuclear safety requirements and latest estimates of the time the submarines will need to spend in dry dock. The assessment is concerned only with existing facilities and does not involve consideration of future refitting facilities needed for Vanguard class submarines.

Two factors have led to the need for this work. First, an on-going survey of existing docking facilities at both Rosyth and Devonport, taking into account increasingly stringent nuclear safety practices, has identified a requirement for improvements to be made to some facilities. Secondly, in addition to delays arising from this work, the time which some nuclear-powered submarines need to spend in dock during refit has increased, typically by about three months.

We are therefore considering ways of limiting the resulting disruption to the docking programme for nuclear-powered submarines, including the possibility of deferring the ending of nuclear work at Rosyth which was previously planned for 1997. The assessment will include discussions with both the nuclear regulatory authorities and the dockyard companies. No decisions have yet been taken.

Defence Agency

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will be renewing investment decisions on (a) the replacement or enhancement of all three services' individual computer systems and (b) the establishment of a new Army personnel centre in Glasgow following the Bett study report. [23701]

Mr. Soames: Harmonisation of all defence administrative computer systems is a departmental aim arising from the "Front Line First" studies. In the case of personnel administration and pay systems, Mr. Bett has recommended that the harmonisation process should be undertaken by a defence agency, which should be set up within three years. He envisaged that it might then take about five years to develop a fully integrated personnel administration and pay system to operate across the services. We shall be examining this recommendation carefully in consultation with the services. In the meantime, our plans for the creation of the Army personnel centre in Glasgow are not inconsistent with the ultimate creation of a defence agency and we are proceeding with them.

Investment decisions on replacement or enhancement of the services' existing systems will take fully into account the need for harmonisation.

Dartmouth Royal Regatta

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the guardships which have attended the port of Dartmouth royal regatta in each of the last 15 years; and which ship will be on guard at the August 1995 regatta. [24737]

Mr. Soames: The following ships have attended the port of Dartmouth royal regatta during the last 15 years:

1980: Diomede and Alfriston
1981: Alfriston
1982: Alfriston
1983: Achilles
1984: Euryalus
1985: Diomede
1986: Hermione
1987: Plymouth
1988: Avenger
1989: Cardiff
1990: Active
1991: Battleaxe
1992: Sirius
1993: Battleaxe
1994: Battleaxe

Regrettably, there will not be a ship available to attend the 1995 Dartmouth royal regatta due to other operational commitments, and the number required for additional official duties during August, principally as a result of the VJ day commemorations.

Service Bases

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all Navy, Royal Air Force and Army bases which have been sold in the last two financial years and the buyers. [24549]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 3 May, Official Report, columns 234-37, to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice).

Tornados

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many RAF Tornado sorties have flown to the United Kingdom on exercise from their base at RAF Bruggen in the latest 12-month period for which figures are available. [23860]

(2) how many Tornados have participated in training sorties flown from their base in RAF Bruggen to the United Kingdom in the latest 12-month period for which figures are available. [23861]

Mr. Soames: RAF Bruggen Tornados flew 2,718 sorties to the United Kingdom between 1 May 1994 and 30 April 1995. Records are not maintained in such a way as to identify the purpose of each flight.

Old Sarum Airfield

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many bids he received for the freehold of Old Sarum airfield; and when he will announce his decision. [24546]

Mr. Soames: In all, four tenders were received. One of them has been accepted and the successful party was notified in writing on 10 May.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Early Retirement Packages

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the individual value of each (a) compulsory early retirement and (b) flexible early retirement package received by civil servants leaving his Department on the ground of limited efficiency in each of the last five years. [22082]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 2 May 1995]: Compensation payments for early retirement on the ground of limited efficiency are age, salary and service related. Details of limited efficiency early retirements for each of the last five financial years are as follows:

	Annual compensation payment to age 60 (rate pa)	Superannuation lump sum	Lump sum compensation payment	Compensation in lieu of notice (if any)

Legal Aid

Mr. Butler: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he expects to publish hisGreen Paper proposing reforms to the legal aid system in England and Wales. [25187]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor has today published a Green Paper, "Legal Aid—Targeting Need, The Future of Publicly Funded Help in Solving Legal Problems and Disputes in England and Wales". I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ponsonby Rule

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many objections have been registered by right hon. and hon. Members under the Ponsonby rule procedures, for instruments of ratification laid before Parliament in a Command Paper in the miscellaneous series in each year since 1979; and if he will indicate the resolution of the objection in each case. [24398]

Mr. Baldry: I know of none.

Subsidiarity

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to visit Spain and Germany to assess the value of devolved government and subsidiarity; and if he will make a statement. [24060]

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary hopes to discuss subsidiarity—the relationship between member states and the European Union—when he has talks with the German Foreign Minister on 26 May, and when he visits Spain under the Spanish presidency of the European Union. Devolution is an entirely separate issue, as all EU Heads of State or Government recognised at the 1992 Birmingham European Council:

"it is for each Member State to decide how its powers should be exercised domestically".

Germany and Spain may, however, be interested in the arrangements in Scotland, for example, which has far greater educational and judicial autonomy than any German land or Spanish autonomous community.

Czech Republic

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment Her Majesty's Government have made of the contribution of the growth of independent environmental non-governmental organisations in the Czech Republic to democracy there. [24716]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Independent environment non-governmental organisations in the Czech Republic have helped raise public consciousness both before and after the end of the communist regime in 1989, notably in north Bohemia and Prague, the areas worst affected by environmental damage. Together with other independent groups, they have made a positive contribution to the growth of democracy.

Spain

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much subsidy has been given to Spain in each of the last three years from the European Community for infrastructure; and what is the forecast of funding to Spain for each of the next three years. [24685]

Mr. David Davis: It is not possible to give a global figure for Spanish receipts from the European Community for infrastructure, but I will write to the hon. Member with a breakdown of the figures he requests.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

British Gas (Streetworks)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assurances he has received from the chairman of British Gas regarding the impact of the company's streetworks on small business. [25131]

Mr. Eggar: I have received a letter from Richard V. Giordano, KBE, chairman of British Gas plc, the text of which says:

> "Thank you for your letter of 28 April regarding possible disruption caused by British Gas in undertaking streetworks. British Gas takes a great deal of care to ensure that disruption caused by streetworks is kept to a minimum and has a liability under the 1986 Gas Act to compensate for physical damage caused directly by those works. Following our recent discussions and the Standing Committee debate, we have been giving further careful consideration to the question of economic loss caused to small businesses in exceptional circumstances of prolonged streetworks disruption.
> In order to minimise the risk of such disruption, TransCo is revising its existing Code of Practice in respect of communication and co-operation with owners of commercial premises. In particular, TransCo will identify the nature of the work, explain why it is necessary, the anticipated start date and the likely duration. TransCo will subsequently discuss, with individual business owners, issues including vehicular access, customer access, special notices and any special requirements.
> In those exceptional cases where small businesses suffer severe and clearly established loss of business over a prolonged period as a direct result of streetworks carried out by British Gas or its agents, British Gas will give sympathetic consideration to claims in respect of financial loss, on an ex-gratia basis. However, such payments would clearly be inappropriate in respect of escape-related or other emergency works.
> For indicative purposes British Gas would regard a business with a turnover of less than £500,000 per annum (in constant 1995 price terms) as a "small business" and streetworks over a period exceeding four weeks as a "prolonged period".
> Payment of ex-gratia compensation would be subject to the Director General of Gas Supply providing British Gas with reasonable assurance that such payments will be taken into account in any review of applicable price controls.
> I am also concerned that gas should not be unduly disadvantaged vis-a-vis competing fuels and would ask you to take this into account when considering the position of other relevant networks.
> I believe that this undertaking, together with TransCo's revised Code of Practice, demonstrates our continued commitment to high levels of performance in relation to streetworks and a responsive approach to the concerns of the small business community"

This undertaking from British Gas, to which the Government expect it to adhere, in the spirit as well as the letter, will address the concerns raised by my hon. Friend in a practical and appropriate way.

Berkshire

Mr. Berry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the implications for the business community of the proposed division of Berkshire into six unitary authorities. [24537]

Mr. Eggar: The potential benefits of unitary authorities include cost-effective service delivery, reduced bureaucracy and clear accountability. These benefits will accrue to the business community, among others.

Nuclear Electric

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what provisions Nuclear Electric has made for decommissioning of Magnex power stations in each year since 1990; and what estimate his Department has made of the provisons that will be outstanding if Magnox stations are transferred to a separate public sector company in 1996. [24574]

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the annual reports and accounts of Nuclear Electric, available in the Library of the House. The estimated provisions outstanding, if Magnox stations are transferred to a separate public sector company in 1996, will be published in the accounts of that company.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what is the current value of investments made by Nuclear Electric to cover decommissioning costs; and what value his Department estimates such investments will have at the end of 1996; [24571]

(2) what cash balance Nuclear Electric has accumulated in the national loans fund at the end of each financial year form 1990–91 to 1994–95; and what balance his Department expects by the end of 1996. [24573]

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the annual reports and accounts of Nuclear Electric, available in the Library of the House. Information for future years will be published in the accounts of the various companies for those years.

Rural White Paper

Mr. Colvin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of the net annual financial saving, or cost, of his Department's submission for the proposed White Paper on the rural economy. [24331]

Mr. Page: Proposals for the Rural White Paper remain subject to continuing collective consideration and discussion. The cost of measures contained in the White Paper will be taken into account in the public expenditure survey.

British Coal Land

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will advise British Coal to refrain from seeking to dispose of land for development and to seek the removal of land from the green belt where the planning authority and the local community wish that classification to be maintained. [24199]

Mr. Page: The disposal of British Coal property is a matter for the corporation, which is currently considering the detailed options for the transfer of its land holdings, including those with development potential, out of its ownership.

The designation of any land for green belt purposes is not a matter for British Coal.

National Lottery

Mr. McMaster: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with the chairman of the Post Office about its policy of paying for the television advertising of national lottery instant scratch cards; what steps he has taken to ensure that Camelot contributes towards the cost of this advertising; and if he will make a statement. [24117]

Mr. Page: Commercial arrangements between the Post Office and its clients are a matter for the board.

Companies House

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will list the total (a) set-up and (b) recurrent annual costs of the Companies House Cardiff contracting out team; how many civil servants are allocated to it and on what grade they are established; when it was set-up; and for how long he estimates the work of this team will continue; [23980]

(2) if he will list the total (a) set-up and (b) recurrent annual costs of the Companies House London contracting directorate; how many civil servants are allocated to it and on what grade they are established; when it was set-up; and for how long he estimates the work of this directorate will continue. [23979]

Mr. Jonathan Evans [holding answers 15 May 1995]: Companies House contracting directorate was set up following my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade's announcement on 20 December 1994, Official Report, column 1046, to implement the contracting out of the London Edinburgh and English satellite offices. At present the directorate comprises of:

1 part time grade 5, 2 grade 7, 1 higher executive officer (D), 1 executive officer, 1 personal secretary and 1 administrative assistant.

It is also planned to recruit another HEO.

The Cardiff-based contracting team presently comprises: one G7, one EO and one AA. The team was set up at the beginning of April. It is envisaged that both teams will remain in place until the completion of the contracting out programme.

The target is to have contractors in place by the end of March 1996. The estimated staff costs for the contracting directorate are £45,000 in financial year 1994–95 and £273,000 in financial year 1995–96. The staff costs for the Cardiff team fall in 1995–96 and are likely to be in the region of £70,000. There will be further costs of contract monitoring and management but it is not possible to specify these at this stage.

Deregulation

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) who commissioned the report "Deregulation Now" published by his Department on 21 March; [24000]

(2) how the membership of the Anglo-German working party on deregulation was determined; who appointed its members; and what are the political affiliations of each of the British members; [24001]

(3) how often the Anglo-German working party on deregulation met; and what resources were available to it to undertake research; [24002]

(4) what parts of the report of the Anglo-German working party on deregulation have not been accepted as his policy; [24003]

(5) what was the cost of setting up, running and publishing the report of the Anglo-German working party on deregulation; how much of these costs were met from public funds; to what extent the Health and Safety Commission was consulted over the health and safety section of the report; and if he will place a copy of its response in the Library; [24004]

(6) which British organisations (a) submitted evidence to the Anglo-German working party on deregulation, (b) were consulted on it and (c) provided staff on research facilities for it; [24005]

(7) what is the constitutional position of a policy document when its contents are not all Government policy, with particular reference to the report of the Anglo-German working party on deregulation from a Government Department submitted to the European Union; [24006]

(8) what relative weight his Department gives to the differing conclusions on health and safety regulation of the Anglo-German working party on deregulation and his own authorised review of UK health and safety regulations; [24008]

(9) how much public money was paid in disbursements or remuneration to members of the Anglo-German working party on deregulation; and if he will place in the Library an itemised list detailing to whom such money were paid. [24010]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The report of the independent group of Anglo-German business men was commissioned by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and Chancellor Kohl at the Anglo-German summit in April 1994. Members of the group were appointed by their respective Governments, with United Kingdom members being drawn from the deregulation task force. Apart from the right hon. Francis Maude, I am not aware of the political affiliations of any other UK member of the group.

The group met twice and had access to a small team of UK and German officials who provided secretariat support. Assistance and research facilities were drawn from members' own organisations. Group members conducted independent consultations, collected evidence from sectoral representative bodies and their own organisations.

The report has the status of independent advice from senior business men to Government, and is not a policy document from either the UK or German Governments. I am currently consulting other Whitehall Departments, and the Health and Safety Commission, on their specific recommendations. The UK's share of publication, distribution and related costs totalled £25,240. Members of the group received no remuneration from public funds.

Travel and subsistence expenses totalling £2,930 were met for the five UK members of the group who are listed in the groups's report "Deregulation Now", which is available in the Library of the House.

Nigeria (Military Equipment)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 10 May, Official Report, columns 517–18, if he will list the goods that fall under each category in the military list of the Export of Goods (Control) Order. [24663]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Export of Goods (Control) Orders contain the details of each of the categories of goods which are controlled. The orders are placed in the Library of the House on the date that they are published. Recent orders' dates of publication are as follows:

EGCO 1989—14 February 1990; EGCO 1991—31 December 1990; EGCO 1992—31 December 1992; EGCO 1994—25 May 1994.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Official Report

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, what conclusions the House of Commons Commission has reached about the future pricing of the Official Report following the adjournment debate on 3 April.

Mr. Beith: I am pleased to advise the hon. Member that agreement has been reached with HMSO for a reduction in the price of the Weekly Hansard from its present level of £22 to £12. This will enable purchasers to obtain Hansard at a price equivalent to £2.40 per sitting day, while for public libraries, which can take advantage of the Government discount scheme provided for in class XVIII, vote 5 of the supply estimates, the price will be equivalent to £1.20 per sitting day. Following advice from the Administration Committee, this price reduction has been endorsed by the House of Commons Commission and will take effect when the House returns after the late spring adjournment. It has been made possible by the computerisation of production in the Department of the Official Report, and will be achieved at no additional cost to the House.

Discussions are continuing on a new, long-term agreement with HMSO for the printing and publication of the different categories of House documents. The results of these discussions are expected to be submitted to the Commission later this year. In the meantime, there will be no change in the price of the daily Hansard.

TREASURY

Central Statistical Office

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what key targets have been set for the Central Statistical Office for 1995–96. [25038]

Mr. Nelson: The Central Statistical Office's key targets for 1995–96 are set out in "CSO Programme Strategies 1995–98", a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. As before, these targets cover the timeliness of published statistics, the size of revisions, the coherence of key economic statistics, the response rates for statistical inquiries, action to minimise the load on respondents, response times to public requests for information and the CSO's running costs, efficiency improvements and receipts. A number of the targets have been tightened for 1995–96 in recognition of the continuing improvements in the CSO's performance.

European Monetary Institute

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the Bank of England has now invested in the EMI in Frankfurt. [22448]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 4 May 1995]: I refer to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Llanelli (Mr. Davies) on 6 February, Official Report, column 63. The position is unchanged since that reply was given.

Tax Bands

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish estimates for the revenue cost in 1995–96, 1996–97 and for a full year of extending the 20 per cent. tax band by (a) £1,000, (b) £2,500, (c) £5,000, (d) £7,500, (e) £10,000, (f) £12,500, (g) £15,000, (h) £17,500 and (i) £20,000. [23352]

Sir George Young [holding answer 9 May 1995]: Available estimates are as follows:

Increasing the lower rate band by: £	Full year revenue cost at 1995–96 levels[1] £ billion
2,500	2.3
5,000	4.2
7,500	5.6
10,000	6.8
12,500	7.6
15,000	8.3
17,500	8.7
20,000	9.1

[1] The figures include consequential effects on the yield of capital gains tax.

Income Tax

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will (a) list the rates of income tax below 25 per cent., and the brands of income in (i) local currency terms and (ii) sterling equivalents, to which they apply, for each OECD country and (b) provide estimates for the number of different tax bands applying in the income tax system of each OECD country; [24368]

(2) if he will update the answer to the hon. Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) of 28 October 1993, Official Report, column 749, and list the rates of income tax over 25 per cent., and the bands of income, in (a) local currency terms and (b) sterling equivalents, to which they apply, for each OECD country. [24369]

Sir George Young [holding answer 16 May 1995]: The information requested in the two questions, giving all rates of tax and income bands for each OECD country, has been placed in the Library of the House.

EMPLOYMENT

Take-home Pay

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the change in real take-home pay for single wage earners in the bottom 10 per cent. of earnings in the north-east region of England between (a) 1974 and 1979 and (b) 1979 and 1995. [21316]

Mr. Oppenheim: The real take-home pay for an unmarried man at the bottom 10 per cent. of the full-time male wage distribution in the Northern region increased by 1.2 per cent. or £1.50—in 1993–94 prices—between 1973–74 and 1978–79, and by 17.7 per cent. or £20.50 between 1978–79 and 1993–94.

Spain

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much subsidy has been given to Spain in each of the last three years from the European Community for employment; and what is the forecast of funding to Spain for each of the next three years. [24682]

Miss Widdecombe: The information is not available in the form requested. Amounts committed to Spain from the European social fund to part finance a variety of measures in the field of vocational training and employment in recent years are as follows:

Period	Source	Amount (Mecu)
1989–1993	Objectives 1, 2, 3, 4, 5b	4,151.00
1991–1993	Community Initiatives	152.19
1994–1996	Objective 2	259.90
1994–1999	Objective 1, 3, 4	7,890.00

A commitment of 664 mecu has also been made to Spain for objective 5b across all the structural funds, but information on the proportion that will be committed to ESF activities is not held. Information on community initiatives over the period from 1994 is not yet available.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Africa

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the Government intend to provide to Africa through (a) bilateral channels and (b) multilateral channels over the next three years. [23795]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 15 May 1995]: Over the next three years, we plan to provide over £900 million of development assistance to Africa, including the middle east, through our bilateral programme. In addition to this, certain low-income, credit-worthy countries in Africa are eligible for assistance under the aid and trade provision. We will continue to provide emergency assistance in Africa, as needs arise.

It is not possible to provide planning figures for our contribution to Africa through multilateral institutions. We estimate our share will be around £2 billion based on past experience.

EDUCATION

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many chief education officers are currently employed in Berkshire; and how many she expects will be employed when the proposed reorganisation of local government has been completed. [24532]

Mr. Robin Squire: Under section 88 of the Education Act 1994, each local education authority has to have a chief education officer. Berkshire has one. Following reorganisation, each new LEA in the Berkshire area will have one.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will make a statement on the expected provision, quality and accountability of education services in the Reading urban area when that area is governed by three education authorities under the proposed reorganisation of local government in Berkshire. [24534]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Government's aim in reorganising local government is to improve cost-effectiveness and the quality and co-ordination of local services. The role of local education authorities will not change specifically as a result of the reorganisation of local government. It will be for the new LEAs to play their part in ensuring that the education service is run at least as effectively as now.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education for how many schools and pupils each of the proposed unitary authorities in England will have responsibility. [24583]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is not yet available.

University Lecturers

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the difference in levels of pay for lecturers in the old and new universities in 1988–89; and what is the difference currently. [24379]

Mr. Boswell: Lecturers in the old universities were paid on average £37.10 per week more in April 1989 and £48.80 per week more in April 1994 than those in former local authority further and higher education. It is not possible to give a separate figure for new universities from the "New Earnings Survey".

Rural White Paper

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is her estimate of the net annual saving, or cost, of her Department's submission for the proposed White Paper on the rural economy. [24330]

Mr. Forth: Proposals for the White Paper remain subject to continuing collective consideration and discussion. The cost of measures contained in the White Paper will be taken into account in the public expenditure survey.

Professors

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many professors there were in the (a) old and (b) new universities for 1988–89; and how many there are currently. [24380]

Mr. Boswell: In the academic year 1988–89 there were 3,442 full-time staff at professorial grade in English former University Funding Council-funded universities. The comparable figure for 1992–93 was 4,391.

In the former PCFC-funded English polytechnics granted university status, there were 3,614 wholly institution financed full-time academic staff at principal lecturer grade, and some 925 full-time academic staff graded above principal lecturer in the academic year 1992–93. Data for 1988–89 were not collected centrally.

University Promoted Posts

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many promoted posts there were in the (a) old and (b) new universities for 1988–89; and how many there are currently. [24378]

Mr. Boswell: Data on promoted posts are not available centrally.

Student Dependency Grant

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) how many students in receipt of dependency grant last year were (a) women and (b) men; [24591]

(2) how many students in receipt of dependency grant last year were married; [24592]

(3) how many students last year received dependency grant; and at what cost to the Exchequer. [24590]

Mr. Boswell: Provisional figures for the academic year 1993–94 show that 27,000 mandatory award holders resident in England and Wales received dependants' allowances. The gross value of these allowances was £55 million. Since these allowances are means-tested, the cost to the Exchequer will have been less that this amount.

Information on the marital status or gender of students in receipt of dependants' allowances is not collected centrally.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will bring forward regulations to ensure that women students with dependent children do not lose their entitlement to dependency grant when they marry. [24589]

Mr. Boswell: Under the Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations, the additional allowance to the student's grant which can be made for children who are wholly or mainly financially dependent on him or her will continue after marriage if the children remain his or her dependants.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Complaints

Ms Hodge: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what policy and procedure exists for dealing with complaints against central Government Departments by members of the public; when each Department last updated its policy; what time limit and target for dealing with complaints by members of the public exists for each central Government Department; and what follow-up procedure exists where complainants against each central Government Department are not satisfied with the Department's response to a complaint. [23715]

Mr. Horam: Each central Government Department is responsible for its own policy and procedure for handling complaints. The information requested is not held centrally.

Any member of the public who is dissatisfied with how a Department has dealt with his complaint may ask a Member of Parliament to submit his complaint to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration for investigation and review.

Departmental Performance

Ms Hodge: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what performance indicators there are for measuring the performance of central Government Departments in answering letters from members of the public; what is each Government Department's target for answering letters; how performance is monitored by each Government Department; and what is the performance against the target set by each Government Department. [23717]

Mr. Horam: Government Departments are responsible for ensuring that their handling of letters from members of the public is effective, and for setting their own targets. Departments and agencies are encouraged to publish such targets in their charter statements as appropriate.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what performance indicators there are for measuring the performance of central Government Departments in answering telephone calls from members of the public; what is each Government Department's target for answering calls; how performance is monitored by each Government Department; and what has been the performance against the target set by each Government Department. [23716]

Mr. Horam: It is for individual Departments to decide whether performance standards for answering telephone calls from members of the public should be set, and at what level. Standards may cover all or part of the Department. The monitoring of calls to see whether standards are met, and any resulting management action, is the responsibility of individual Departments. Information on the performance of Government Departments in answering telephone calls is not held centrally and could not be collected without incurring disproportionate cost.

"People and their Governments in the Information Age"

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on CCTA's participation in the electronic on-line meetings "People and their Governments", organised by the US Administration. [24598]

Mr. Horam: "People and Their Governments in the Information Age" was a two-week electronic on-line conference, held on 1 to 14 May, organised by the US Administration using the world-wide web and the Internet. The purpose of the conference was to garner public opinion on the use of information technology by federal, state and local governments.

I am delighted to report that CCTA, the Government centre for information systems, was the only non-American organisation specifically invited to participate. It did so by establishing an Internet mailbox to facilitate United Kingdom contributions, to be consolidated into a single response.

In the UK we have had collaborative open groups established on the Internet for the past six months, allowing users to contribute to discussions on a wide range of topics relating to the Government's use of information superhighways. We are exploring ways in which the participation in these debates can be widened.

PRIME MINISTER

Special Advisers

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the name, former occupation and supervising Minister of each special adviser currently employed from any Government funding source; and if he will list the salary range of such advisers as of 5 May; and if he will make a statement. [24211]

The Prime Minister: There are 36 special advisers currently employed by Government Departments; details of their names, former occupations, and Ministers are as follows. Note:
Special advisers fall into two categories, political and those with specialised expertise relevant to their appropriate Secretary of State. The latter are indicated by an asterisk.

TRANSPORT

Eastleigh Rail Maintenance Ltd.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the cost of (a) terminating and (b) terminating in perpetuity the contractual commitments relating to intellectual property rights of contractors to Eastleigh Rail Maintenance Ltd. for rolling stock maintenance in order to complete the privatisation contract of Eastleigh Rail Maintenance Ltd.; [24045]

(2) what action the British Rail Board has taken in respect of the contractual commitments relating to intellectual property rights of contractors to Eastleigh Rail Maintenance Ltd. in order to complete the privatisation contract of Eastleigh Rail Maintenance Ltd.; [24044]

(3) what plans the British Rail Board has to enter into contractual commitments relating to intellectual property rights as a consequence of the privatisation process of Eastleigh Rail Maintenance Ltd.; [24043]

(4) what is the cost to the British Rail Board entering into contractual commitments relating to intellectual property rights as a consequence of the privatisation process of Eastleigh Rail Maintenance Ltd. [24042]

Mr. Watts: The British Railways Board is taking steps to ensure that the BR Maintenance Ltd. depots, including Eastleigh, are transferred to the private sector with adequate access to intellectual property rights. The terms of sale and purchase contracts, both in relation to such rights and generally, are a matter of commercial confidence between the BR Board and purchasers.

London-Tilbury-Southend Line

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions over the past 12 months services have been interrupted on the London-Tilbury-Southend line due to broken rail track; and if he will make a statement. [24496]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack informs me that services on the London-Tilbury-Southend line have been affected by broken rails on seven occasions during the past 12 months.

A303

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 27 March, Official Report, column 510, when he will announce the date for the start of the round-table conference on improvements to the A303 at Stonehenge; and who will be its chairman. [24687]

Mr. Watts: I will announce the arrangements for a conference including the name of the chairman later in the year.

M65 (Protestors)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which contractor was awarded the contract to clear the protestors involved with the M65 extension; what was the cost of the work undertaken; and whether the contract was subject to competitive tendering. [24403]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Ms Joan Walley, dated 17 May 1995:

Mr. John Watts has asked me to write in reply to your Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport, which contractor was awarded the contract to clear the protestors involved with the M65 extension; what was the cost of the work undertaken; and whether the contract was subject to competitive tendering.

I assume your question refers to the eviction of protestors from Stanworth Woods on the line of the M65 which took place between 1 and 5 May. This action was entirely the responsibility of the Under-Sheriff of Lancashire. He was accompanied by teams of bailiffs and specialist climbers. The Under-Sheriff directly recruited these teams and there was no involvement by the Highways Agency. The Under-Sheriff will in due course submit a bill to the Treasury Solicitor for the costs he has incurred. The Treasury Solicitor will arrange payment on behalf of the Agency.

The main contractor for the scheme is the Alfred McAlpine-AMEC joint venture. They employ Group 4 Total Security as a security sub-contractor. In accordance with the Agency's current requirements Group 4 were appointed after quotations were obtained from three security firms. During the eviction process Group 4 guards were present, but took no part in the actual evictions. Their job was merely to keep the site secure after the protestors had been evicted. The cost to the Agency of security and other contractor expenses for the week (but excluding the Under-Sheriff's costs) is estimated at some £100,000.

Driving Standards Agency

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the full cost of his Department, the Driving Standards Agency and the Treasury of the recent market test of the Driving Standards Agency booking service and list the costs according to consultancies, implementation costs, the establishment of residual functions, accommodation and staffing costs including the costs of redundancies and recruitment; [24426]

(2) what is his estimate of the short and long-term savings which will be made as a result of the market test of the Driving Standards Agency booking service; [24427]

(3) if he will place in the Library a copy of the successful bid for the Driving Standards Agency booking service. [24425]

Mr. Norris: These are operational matters for the Driving Standards Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from B. L. Herdan to Ms Joan Walley, dated 17 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to the following questions concerning the recent Market Test of the Agency's regional booking service.

The costs of the market test exercise up to the announcement of the result were: consultancies £76,647 and staff time and effort £148,000. The implementation exercise has commenced but it is too early to assess the actual costs of redundancies, recruitment and the reorganisation of the residual functions.

The In-House Bid proposals will provide a saving of £1.3 million over the three years of the contract. The anticipated savings over 10 years of implementing the In-House Bid are £5.2 million.

No. The submission made by the successful bidder contains information which is commercial in confidence.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff are employed in the Scottish booking office of the Driving Standards Agency; how many of them will transfer to Newcastle if the office is relocated there; and what will be the cost to the Exchequer of these transfer and of any voluntary redundancy or early retirement packages taken up because of the relocation decision. [24277]

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for the Driving Standards Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from B. L. Herdan to Mr. John McAllion, dated 17 May 1995.

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the staff in the Scottish Booking Office.

At present 17 staff are employed in the Booking Office in Edinburgh. None of these staff are expected to transfer with the work to the Newcastle office. Local transfers to other Government Department sin the Edinburgh area have already been agreed for 4 staff and similar transfers are being sought for those remaining.

Two members of staff have sought voluntary early retirement at a total cost of £18,000 compensation. Full estimates of these costs for any remaining staff cannot be given until discussions with other Departments on transfers are complete.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many driving tests were booked through the Scottish booking office of the Driving Standards Agency in each of the past three years; [24275]

(2) what is the annual cost of running the (a) the Scottish booking office and (b) the Newcastle office of the Driving Standards Agency; and how many driving tests are booked through each office annually; [24278]

(3) whom he consulted on his proposal to relocate the Scottish booking office of the Driving Standards Agency to Newcastle; how many responses he received as a result; and how many of them supported the relocation. [24276]

Mr. Norris: These are operational matters for the Driving Standards Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from B. L. Herdan to Mr. John McAllion, dated 17 May 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions concerning the relocation of the driving tests booking responsibility in Scotland from Edinburgh to Newcastle.

The number of applications dealt with by the Agency's Booking Office in Scotland in each of the past three years was, 1992/93 156,594, 1993/94 153,625 and 1994/95 157,004.

The cost of running the office in Haymarket House, Edinburgh during 1995/96 is £119,008 or £268.58 per m2. This takes account of a rent free first quarter agreed when the Agency moved into the accommodation last year. For 1996/97 this would rise to £134,090 or £302.62 per m2. The cost for Westgate House, Newcastle is £212,182 or £226.93 per m2. These do not include staffing costs.

The number of driving tests booked through each office varies from year to year. During the period 1 April 1994–31 March 1995 the office in Edinburgh dealt with 157,004 applications, whilst Newcastle dealt with 234,190 applications.

There is no requirement under the Market Testing guidance to undertake a consultation exercise on proposals in bids. Since the result of the Market Test was announced some 33 items of correspondence have been received opposing the decision; no correspondence has been received supporting the decision.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will publish his response to the judgment of the Colonel Owen case on compensation for those affected by public works with special reference to motorways; and if he will make a statement. [24364]

Mr. Watts: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave my right hon. Friend the Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Sir J. Stanley) on 23 March, Official Report, column 317.

M42

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will announce the date for the conclusion of the public inquiry on the proposed widening of the M42; and if he will make a statement; [24363]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to reply.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Iain Mills, dated 17 May 1995.

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport, when he will announce the date for the conclusion of the public inquiry on the proposed widening of the M42; and if he will make a statement.

The Highways Agency have yet to put forward their recommendations to the Secretary of State on the options for widening following last year's public exhibitions. We are still considering carefully all the issues raised.

The question of a public inquiry would not arise until the Secretary of State had announced his preferred option and the Agency had published draft Orders for the widening to which statutory objections have been received.

Roads Programme Director

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of whether all rules relating to outside business appointments have been met following the appointment of the former roads programme director to the company Ove-Arup and Partners; if advice has been sought from the Cabinet Office; and if he will make a statement. [24429]

Mr. Norris: The rules relating to outside business appointments were fully complied with prior to the appointment of the former roads programme director to the company Ove-Arup and Partners. The appointment was referred to the Cabinet Office and the relevant trade associations were also content.

Ferries

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will arrange a trial of the dryshod evacuation of (a) 500, (b) 1,000 and (c) 2,000 passengers from roll on/roll off ferries. [24484]

Mr. Norris [holding reply 16 May 1995]: This is an operational matter for the Coastguard Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 17 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question as the question deals with an operational matter, for which I have responsibility as Chief Executive.

HM Coastguard carries out regular ferry exercises. These exercises normally involve the evacuation of large numbers of passengers and crew and their succour ashore.

Nine such exercises have taken place in the last two years. Further exercises are planned this year, but none of them involve more than 500 "passengers".

I am considering whether the plans for exercises in future years could include one involving larger numbers of passengers.

Motorways

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made on the affect on accident levels of (a) motorway lane closures and (b) motorway lighting. [24486]

Mr. John Watts [holding reply for 16 May]: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from L. Haynes to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 17 May 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport, what assessment he has made on the affect on accident levels of (a) motorway lane closures and (b) motorway lighting.

Recent studies have shown that the accident rate at motorway lane closures due to road works is higher than the rate on unrestricted carriageways, although the increased rate is less than on any other category of road. Studies have also shown that lighting can reduce the after dark accident rate on trunk roads and motorways by an average of 30%.

The Highways Agency seeks to minimise accidents on motorways by applying, amongst other techniques, mandatory 50mph speed limits at roadworks enforced by speed detection cameras, and by providing lighting where appropriate and environmentally acceptable. These measures have met with success, but research and innovation are continuing with a view to improve safety further.

ENVIRONMENT

Open Spaces

17. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure the provision of more open spaces in built-up areas; and if he will make a statement. [23207]

Sir Paul Beresford: We fully recognise the importance of open space for amenity and recreation and our planning policy guidance encourages its provision.

Council House Sales

20. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council houses have been sold to sitting tenants in England since May 1979. [23210]

Mr. Curry: Over 1.42 million tenants bought their homes from English local authorities and new towns between April 1979 and December 1994.

Homelessness, Leicester

21. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the number of homeless people in the city of Leicester. [23211]

Mr. Curry: A total of 1,305 households were accepted as statutorily homeless by Leicester city council during 1994.

Construction Industry

22. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the prospects for the construction industry. [23212]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Construction output increased by 3 per cent. last year. British firms are doing well abroad and industry forecasts point to continuing modest growth this year and in the future.

Defence Jobs, Dorset

23. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans his Department has to increase resources to local government in Dorset to help it to cope with the economic effects of defence job losses. [23213]

Mr. Curry: Standard spending assessments use the most up-to-date information available to take account of changes in economic conditions.

In addition, South Dorset is getting £2.7 million over five years from the single regeneration budget in connection with the closure of the Portland naval base. It is also eligible for KONVER funding.

Eco-labelling

24. Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about eco-labelling. [23214]

Sir Paul Beresford: I am pleased to report that since my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment intervened at the October Environment Council over the continuing delays with this European Community scheme, considerable progress has been made. In all, there are eight product groups for which criteria have been established; including soil improvers, tissue paper, kitchen rolls, household detergents, paints, varnishes and lightbulbs, which significantly improves the prospects for a range of eco-labelled goods being available in the shops later this year. Further speedy progress is anticipated.

Office for London

25. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he proposes to make the Government Office for London open to public scrutiny. [23215]

Mr. Gummer: The Government Office for London is responsible to Ministers, who are answerable to Parliament, in the same way as other parts of the civil service.

Urban Regeneration, Hackney

26. Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to visit Hackney to discuss urban regeneration with the new council leadership. [23216]

Mr. Curry: I visited Hackney 6 March 1995.

New Houses

27. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on new housing starts in the latest quarter for which figures are available. [23217]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: There were 30,200 private enterprise housing starts in England in the first quarter of this year.

City Pride

28. Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to extend the City Pride initiative. [23218]

33. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to extend the City Pride initiative. [23223]

Mr. Gummer: Birmingham, London and Manchester have made tremendous progress in pursuing City Pride. We will look at what they have achieved before extending the initiative.

SSSIs, East Anglia

30. Mr. Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sites of special scientific interest in Norfolk and in Suffolk have been damaged in each of the past five years. [23220]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested for years 1989–90 to 1991–92 is as follows:

Year	Norfolk	Suffolk
1989–90	2	7
1990–91	2	4
1991–92	7	3

These figures do not reflect the on-going and cumulative damage.

Change were made in 1992 to the method of recording of damage to reflect continuing and cumulative effects. The information for years 1992–93 and 1993–94 reflect this as follows:

Year	Norfolk	Suffolk
1993–94	21	4

Urban Regeneration

31. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the total Government spending on regenerating inner cities. [23221]

Mr. Curry: Economic, social and physical regeneration is supported through main programme expenditure by several Government Departments. This is supplemented by targeted programmes which have been brought together into the single regeneration budget. The SRB will fund more than £1.3 billion of regeneration work in 1995–96 in inner city and other areas.

The SRB challenge fund reflects the Government's commitment to encourage local councils, the private sector and community groups to work together in partnership to develop comprehensive strategies which address all of an areas's fundamental problems and opportunities.

Housing Costs (Young People)

32. Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research information he has on the number of young people living with their parents who are unable to find affordable alternative accommodation. [23222]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: My Department commissioned research in this area in 1990. A copy of the research report, "Shared accommodation in England 1990", is in the House of Commons Library.

Thames Gateway

34. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the relationship between the Thames Gateway scheme and local government reorganisation in Essex. [23224]

Mr. Curry: An integrated approach to regeneration will be required to secure the objectives for the Thames Gateway. We wish to consider whether unitary authorities offer advantages, for this purpose, over the two-tier system. This is one of the reasons why we are referring some authorities in the Thames Gateway area, including Thurrock in Essex, to the Local Government Commission for fresh reviews.

Nuclear Power

35. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list his Department's responsibilities in the operation of the nuclear power industry. [23225]

Mr. Atkins: Under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993, my Department—together with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food—is responsible for authorising the disposal of radioactive waste from nuclear licensed sites.

Council Housing

36. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authority houses have been built in England and Wales in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [23226]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Local authorities in England and Wales completed about 1,000 dwellings in the 12 months from April 1994 to March 1995.

39. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what funding is available in this financial year for the improvement of council housing estates. [23229]

Mr. Curry: Under the housing investment programme and other programmes, over £1.2 billion has been allocated to local authorities for 1995–96; a number of the programmes lever in additional resources from the private sector.

Local authorities also fund capital expenditure on housing from usable capital receipts and revenue contributions to capital.

It is up to each local authority to decide how to use its allocation on the basis of local needs.

Council Tax

37. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received about the principle of council tax capping. [23227]

Mr. Gummer: I have received a number of representations about the principle of council tax capping.

Beaches

38. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in achieving cleaner beaches; and if he will make a statement. [23228]

Mr. Atkins: Considerable progress has been made. Compliance with the relevant coliform bacteria standards of the EC directive has risen from 56 per cent. in 1987 to 82 per cent. in 1994. I expect further improvements as the remaining schemes in the clean-up programme are completed.

Air Quality

40. Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to improve air quality. [23230]

Mr. Atkins: I intend shortly to bring forward amendments to the Environment Bill implementing the proposals set out earlier this year in "Air Quality: Meeting the Challenge".

Water Pollution

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the capital expenditure of the water industry in providing equipment designed to remove nitrates and pesticides; and if he will make a statement. [23208]

Mr. Atkins: Information published by the Director General of Water Services estimates that £128 million has been spent on removing nitrates up to 1993–94. Similar information was not collected for the removal of pesticides. I estimate that around £430 million has been spent on this up to 1993–94.

Birds Directive

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sites the UK has designated under the EC birds directive. [23219]

Mr. Atkins: A total of 105 special protection areas have been designated in the United Kingdom. Further designations are expected shortly.

Green Belt

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on green belt expansion, with special reference to Sheffield. [24361]

Sir Paul Beresford: National planning policy for green belts is set out in "Planning Policy Guidance Note 2". This states that existing green belt boundaries should be altered only in exceptional circumstances. The Sheffield unitary development fund, which is currently being considered at a local public inquiry, proposes a net addition to the green belt of 53 hectares—0.6 per cent. of the total area. It is for the inspector conducting the UDP inquiry to consider the appropriateness of the proposed changes to the green belt and make his recommendations to the city council, who will then be responsible for deciding whether to accept them and reflect them in the final version of the UDP.

Water Rates

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what protection consumers have if a water authority refuses to change business water rates to domestic water rates, in cases where a business property has been changed to a home. [24037]

Mr. Atkins: It is for each water company to decide the basis of charging for water in its area. If the occupant considers that the latest rateable value is no longer appropriate, the occupant has the option of switching to a measured basis of charge. Alternatively, the water company may agree to charge on the basis of a domestic rateable value if such a value is available.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment to what extent water authorities are required to take account of changes since the last valuation of a property in calculating water rates; and what proposal he has to improve the situation. [24035]

Mr. Atkins: Where water charges are based on rateable values, the latest available valuations are used by the water companies. Where the occupant considers the subsequent changes to the property render the latest valuation inappropriate, the occupant has the option of switching to a measured basis of charge.

Units of Measurement Directive

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice his Department has given to local planning authorities and applicants for planning permission on the impact since 1 January of the units of measurement directive. [24202]

Sir Paul Beresford: The interpretation of the directive is ultimately for the courts. However, our advice in response to inquiries is that any risk of successful legal challenge is avoided if a metric conversion is substituted for any imperial measurements in a planning application. The imperial measurements may also be retained as a supplementary indication.

Construction Contracts

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to make a statement on his Department's policy on a construction contracts Bill. [24019]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: My Department is currently consulting on proposals for possible legislative provisions arising out of the recommendations in Sir Michael Latham's report, "Construction the Team". The results of the consultation process will be announced in due course.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress he has made in implementing the recommendations in Sir Michael Latham's report, "Construction the Team", on legislation for construction contracts. [24809]

Mr. Gummer: I have today published a consultation document entitled, "Fair Construction Contracts" containing proposals for taking forward the recommendations in "Constructing the Team". These proposals are designed to help reduce the number of disputes in the industry and improve its performance.

Our paper contains proposals for rapid resolution of disputes, limitation of the right of set-off of debts, encouragement of prompt payment and protection against insolvency. It will be widely distributed and we expect both factual comment and informed views from all sectors of the construction industry.

Copies of the document have been placed in the Library of the House.

Home Loss Payments

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he has given to raising the ceiling for compensation levels for those tenants who are required to leave their property; what representations he has received concerning concerns about the present compensation ceiling; what formula was used to set it; what power local authorities have to set compensation limits to suit local conditions; and if he will consider allowing more discretion for local authorities to decide their own compensation ceiling. [24029]

Sir Paul Beresford: The current level of home loss payment for permanently displaced tenants is £1,500. This level was set during the passage of the Planning and Compensation Act 1991. There are no immediate plans to change it.

The new provisions apply to anyone displaced on or after 16 November 1990. Since they came into force, we have received occasional representations, but there has been no widespread pressure to have this level increased.

Prior to the 1991 Act, the amount of home loss payment was calculated as 10 times the rateable value of the dwelling concerned, subject to a minimum payment of £1,200 and a maximum of £1,500. The minimum period of residence prior to displacement in order to qualify for a payment was five years. The 1991 Act fixed the amount payable to tenants at £1,500 and reduced the minimum period of residence to one year.

The amount of the home loss payment for displaced tenants is fixed at £1,500 and there is no provision for local authorities to vary it.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he has issued to local authorities as to the levels of compensation a council should provide to tenants who are obliged to move because of redevelopment; and what specific guidelines he provides in respect of compensation for long-term tenants. [24028]

Sir Paul Beresford: Circular 15/91 on land compensation and compulsory purchase, issued jointly by my Department and the Welsh Office, describes the new provisions for home losses payments included in the Planning and Compensation Act 1991. At paragraph 23, it sets out the level of compensation payable to displaced tenants. These provisions apply to tenants who have been in residence for at least one year before displacement. All such tenants receive a home loss payment of £1,500. In addition, my Department issues a series of booklets called "Land Compensation—Your Rights Explained". Booklet number 1 in the series, "Your Home and Compulsory Purchase", provides further information about home loss payments. It is available free of charge to the public as well as to local authorities.

Housing

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many houses have been built in co-operation with the Housing Corporation in each of the last three years: and if he will make a statement. [24358]

Mr. Curry: The table shows the number of houses built through the Housing Corporation's approved development programme and local authority funding of housing associations supported by housing association grant LA HAG in 1992–93 to 1994–95. The table also shows the number of other lettings provided through the ADP and local authority funding of housing associations, through rehabilitation, shared ownership and sale schemes.

New build
ADP	36,240	35,604	37,925
LA HAG	4,480	5,894	8,487
Total	40,720	41,498	46,412
Other lettings provided
ADP	25,897	20,896	21,039
LA HAG	1,858	2,465	4,073
Total	27,755	23,361	25,112
Total lettings provided	68,475	64,859	71,524

[1] Figures for 1994–95 are estimates.

Water Meters

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many water meters have been installed to date in each region and nationally. [24038]

Mr. Atkins: In 1994–95 the number of metered properties in each region of England and Wales covered by Ofwat's customer service committees was:

Thousands

	Domestic	Non-domestic
Eastern	195	147
Northumbria	15	45
North West	89	169
Central	206	210
Southern	149	102
South West	39	83
Thames	207	257
Wales	37	77
Wessex	62	68
Yorkshire	93	124
Total	1,092	1,282

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in what circumstances a water authority can oblige customers to accept water meters. [24036]

Mr. Atkins: It is for water companies to decide on the most appropriate method of charging for water in their area. Since 1990, most companies have had a policy of metering new or substantially converted domestic properties on a compulsory basis. Most companies also have a policy of metering commercial premises on a compulsory basis. Where companies are extending metering to existing domestic properties they may give customers the option of continuing to pay an unmeasured charge.

Home Energy Efficiency

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many households have been insulated under programmes initiated by the energy efficiency office in each of the last two years in (a) Sheffield and (b) the Sheffield, Hallam constituency; and how many are expected to be insulated in the next year. [24360]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The home energy efficiency scheme pays grants towards the cost of basic insulation measures in the homes of people who are over 60, receive disability living allowance or an income-related benefit. The information requested, based on financial years, is as follows:

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96 (estimated)
Sheffield	3,709	6,139	7,500
Sheffield, Hallam	640	1,059	1,300

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effect of an 8 per cent. cut in electricity prices on CO_2 emissions. [24218]

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given yesterday by my hon. Friend the Minister for Energy and Industry.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what new measures to cut CO_2 emissions as a result of the nuclear review. [24216]

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which my right hon. Friend the Under-Secretary for the Environment, gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Croydon, North-East (Mr. Congdon) on 11 May 1995, Official Report, column 564–65.

Spain

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much subsidy has been given to Spain in each of the last three years from the European Community, for the environment; and what is the forecast of funding to Spain for each of the next three years. [24683]

Sir Paul Beresford: The main sources of Community funding for the environment are the structural and cohesion funds, various research programmes and the LIFE grant fund. The information the department has available is as follows. More detailed information will be available from the European Commission.

a) The Structural Funds: allocations for environmental protection and improvement projects—

Objective 1—1730m ecu for 1994–99 (£1437m)

Objective 2—39.5m ecu for 1994–96 (£32.8m)

Objective 5(b)—Spain has been allocated 664m ecu in total at 1994 prices (£551.5m) for 1994–99. Some of this may be allocated to environmental projects, but we do not have details.

b) The Cohesion Fund

Millions

	Total (ecu)	Environment (ecu)[1]
1993	858.45 (£713.0)	252.08 (£209.37
1994	962.5 (£799.4)	385 (£319.8)
1995	1100 (£913.6)	440 (£365.4)
1996	1,237.5 (£1,027.8)	495 (£411.1)
1997	1,375 (£1,142.0)	550 (£456.8)
1998	1,402.5 (£1,164.9)	561 (£465.9)

[1] There are no guidelines for the breakdown of the Fund between environment and transport projects. Estimates for 1994 onwards are based on the Commission's division of 40 per cent. transport and 60 per cent. environment.

(c) LIFE (Financial Instrument for the Environment)—grants awarded to Spanish projects

1991–93	26 million ecu (£21.6 million)
1994	16 million ecu (£13.3 million)
	expected range 12–15 million ecu each year
1995–97	(£10–12.5 million)

Note:
Conversion rate used: £1 = 1.204 ecu.

Air Pollution, London

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what additional measures he has taken to monitor air pollution in London; and if he will make a statement. [23304]

Mr. Atkins: The Government propose to bring forward by a year completion of their current programme of enhanced urban network sites. Suitable locations for a further nine stations will be installed by the end of 1996, two of which will be in London. Additionally, the Government will seek to integrate three further centrally-funded sites and around 35 local authority sites by the end of 1997. My officials are in contact with the Association of London Government and the South East Institute of public health, which co-ordinate the London air quality monitoring network.

Local Government, Berkshire

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has consulted the Chancellor of the Exchequer about the administrative costs of his proposals for local government reorganisation in Berkshire. [24529]

Mr. Curry: Government decisions are collective.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the additional administrative staff required by the six proposed unitary authorities in Berkshire. [24530]

Mr. Curry: Staffing structures will be a matter for the newly elected councils.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his proposals for the allocation of standard spending assessments to the proposed new unitary authorities in Berkshire. [24531]

Mr. Curry: The standard spending assessments for the new unitary authorities in Berkshire will be calculated on the basis of the services which these authorities provide, using the formulae which are applied to all relevant authorities.

Details of the formulae for 1995–96 are set out in the publication "Standard Spending Assessment handbook, 1995–96" which is available from the Library. Following the review work which we undertake each year with the local authority associations, we will publish our proposals for 1996–97 in the usual way in December.

Local Government, Reading

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he is considering alterations to the boundary of Reading in connection with his proposal that Reading borough council should become a unitary authority. [24528]

Mr. Curry: I have accepted the Local Government Commission's final recommendation that Reading should be a unitary authority on existing borough boundaries.

Urban Development Corporations

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has considered the future of the Birmingham Heartlands and Trafford Park development corporations; and if he will make a statement. [24918]

Mr. Curry: Following representations made by each urban development corporation, I have decided to extend their lifetimes for an additional year to 31 March 1998.

In this extra year, they aim between them to secure some 11,000 additional jobs, build 250 homes and attract about £100 million of private sector investment. They will not be given any additional grant in aid, but will be financed from receipts and by European funding.

For Birmingham Heartlands, the extra year will allow the corporation to oversee the complete redevelopment of the "Star Site" near the M6, as well as the adjacent "String of Pearls" sites.

In Trafford Park, the corporation has already assembled and prepared many sites and attracted over 700 companies into the area; it will now be able to increase yet further the level of inward investment and jobs through marketing all the remaining development opportunities.

The UDC programme will end as planned in March 1998 when all corporations will have been wound up.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made by Government Departments towards the target of improving energy efficiency by 15 per cent. in the five years ending in March 1996. [25184]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The progress of the Departments during 1993–94 is shown in the tables and footnotes. Overall, a 6 per cent. improvement has been achieved which, in the light of increasing demands for energy, represents good progress. I am pleased to note that the performance of my Department shows a 9 per cent. improvement against the standard indicator, with far greater improvements on reducing CO_2 emissions.

Energy management in individual Government Departments is a matter for Ministers responsible for those Departments. The Energy Efficiency Office of my Department provides information on good practice and monitors progress towards the target.

Notes:

1. Progress against each performance indicator (PI) is expressed as a percentage relative to the base year (1990–91) value of the PI in question. The standard indicator is weather—corrected consumption, adjusted for estate changes, and converted to costs at fixed prices (Energy Cost). For the civil estate, estate changes are allowed for by dividing by floor area. For the defence estate, a different procedure is used (see notes to table 2 below). The target is to achieve a 15 per cent. improvement against this indicator by March 1996. Positive figures represent progress, negative figures represent regress.

2. The Energy Cost (£/m²) figure is obtained by weather correcting the energy consumption per unit floor area, and converting to costs using "standard" fuel prices (6p/kWh for electricity and 1.25p/kWh for all fossil fuels). This conversion to money was done to reflect the relative costs of electricity and fossil fuels, and also their relative environmental impact. Fixed prices eliminate the effects of tariff changes, which distort the comparison of annual bills. Normalising by floor area helps overcome problems of changing estate size.

3. The average performance figure for the civil estate cannot be obtained simply by adding together the individual Departmental progress figures and dividing by the number of Departments. This does not allow for the large variations in total consumption. The correct figure can be obtained by calculating the value of the PI for the civil estate as a whole (eg total CO_2 divided by total area), then calculating the reduction relative to the base year value.

4. Some Departments have revised earlier years' figures, which explains some differences from previously published results. Equally, some of this year's figures may be subject to revision.

5. Investment figures relate only to clearly identifiable energy efficiency measures undertaken by Departments. Energy efficiency is also an integral part of all major construction projects, including building refurbishment and plant replacement carried out by Departments. However, separating out the energy efficiency component is not always meaningful; for example, a well designed energy efficient new building may actually cost the same or less than a conventional one.

6. Electricity generated on site, eg Combined Heat and Power, is not included under "electricity": but the input fuel to the generator is, of course, included. This therefore accords appropriate credit for CHP. Heating from the Whitehall District Heating Scheme is included.

7. All departments have greatly increased their use of Information Technology, but have not been allowed to offset the increased use of electricity as a result.

8. Expenditure on energy and investment figures are included for information only and do not form part of the Government estate target.

9. MAFF: Main Estate—Energy consumption has risen, as a result of a large increase in the use of Information Technology and business led demands of Agencies.

10. MAFF: Laboratories—Energy consumption has increased as a result of business led demand, and recent legislation which has required a number of old buildings to be replaced with air-conditioned buildings. Own investment in energy efficiency is included with MAFF Main Estate.

11. Customs and Excise: Progress figures partly reflect a widening of the basis for measurement as the Department overcomes problems with the collation of data. Operational changes have allowed greater use of buildings where Customs and Excise control the energy use instead of paying an energy-inclusive charge; this process is continuing and may affect future figures.

12. Education: Consumption is dominated by its headquarters building. This changed from a largely naturally ventilated building in the base year to a completely air-conditioned one, with a much smaller floor area, in 1991–92. This is the explanation for the large increase against the PI since 1992–93.

13. Environment: QEII Conference Centre is reported separately because of its business led demands.

14. Health: Consumption is dominated by its headquarters building. Since the base year this has changed from a largely naturally ventilated building to a fully air-conditioned one, explaining the large increase against the PI.

15. Home Office Prisons: Improved accommodation standards for prisoners are leading to increases in energy consumption.

16. ODA: Base year is 1991–92.

17. National Heritage: Newly formed in 1992 and moved to its own accommodation in 1993. Full year figures are not therefore available.

18. Scottish Office: Base year is 1991–92.

19. Scottish Courts: Base year is 1991–92.

20. Scottish Prisons: Improved accommodation standards for prisoners are leading to increases in energy consumption.

21. Social Security: DSS workload is increasing, affecting occupancy and offices are occupied for longer hours, increasing the use of energy. Electricity consumption has increased as a result of greater demands on the use of Information Technology, expansion in the use of air-conditioning and the upgrading of lighting levels. For example, electricity consumption has increased by 8 per cent. in the Benefits Agency, by 2 per cent. in ITSA, and by 125 per cent. in the CSA: CSA shows an exceptional increase because of the phased occupancy of buildings between 1992 and 1993 prior to full operation in 1993–94.

Notes:

1. The MOD estate is different in nature from the rest of the Government estate, and has been undergoing more radical changes. It is therefore treated in a slightly different way. In common with other Departments, the MOD has greatly increased its reliance on Information Technology, but in many areas, no allowance has been made for the resulting increases in electricity usage. Full data for years between 1990–91 and 1993–94 are not available, so the table shows a comparison between these two years. Positive figures denote progress, negative ones regress.

2. Floor area data cannot be calculated for the majority of the MOD estate. However, to allow comparisons with data from other Departments adjusted for changes in floor area, a proxy has been used. The figures in columns 1 to 3 have been adjusted by estimating changes in consumption resulting from buildings being added to, or leaving, the estate and making an appropriate adjustment to the gross data for years following the change.

3. Column 1 shows changes, after estate adjustments (see above) and weather correction, in energy consumption. This has been the primary measure used by MOD in its efforts to increase energy efficiency.

4. Column 2 shows changes, after estate adjustments and weather correction, in energy cost at "standard" fuel prices calculated in the same way as the civil estate.

5. Column 3 shows changes, after estate adjustments and weather correction, in carbon dioxide emissions.

6. Column 4 shows changes in total carbon dioxide emissions, after weather correction.

Notes:

1. This shows combined results for the whole of the Government estate based on the data in tables 1 and 2. It is not a simple average of the two, but reflects the proportion of total consumption represented by each part of the estate (see third note to table 1). The Ministry of Defence is the major user of energy on the Government estate, using some 70 per cent. of the energy consumed.

SCOTLAND

Forestry

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many hectares of Forestry Commission woodlands will be disposed of between now and 2000 in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland; and what is the anticipated income from these sales. [23403]

Sir Hector Monro: As announced in the Government's expenditure plans 1995–96 to 1997–98, the Forestry Commission plans to sell 15,000 hectares of forest land in Britain in each of the next three years, and to receive some £60 million from the sale of forests and surplus properties. The proportion that will be sold in each of the three countries will depend on the state of the market, but the Commission estimates that around 70 per cent. will be sold in Scotland and 15 per cent. each in England and Wales. As yet, no firm plans have been made for sales in subsequent years.

Unemployment

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of (a) men and (b) women aged 40 years and over who are out of work. [23376]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 15 May 1995]: In Scotland, in January 1995, there were 55,166 males and 15,717 females aged 40 or over who were unemployed.

Sheltered Housing

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will commission a study to assess the need for sheltered housing to allow people who have grown elderly in peripheral housing schemes and rural areas to remain within their own communities; and if he will make a statement. [24101]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The assessment of demand for sheltered housing is a matter for local housing authorities, working in partnership, as appropriate, with Scottish Homes, housing associations and other housing agencies. This assessment should take into account whether elderly people wish to remain within their communities, and what type of provision is appropriate in local circumstances.

Judiciary

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the requirements and qualifications for appointment to the judiciary in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [24097]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The minimum qualifications for appointment to the judiciary in Scotland are set down in a number of statutes, most particularly the Act of Union 1707, the Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act 1971, the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1990, and the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990.

Free School Meals

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the percentage of pupils entitled to free school meals in each year since 1975 until the latest year for which figures are available in each Scottish region; and if he will make a statement. [24063]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on entitlement to free school meals has been collected in the annual January census of school meals since 1989. The available information is given in the table:

Percentage of pupils on the registers of education authority schools entitled to free meals, at January

Industrial Development Advisory Board

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will instruct the Scottish Industrial Development advisory board to lay annual reports before Parliament. [24191]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 15 May 1995]: Sections 11 and 15 of the Industrial Development Act 1982 require an annual report to be laid before Parliament on the exercise of powers under the Act during the year: this is presented jointly by the Secretaries of State for Trade and Industry, for Scotland and for Wales. The report contains commentaries by the Industrial Development advisory boards, including one from the chairman of the Scottish Industrial development advisory board.

Close Circuit Television

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will now support and contribute towards the introduction of closed circuit television in Paisley: and if he will make a statement. [24070]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government remain firmly of the view that funding for the installation of CCTV in Scotland should continue to be provided by joint ventures involving local businesses, local authorities and other groups who derive a direct benefit from the resource. I am glad to hear that a tender has been accepted to provide a CCTV system in Paisley, with substantial public-sector funding.

Emergency Planning

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he has taken to ensure that emergency planning teams will be adequately financed and staffed in future years; and if he will make a statement. [24264]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Civil defence grant will continue to be paid to local authorities, police forces and fire brigades, in support of planning which is aimed at developing an effective response to a wide range of emergencies, irrespective of their cause.

The grant is seen as a contribution towards emergency planning and its current total level is expected to be maintained.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultations he has had with the emergency planning teams to discuss the effects of local government reorganisation. [24265]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office wrote to chief executives, offering to discuss emergency planning arrangements in a revised local government structure, in April 1994. This offer was not accepted at the time due to the position of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities with regard to the then Local Government etc. (Scotland) Bill.

Since the convention's position was relaxed, officials have discussed the matter with regional emergency planning officers in December and will again do so in early June. They have also met representatives of chief executives in February and numerous discussions have taken place at local level during emergency co-ordinating group meetings and various seminars.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he has taken to ensure that emergency planning is maintained after the completion of local government reorganisation. [24263]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Each of the new authorities will be responsible for civil defence and civil emergency planning arrangements. It is up to each to decide how its responsibilities will be delivered, and there are various powers under local government legislation, including section 58 of the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Act 1994, which provide scope for joint arrangements or other options to be considered. Grant to local authorities, police forces and fire brigades will continue.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the names of those persons selected to be the chief executives of the new unitary councils giving their academic and technical qualifications where appropriate and their current employment and employers; and if he will make a statement. [23035]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 16 May 1995]: The appointment of chief executives—strictly speaking heads of paid service—is entirely a matter for the new councils. Information on appointments made to date is given in the table.

Suicides

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the most recent available percentage suicide rate for employed 18 to 65-year-olds in Scotland. [24554]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not available. When a death is registered the registrar obtains information on the last known occupation of the deceased but not on whether he or she was employed at the time of death.

Planning Inquiries

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions in the last 10 years for which information is available part-time reporters from outside Scotland have been appointed to conduct planning inquiries. [24542]

Mr. Kynoch: None. In April of this year, however, as a temporary measure, five recently retired planning inspectors from the Department of Environment were added to the list of part-time reporters on whom the Secretary of State could call to determine planning appeals submitted under the Town and Country Planning (Scotland) Act 1972. The small number of appeals which have been allocated to the planning inspectors have all been for determination under the written submissions procedure. No public local inquiry appeals have been allocated to these additional reporters.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the remuneration of, and what are the rates of expenses paid to, part-time reporters when they conduct planning inquiries. [24544]

Mr. Kynoch: The information requested is set out in table:

Daily Fee	130.00
Hourly Rate	17.96
24 Hour Subsistence	62.40
Day Subsistence
Over 5 hours	4.25
Over 10 hours	9.30

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he gives to proficiency in Scots law when appointing part-time reporters in planning inquiries. [24539]

Mr. Kynoch: When making new appointments to the list of part-time reporters, careful consideration is given to the suitability of the candidate. A working knowledge of Scottish planning law, and in particular, development control procedures, is one of the main pre-requisites for appointment. Newly appointed reporters receive induction training and supporting documents, and advice is available on points of law.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of planning inquiries conducted by part-time reporters in the last 10 years for which information is available. [24540]

Mr. Kynoch: This information is not recorded.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the names and qualifications of all part-time reporters who have conducted planning inquiries in the last 10 years for which information is available. [24541]

Mr. Kynoch: This information is not recorded.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a list of part-time reporters from which appointments are made to conduct planning inquiries. [24543]

WALES

Foxes

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many fox destruction clubs or societies are registered in Wales; what is the level of assistance they currently receive; what guidelines he issues on how these clubs and societies destroy foxes; what guidelines he issues on the numbers of foxes to be destroyed; how the fox population is assessed; and if he will make a statement. [24127]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There is no requirement for fox destruction clubs or societies to be registered with the Welsh Office and no financial assistance is provided to such organisations. Responsibility for the control of foxes rests with individual owners and occupiers to whom advice is provided through ADAS on request.

Female Employment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of women employed in Alyn and Deeside, Clwyd, and Wales (a) full-time and (b) part-time; and what measures he proposes to get the long-term unemployed back to work. [24194]

Mr. Redwood: The latest available information on the number of female employees in Alyn and Deeside is from the 1991 census of employment. This, together with the comparable data for Clwyd and Wales, is given in the following table:

Female employees in employment—September 1991

	Thousands
	Full-time	Part-time
Alyn and Deeside district	6.5	4.5
Clwyd	34.5	31.3
Wales	250.2	220.1

The Government's policies are aimed at creating the right economic conditions for success—low inflation, sound public finances, markets that work properly, and a minimal regulatory and tax burden on business. That recipe is promoting sustained economic growth.

The training and enterprise councils and the Employment Service provide a wide range of measures to help the long-term unemployed back into work. They include the training for work programme, restart, the job interview guarantee scheme, Workstart and community action.

Employment (Young People)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what special measures he will adopt to give employment to young people. [24196]

Mr. Redwood: Our policies aim to create the right economic conditions for success; low inflation, sound public finances; markets that work properly; and a minimal regulatory and tax burden on business. That recipe is promoting sustained economic growth and higher living standards, from which all age groups will benefit.

Good education and training and sound careers advice are fundamental to a young person's employment prospects. My plan to raise achievement, strengthen standards and widen choice and opportunity is set out in "People and Prosperity: an Agenda for Action", which was published on 20 March 1995.

Minority Languages

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 7 March to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd), Official Report, column 152, when Government Departments with an interest in the Council of Europe charter for regional or minority languages will have completed their consideration of its implications; and if he will make a statement. [24754]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The decision whether to sign the charter raises a number of different issues, each of which we must consider fully.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Housing Executive

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultations have taken place about the amalgamation of the two Housing Executive offices in Newry and the reduced opening hours for the Kilkeel office; and if he will make a statement. [24041]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, but the chief executive has advised me that consultations have taken place with staff and their representatives, the Northern Ireland Public Service Alliance, on the proposed amalgamation of Newry 1 and Newry 2 district offices. In addition, Housing executive officials will consult with Newry and Mourne district council on 7 June 1995.

The Housing Executive's regional director has discussed with local councillors the reduced opening hours for the Kilkeel office. A new sub-office will be opening in nearby Annalong in the late summer to coincide with the reduced working hours in the Kilkeel office.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Churchill Papers

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he had made to take action to preserve the Churchill papers intact for the nation before the National Heritage Memorial Fund decided to make national lottery funds available for this purpose. [23693]

Mr. Dorrell: The Government had commenced proceedings in the High Court with the object of preserving the papers intact for the nation.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage who assessed the historical significance of each of the items in the Churchill papers. [23178]

Mr. Dorrell: Following its normal procedures, the NHMF took advice on the content of the archive from the British Library and the Royal Commission on Historical Manuscripts as statutory heritage agencies. Individual historians and other relevant institutions were also consulted.

Cinemas

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage which listed buildings in England are used as cinemas. [23537]

Mr. Dorrell: The use of listed cinemas can change, and listed buildings built for another purpose may subsequently have been converted into cinemas. My Department does not monitor such changes. However, English Heritage has provided the following details of listed buildings which it believes are currently used as cinemas:

Pre-1916 Cinemas
Electric, King's Quay Street, Harwich
Scala, Market Place, Ilkeston
Picture House, Bridge Street, Stafford
Picture Playhouse, Market Place, Beverley Dome, Worthing

Cockpit Theatre

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what his Department's plans are for the Cockpit theatre, London NW8; what representations he has received regarding the future of the theatre; and if he will make a statement. [24494]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 16 May 1995]: The Cockpit theatre is owned by the City of Westminster college, and has been made available for the use of the Soho Theatre Company. I have received one representation about the future of the Soho Theatre Company at the Cockpit theatre. That, however, is entirely a matter for negotiation between the company and the college.

Windsor Castle

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the responsibilities of his Department's fire, health and safety branch following the Windsor castle fire. [24671]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 May 1995]: My Department's branch which deals with fire, health and safety is responsible for precautions in the Department's own offices. It does not bear responsibility for premises occupied by other bodies which the Department sponsors or for which it provides funds. For the occupied royal palaces which are funded by the grant in aid these responsibilities lie with the royal household's own fire and safety branch which was strengthened in accordance with the recommendations of the Bailey report.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the total cost of repair of the fire damage at Windsor castle; if he will list the (a) sources and (b) amounts of the contributions to the cost of the repairs; and when he expects the work to be completed. [24672]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 May 1995]: It is currently estimated that the total cost of the repair of the fire damage at Windsor Castle will be about £35 million, including fees and VAT. Some £24.5 million of the cost will be met from the opening of Buckingham palace and charging for entry to the Windsor castle precincts, with the balance of £10.5 million from the grant in aid allocation for the maintenance of the occupied royal palaces. The work is progressing well and is expected to be completed to schedule by mid-1998.

Royal Palaces

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if a full inventory now exists of what is owned by the state in all royal palaces. [24670]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 May 1995]: The royal collection is responsible for works of art and other items held by the Crown on behalf of the nation. The royal household is completing an inventory of these items which is scheduled for completion by the end of 1997. For other items such as office furniture, computers, vehicles and so on inventories are currently maintained.

London Film Commission

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage whether he intends to support the London Film Commission initiative. [23691]

Mr. Dorrell: My Department has consistently supported the efforts by the British Film Commission and the London Film Commission initiative to establish a film commission for London.

Play Areas (Safety)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what guidelines he has issued to local authorities to encourage the provision of safety surfacing on play areas; what special financial provision he has made available to local authorities to encourage and enable them to meet this need; and if he will make a statement. [24089]

Mr. Sproat: In January 1992, the joint publication "Playground Safety Guidelines" was issued by the Department of Education and Science, the Welsh Office and the National Children's Play and Recreation Unit. This publication provides guidance to playground providers and managers on play safety issues, including safety surfacing, and was sent to all local authorities in England. The publication was updated and reprinted in 1993.

No specific provision is made within the standard spending assessment for the funding of play areas, although provision for services for children is included within the education and social services assessment, and for recreation within the general services assessment.

Rugby League

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he has (a) requested or (b) examined a copy of the proposed contract between News International and the Rugby Football League with regard to the sport's television coverage. [24137]

Mr. Dorrell: No. Contracts for the television coverage of sport or any other subject are entirely a matter between rights holders and broadcasters.

Sport

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he intends to publish his Department's White Paper on sport. [24139]

Mr. Sproat: We intend to publish the sport policy statement early in the summer.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Severe Disability Premium

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on what date he petitioned the House of Lords for leave to appeal against the decision of the Court of Appeal in the Bate case, regarding eligibility for payment of the severe disability premium. [24018]

Mr. Roger Evans: The petition was lodged on 9 January 1995.

Expatriate Pensioners

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 4 May, Official Report, columns 307-8, what is the total number of United Kingdom expatriates receiving uprated United Kingdom pensions in (a) Spain and (b) Portugal; which Government pay the cost of these upratings; and what considerations underlie the different treatment of pensioners in those two countries and in the four Commonwealth countries referred to in his answer. [24286]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In January 1995, UK pensions were in payment to 28,097 beneficiaries in Spain and 3,208 in Portugal. The entire cost of these pensions is met by the UK Government. Uprated pensions became payable in Spain in April 1975, and in Portugal in October 1979, by virtue of reciprocal social security agreements with those countries. Since 1 January 1986, uprated UK pensions have been payable in Spain and Portugal under the EC regulations on social security for migrant workers. The UK has no similar agreements with the four Commonwealth countries referred to in my previous reply.

Occupational Injuries Report

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has received reports on the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council's investigations into hand arm vibration syndrome, disorders of the knee and occupational rhinitis; and if he will make a statement. [24843]

Mr. Hague: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security has today laid copies of the council's reports before Parliament—Cm 2842, 2843, and 2844. We shall give them careful consideration and respond to the council's recommendations once the medical, administrative and financial issues raised by the reports have been examined.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects the Government to publish their response to the Third Report of the Select Committee on the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration published on 20 March about the Child Support Agency. [24945]

Mr. Burt: The Government's response is set out in "The Child Support Agency—Reply by the Government to the Third Report of the Select Committee on the Parliamentary Commissioner Session 1994–95", Cm2865, published today.

Benefits Agency Nursery, Brixton

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to visit St. Paul's Angels Benefits Agency nursery, Brixton, before its proposed closure. [24708]

Mr. Roger Evans: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no such plans.

Mortgage Interest

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people received assistance with mortgage interest payments in each year since 1990; and what is the current average level of assistance, by standard economic region. [23028]

Mr. Roger Evans [holding answer 9 May 1995]: The information is set out in the table. This shows the numbers of cases and average amount of mortgage interest considered in the assessment of each year since 1990, broken down by region and whether half or full mortgage interest was in payment at the time of the inquiry.

Source:

Notes:

1. Numbers of cases have been rounded to the nearest thousand. Average amounts are correct to the nearest penny.
2. The regions shown are those which have been used, historically, for social security purposes and are identified by an area code which is given to each claim.

Benefit Statistics

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will list, for the last available year, the total amount of expenditure on (a) income support, (b) housing benefit, (c) council tax benefit and (d) family credit given to (i) families containing one or more adults in work and (ii) people in work with no dependants, expressing the data by benefit office area; [23318]

(2) if he will list, for the last available year, the total amount of expenditure on (a) income support, (b) housing benefit, (c) council tax benefit and (d) family credit given to (i) families containing one or more adults in work and (ii) people in work with no dependants, expressing the data by region; [23319]

(3) if he will list the number of (a) families containing one or more adults in work and (b) people in work with no dependants receiving (i) income support, (ii) housing benefit, (iii) council tax benefit and (iv) family credit, expressing the data by (i) region and (ii) benefit office area for the latest year possible for which figures are available. [23648]

Mr. Hague [holding answer 10 May 1995]: Information cannot be provided in the precise form requested. No information is available for benefit office areas and information for family credit is available only for social security administrative regions. The available information is shown in the tables:

3. Estimated annual expenditure is the total number of recipients multiplied by the average weekly award multiplied by 52 weeks.

HEALTH

Cancer Treatment

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in which NHS hospitals high dose marrow ablative chemotherapy with autologous bone marrow rescue is available. [23147]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

It is for clinicians to decide upon the most appropriate form of treatment for each individual patient.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many specialists in NHS hospitals have dealt with the condition known as PNET; how many of these are paediatric specialists; and what has been the success rate in each case; [23149]

(2) how many specialists in NHS hospitals have dealt with the condition known as glioblastoma multiforme;

how many of these are paediatric specialists; and what has been the success rate in each case; [22148]

(3) how many paediatric centres in the United Kingdom currently use high-dose chemotherapy with bone marrow rescue in the treatment of children with malignant brain tumours; [23146]

(4) how many specialists in NHS hospitals have dealt with the condition known as Li Fraumeni syndrome; how many of these are paediatric specialists; and what has been the success rate in each case. [23150]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

However, this is an area where doctors are taking a strong lead in auditing the process and outcome of their care. The United Kingdom children cancer study group, which recently met Department of Health officials, registers cases of childhood cancers treated by its members and acts as an organisation for promoting professional standards in the field of paediatric oncology. Childhood tumours are fortunately uncommon, and some types are rare. The UKCCSG is therefore planning a service to help doctors find the best place to treat rare childhood tumours.

The recent report of the chief medical officer's expert advisory group on cancer recommends increasing specialisation and sub-specialisation in cancer to enhance outcomes.

Hospitals

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list each hospital closure referred to the Secretary of State in the last 16 years; [23597]

2) how many hospitals closures were referred to the Secretary of State for approval due to community health council objection in each year since 1979; and what was the decision of the Secretary of State in each case. [23596]

Mr. Malone: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 18 April, column 120 for a list of proposed closures and changes of use considered by Ministers following community health council objection for the period from January 1992 to December 1994. Information before this could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Ministers approved all the proposals except the proposed closure of Ponteland and Lemington hospitals, Newcastle.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will provide official figures for the number of hospitals opened and closed since 1 April 1991. [23593]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date her approval ceased to be required for opening or closing a hospital. [23595]

Mr. Malone: Ministerial approval has never been required for the opening of a hospital. Ministers continue to make final decisions on closures when they are contested by the local community health council.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) on what date the decision not to collect information centrally on hospital closures and openings was made; and if she will make a statement; [23591]

(2) if she will consider reintroducing centrally held information on hospital closures and openings including size, type and location of the hospital in question. [23592]

Mr. Malone: The collection of information centrally on hospital closures ceased during 1991. Information on hospital openings has never been collected centrally. We have no plans to change these arrangements.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals there were in England by region and in total on 1 April. [23598]

Mr. Malone: Information on the number of hospitals in England is not available for 1 April 1995. For previous years I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 16 May, columns 173–76.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information is provided to her Department by regional health authorities on the number of hospitals opened and closed. [23594]

Mr. Malone: Regional health authorities refer to Ministers only those proposals for hospital closures which are contested by the local community health council following RHA consideration.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 30 March, Official Report, column 716, how many hospitals provide (a) acute services, (b) maternity services, (c) geriatric services, (d) mental health services, (e) learning difficulty services and (f) specialist services, by region and by total. [22832]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 9 May 1995]: The information requested is not available centrally.

Burnley Health Care NHS Trust

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps were taken by the Medical Devices Agency or the former relevant authority before it to certify the safety of the probe implicated in the loss of eyes by patients at Burnley general hospital. [23856]

Mr. Sackville: Responsibility for the design of individual medical devices resides with the manufacturer of the device. As soon as the problem was identified, Burnley Health Care NHS trust notified the manufacturers and the Medical Devices Agency, which are issuing a hazard notice to all NHS hospitals.

Criminal Records

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy that a criminal record should play no part in the assessment of medical needs NHS patients. [23854]

Mr. Bowis: It would do so only if information about criminal activity was essential in order to decide on the type or location, of care to be provided for a particular condition.

Human Rights

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is her policy to accept the provisional recommendations made by the Council of Europe on human rights in its document 1235/1994. [23712]

Mr. Bowis: A Government response will be made once final recommendations are formally adopted and published by the Council of Europe.

Dental Services

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how she plans to develop the role of the community dental service. [24405]

Mr. Malone: The Department of Health circular (89)2 provides guidance for health authorities and sets out the role of the community dental service. This circular is available in the Library. We intend to open discussions with the joint negotiating forum, comprising health departments, the Central Committee for Community Dental Services, and health authorities to consider the present role of the community dental service and to provide revised guidance. The guidance will encourage health authorities to assess the need for the community dental service to act as a "safety net", and to make arrangements for services in the light of these assessments.

Waiting Times

Sir Irvine Patnick : To ask the Secretary for State for Health if she will give the latest waiting list times for (a) in-patient and (b) out-patient treatment for (i) Trent region and (ii) Sheffield health authority for each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [24401]

Mr. Malone: Information on in-patient waiting lists and times by district health authority and region in England is given in "Hospital Waiting List Statistics: England", published twice yearly, copies of which are available in the Library. Information on the waiting times of patients for out-patient assessment has been published for two quarters. In the quarter to 31 December 1994, in Trent region 85 per cent. of patients were seen within 13 weeks and 97 per cent. within 26 weeks of referral by their general practitioner. Information on performance at individual trusts will be placed in the Library once the Audit Commission has completed checks on the trusts' information systems.

Suicides

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the most recent available percentage suicide rate for employed 18 to 65 years old in England. [24553]

Mr. Bowis: Information on the number of unemployed people who have committed suicide is not available. At death registration, informants are asked for the last occupation rather than the employment status of the deceased.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the implications for her community care policy of the absence of private old peopie's homes in Slough, given the proposal that Slough borough council should become a unitary authority; [24533]

(2) if she will make a statement on the potential effect on children on the children protection register when Berkshire is divided into six unitary authorities; [24535]

(3) if she will make a statement on the likely effects on social services provision of the proposed division of Berkshire into six unitary authorities. [24536]

Mr. Bowis: All new unitary authorities will be responsible for deciding how their statutory responsibilities for personal social services can best be discharged. On 12 May, the Department issued an advice document to local authorities entitled "Social Services: Maintaining Standards in A Changing World" under cover of local authority social services letter (95)5. Copies of the advice document are available in the Library. It draws attention to the special features of social services which the new authorities will need to consider if they are to deliver those services effectively to people who need them.

Prescriptions

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS prescriptions for the treatment of epilepsy were dispensed in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and how many of those prescriptions were for products that were licensed (a) within the last five years, (b) more than 10 years ago and (c) more than 20 years ago. [22840]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 11 May 1995]: The available information will be placed in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fisheries

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if his common fisheries policy review group will be enabled to visit Canada, Iceland or Norway to report on the advantages and disadvantages of national control of national fishing waters; [23991]

(2) how many members of the review group on the common fisheries policy have been or are in receipt of research grants from his Department or from EEC sources; and if he will list the grants and projects involved; [23987]

(3) if he will instruct his common fisheries policy review group to make its first priority to report on the financial viability of the English fishing industry; [23989]

(4) if he will indicate the geographical base of each member of his review group on the common fisheries policy. [23988]

Mr. Jack: I do not intend to dictate to the group what it should or should not discuss, provided that any discussion is about ways of improving the CFP. I am sure there are lessons to be learnt from management regimes operated outside the EU, although I do not anticipate that any foreign visits will be necessary.

Group members' places of residence are:

Mr. Goodland: Shetland isles
Professor McIntyre: Aberdeen
Mr. Thomas: Hull
Dr. Gubbay: Ross-on-Wye
Dr. Cunningham: Portsmouth
Dr Cooke: Brixham

Members of the group involved in research activities may well be associated with organisations which receive grants from this Department or from EC sources.

However, we have no records of members of the group personally receiving research grants from the Department or from EC sources.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many fishermen (a) not belonging to and (b) belonging to producer organisations have been prosecuted for illegal catches of fish since 1 January 1990. [24538]

Mr. Jack: Information about illegal catches by sector and non-sector fishermen in the form requested is not readily available. However, I refer my hon. Friend to the answers given to the hon. Member for Pembroke (Mr. Ainger) on 28 and 31 March, Official Report, columns 626 and 848 respectively.

Trading Standards Services Berkshire

Mr. Berry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the applicability of the views attributed to his Department on pages 42 and 43 of "Renewing of Local Government in the English shires" to the future of the trading standards service after the proposed division of Berkshire into six unitary authorities. [24548]

Mrs. Browing: I hold to our views expressed in the Local Government Commission report, but I accept that the issues of enforcement of food law by trading standards officers were not the only issues that the commission had to consider in making its recommendations on local government re-organisation in Berkshire. Now that it has been agreed what form the reorganisation will take, I am considering what advice on this topic it may be necessary for us to give to the successor authorities.

Bananas

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the Government's position with regard to the European Community's proposal on bananas. [24679]

Mr. Jack: The Commission has proposed a number of changes to the EU bananas regime. These take account of the accession of the three new member states, make proper provision for response to natural disasters in the production areas, provide for quota transferability amongst African, Caribbean and Pacific suppliers, simplify the arrangements for allocating import licences and remove fig bananas from the scope of the regime.

The Government welcome the proposed improvements in the provisions relating to ACP suppliers. On licence allocation, it will press for simplification of the rules but without undermining existing incentives for wide participation in the development of trade in ACP fruit.

Lamb Exports

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has as to how many kilos of English lamb exported to France is sold annually in France labelled as French lamb. [24684]

Mr. Jack: I have no reason to believe that any English or other UK lamb exported to France in the form of meat is ever sold labelled as French lamb.

Meat from live sheep exported from the UK to France may be sold labelled as "freshly killed" or "home killed" lamb, but not as French lamb.

Fish Farms, Salisbury

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many fish farm sites are located within the boundaries of Salisbury district council. [24545]

Mr. Jack: There are currently 11 fish farm sites registered within the Salisbury postal district area.

Spain

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much subsidy has been given to Spain in each of the last three years from the European Community for agriculture; and what is the forecast of funding to Spain for the next three years. [24680]

Mr. Jack: Receipts by Spain of funds from both the guarantee section, which funds the common agricultural policy, and the guidance section, which funds structural measures in the agricultural sector, of the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund for the last three years are shown in the table below. The EAGGF guarantee section expenditure contains a small element in respect of fisheries market support.

Payments to Spain for agriculture from the EC Budget

	mecu	£ million	mecu	£ million	mecu	£ million

1994	4,255	3,287	(10)	(8)	n/a	n/a

Conversion rates: 1992 £1 = 1.4131 ecu; 1993 £1 = 1.2718 ecu; 1994 £1 = 1.2945 ecu

Sources:

CAP - 1992 and 1993 : EAGGF guarantee section annual financial reports; 1994: Commission working document; EAGGF guidance section - annual reports of the European Court of Auditors

With regard to future expenditure, the CAP budget is drawn up only a year in advance, and is set in relation to forecast expenditure throughout the Community, and not on the basis of allocations to individual member states. With regard to agricultural structures, Spain has been allocated 3,640 mecu or £3,023 million from the EAGGF guidance section, under objective 1 and objective 5a for the period 1994–1999. The allocation to Spain under objective 5b—rural development—for the same period is 664 mecu or £551 millions derived from the EAGGF guidance section, European regional development fund and the European social fund combined. A breakdown of the amount to be funded from the EAGGF guidance section alone is not available.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Criminal Injuries Compensation

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many claims for dependency due to fatal injuries were made for criminal injuries compensation under the common law scheme between April 1993 and April 1994; and how many resulted in an award; [23772]

(2) what was the highest award made by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board for psychiatric injury in cases determined under the common law scheme before April 1994; [23769]

(3) how many criminal injuries compensation cases decided under the common law scheme between April 1993 and April 1994 involved injuries to the dominant hand or arm; [23773]

(4) what was the highest criminal injuries compensation award made to a child under the common law scheme between April 1993 and April 1994; [23765]

(5) how many criminal injuries compensation awards involving fatal injuries were dealt with under the common law scheme between April 1993 and April 1994; and what was the highest award; [23767]

(6) what was the highest criminal injuries compensation award for scarring injuries made under the common law scheme between April 1993 and April 1994; [23774]

(7) how many fatal criminal injuries compensation cases decided under the tariff scheme would have resulted in a dependency award under the common law scheme; [23755]

(8) how many criminal injuries compensation cases were determined under the common law scheme in relation to children under 18 years between April 1993 and April 1994; [23764]

(9) what was the average criminal injuries compensation award made to a victim of child sexual abuse under the common law scheme between April 1993 and April 1994. [23766]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not recorded centrally.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal injuries compensation cases were accepted under the common law scheme between April 1993 and April 1994 which had been lodged out of time; and how many cases were rejected under the common law scheme between April 1993 and April 1994 (a) for being out of time and (b) under eligibility rules. [23776]

Mr. Maclean: In the year to 31 March 1994, the board received 3,704 out of time applications. In addition, 164 cases were carried forward from 1992–93. At 31 March 1994 the position was:

	Numbers
Under consideration	356
Accepted	2,715
Refused	766
Abandoned by applicant	31

Reasons for refusal are not recorded centrally.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many claims for criminal injuries compensation were lodged for consideration under the common law scheme between April 1993 and April 1994; how many were rejected under eligibility rules; and how many resulted in an interim award under the common law scheme. [23771]

Mr. Maclean: In the year ending 31 March 1994, the board received 73,473 applications. Some 23,933 cases were rejected, and interim awards were made in 6,492 cases. The latter two figures include cases received before 1993–94.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal injuries compensation cases were pursued by way of appeal to a member level panel under the common law scheme between April 1993 and April 1994; and how many were successfully appealed. [23775]

Mr. Maclean: The available information is that the board received 15,192 appeals and made 4,094 monetary awards following appeal.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list, for each tariff band, the (a) longest, (b) shortest and (c) average periods for an application for criminal injuries compensation to be determined under the tariff scheme; [23740]

(2) what was the average length of time to determine an application for criminal injuries compensation under the tariff scheme during the first year of its operation. [23758]

Mr. Malcean: All offers of award made under the tariff scheme will be honoured without prejudice to reassessment under the reinstated—1990—scheme. Applicants have three months in which to accept or reject an offer. The information requested will not therefore be available until at least three months after the last offers were made.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many awards for criminal injuries compensation have been made under the tariff scheme involving (a) combination awards for multiple injuries and (b) injuries not specified within the tariff of injuries; [23741]

(2) what have been the highest and lowest awards for criminal injuries compensation under the tariff scheme for an injury not specified within the tariff of injuries; and what were the injuries involved in each case. [23742]

Mr. Maclean: Six hundred and forty-one awards have been offered and accepted in cases involving more than one injury. No awards were made in respect of injuries not specified in the tariff.

Mr. Jack Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many criminal injuries compensation cases involving sexual violence have been determined under the tariff scheme; [23743]

(2) how many reviews were lodged under the tariff scheme for criminal injuries compensation against initial determination; [23756]

(3) what was the average award for criminal injuries compensation under the common law scheme between April 1993 and April 1994; [23777]

(4) how many criminal injuries compensation claimants have received interim payments under the tariff scheme; [23753]

(5) how many fatal criminal injuries compensation cases have been decided under the tariff scheme; [23754]

(6) what was the highest award made under the common law criminal injuries compensation scheme between April 1993 and April 1994; [23768]

(7) how many awards for criminal injuries compensation were decided under the common law scheme between April 1993 and April 1994. [23778]

Mr. Maclean: The answer is 690, 2,918, £4,064, 66, 54, £1,148, 760 and 40,635 respectively.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the average award, (b) the highest award and (c) the lowest award made in criminal injuries compensation cases involving sexual violence determined under the tariff scheme. [23744]

Mr. Maclean: The answer is £4,613, £17,500 and £1,00 respectively.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the average award, (b) the highest award and (c) the lowest award made under the tariff scheme for criminal injuries compensation involving psychiatric injury. [23745]

Mr. Maclean: This answer is £2,791, £20,000 and £1,000 respectively.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal injuries compensation cases determined under the tariff scheme involved (a) paralysis of all four limbs, (b) paralysis of the lower limbs, (c) hemiplegia, (d) serious brain damage and (e) brain damage with serious impairment. [23746]

Mr. Maclean: One award was made in respect of paralysis of all four limbs. No determinations were made in respect of the other categories.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal injuries compensation cases provisionally decided under the tariff scheme are expected to result in a higher award when reconsidered under the common law scheme. [23747]

Mr. Maclean: Based on assessments made when the tariff scheme was introduced, 40 per cent. of awards provisionally made might be expected to have been the same as, or less than, awards which would have been made under the scheme based on common law damages and as such to result in higher awards when reconsidered. It should be noted, however, that the provisional awards made are likely to have been typical since, because of the priority which was given to clearing the outstanding cases lodged before 1 April 1994 and the way in which the work was organised, the cases which were settled under the tariff scheme included a high proportion of nil awards.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal injuries compensation cases outstanding under the common law scheme were decided between April 1993 and April 1994. [23748]

Mr. Maclean: In the year ending 31 March 1994, the board resolved 65,293 cases.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal injuries compensation claims on behalf of children under the age of 18 years were (a) lodged and (b) determined under the tariff scheme between April 1994 and April 1995. [23759]

Mr. Maclean: Some 12,086 applications were received. Compensation was paid in 1,006 cases.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many child victims of sexual abuse lodged applications for criminal injuries compensation between April 1994 and April 1995; and how many have been determined. [23761]

Mr. Maclean: Information about the number of such applications is not recorded. Compensation was paid in 225 cases involving child victims of sexual abuse.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what were the administrative costs of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority between April 1994 and April 1995; [23763]

(2) what is the estimated administrative cost of dealing with the consequences of the House of Lords decision on the criminal injuries compensation scheme; and how much additional criminal injuries compensation he estimates will have to be paid as a result of the decision in respect of cases lodged between April 1994 and April 1995; [23749]

(3) what was the cost of setting up the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority. [23762]

Mr. Maclean: I would refer the hon. Member to the answers given to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche) on 25 November 1994, Official Report, column 446, and 26 April, Official Report, column 561.

The additional cost of compensation arising in respect of cases lodged in the year ending 31 March 1995 is likely to be in the order of £85 million.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the time it will take to reassess those criminal injuries compensation cases previously decided under the tariff scheme, in the light of the House of Lords ruling. [23770]

Mr. Maclean: I would refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche) on 1 May, Official Report, column 92.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average length of time for determining criminal injuries compensation cases under the common law scheme between April 1993 and April 1994; and what was the average award. [23985]

Mr. Maclean: The board does not record information about the average length of time for determining cases, although paragraphs 3.11 and 3.12 of its 30th annual report do give some information on the subject. The average award was £4,064.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal injuries compensation claims lodged between April 1994 and April 1995 and not determined under the tariff scheme involve (a) fatal injuries, (b) injuries sustained in sexual attack, (c) paraplegia, (d) quadriplegia, (e) hemiplegia, (f) serious brain damage and (g) brain damage resulting in serious impairment. [23750]

Mr. Maclean: Some 1,192 cases involving fatal injuries were awaiting initial determination. Information on the other categories is not available.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal injuries compensation claims between April 1994 and April 1995 were (a) lodged under the tariff scheme, (b) decided under the tariff scheme, (c) accepted for eligibility under the tariff scheme, (d) rejected for eligibility under the tariff scheme, (e) rejected for eligibility under the tariff scheme which would have been eligible under the common law scheme. [23751]

Mr. Maclean: The available information is that in the year ending 31 March 1995, 66,387 cases were registered under the tariff scheme. Some 4,891 monetary awards were offered, and 11,076 cases were rejected or received "nil" awards. There is no information as to how many of the cases rejected under the tariff scheme would have been eligible under the common law scheme.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal injuries compensation cases have been decided under the tariff scheme, by tariff band. [23752]

Mr. Maclean: The breakdown of awards offered in the year ending 31 March 1995 was as follows:

Band	Number
2	268
5	432
8	170
9	93
10	72
12	244
13	50
16	24

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal injuries compensation cases were (a) pursued by way of review to the review panel under the tariff scheme and (b) successfully appealed to the review panel under the tariff scheme. [23757]

Mr. Maclean: One hundred and twenty appeals were made to the appeals panel. The tariff scheme was withdrawn before the panel considered any cases.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to publish the 30th report of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board. [23984]

Mr. Maclean: It was published on 11 May 1995.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the highest and lowest criminal injuries compensation awards made to children under the tariff scheme between April 1994 and April 1995. [23760]

Mr Maclean: The highest and lowest awards made to persons aged under 18 were £30,000 and £1,000.

African National Congress (Bombing)

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 23 February, Official Report, columns 330–31, what progress has been made in police investigations of the 1982 bombing of the London offices of the African National Congress. [24457]

Mr. Howard: I understand that the police have now completed their review of the evidence and are considering whether there is a basis for further action in the light of Mr. Williamson's reported remarks.

Consultants

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what work was carried out on behalf of his Department by EDMC Management Consultants in connection with proposals to privatise the escorting of vehicles carrying abnormal loads on motorways and other roads; and at what cost. [24753]

Mr. Maclean: EDMC Management Consultants analysed and defined the skills and competencies which are required for the escorting of abnormal loads on motorways and linked dual carriageways. Its work included advice and recommendations regarding assessment of these competencies and on how possible to draw up a formal qualification in escorting for issue by an awarding body. It is not the Department's policy to waste the value of individual contracts, on the grounds of commercial confidentially.

Data Protection Registrar

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the office of the Data Protection Registrar. [25186]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The next five yearly review of the office of the Data Protection Registrar will take place in 1995–96. The first stage of the review will consist of a "prior options" study. In accordance with normal practice, this will consider whether the registrar's functions still need to be performed at all—and, if they do, whether they could be privatised, contracted out, or transferred to some other body. The study will shortly begin, and I would welcome comments from interested parties. Comments should be sent by 16 June 1995 to Mr. M. Jones, Room 978, Home Office, Queen Anne's gate, London SW1H 9AT.

Passport Agency

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what performance targets he has set for the UK Passport Agency in 1995–96. [25185]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: During 1995–96 I shall expect the Passport Agency to continue to improve its standard of service to the public while seeking further efficiency savings in its operations.

I have set the agency the following targets:

(i) to process properly completed straightforward applications within a maximum of 15 working days between April and August 1995, 10 working days between September and February 1996 and 15 working days in March 1996.

(ii) to process such applications within an overall average of seven working days for the year as a whole, and

(iii) to reduce unit costs by a further 5 per cent. in real terms in comparison with the outturn for 1994–95.

The chief executive will remain directly accountable to me for the performance of the Passport Agency. An advisory board, including two private sector members with experience of delivering services to the public, will continue to provide me with an independent assessment of the agency's performance.

Prisons Expenditure

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the criminal justice budget has been spent on the prison service, including accommodating prisoners in police cells; and what proportion has been spent on crime prevention in each of the last 16 years. [21607]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 1 May 1995]: The full information sought is not available. The information readily available is as follows:

	1986–87	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Total estimated expenditure on the criminal justice system in England and Wales[1]	4,596	7,629	8,770	9,204	9,524	10,100
Expenditure on prisons (including accommodating prisoners in police cells)	697	1,452	1,586	1,610	1,507	1,596[2]

[1] Figures include Home Office expenditure on prisons; Home Office and local authority expenditure on the police and probation services; Lord Chancellor's Department expenditure on criminal business related administration, court services and legal aid; and expenditure on the Crown Prosecution Service.

One of the principal objectives of the criminal justice system is the prevention of crime. All constituent parts of the system contribute to this objective. Indeed, the Government's White Paper "Police Reform" published in June 1993, Cm 2281, listed fighting and preventing crime as a main aim of the police, who account for over half of all criminal justice expenditure. It is not possible to isolate the resources associated with the crime prevention part of the work of criminal justice agencies. Information about specific Home Office initiatives in crime prevention is set out in paragraphs 4.41 to 4.48 of the Home Office annual report 1995, Cm 2808.

Probation Service

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the terms of the informal agreement between the European Community Commission and Her Majesty's Government on the use of the restricted procedure in procurement process for the probation service house II framework agreement. [24391]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The conditions for use of the restricted procedure in the procurement process are set out in the Public Supply Contract Regulations, S.I.1991. No. 2679, a copy of which is in the Library. These conditions were complied with in the establishment of the house II—Home Office Unix systems environment—framework arrangement used to set up the agreement for probation services.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Treasury has been alerted to the facsimile correspondence from his Department's Mr. Lindsay Watson to Mr. Guy Lougher of Wragge and Co. on 9 February 1995; and if the questions raised about the award of the house II framework contract are factually and legally accurate. [24393]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Mr. Lindsay Watson's letter of 9 February 1995 was prepared in consultation with the Treasury, who is content that the procedure under which the house II framework arrangement was awarded was in compliance with the Public Supply Contracts Regulations, S.I. 1991, No. 2679.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the award by a probation committee or board of any contract to Bull Information Systems Ltd. under or in pursuance of the house II framework agreement will need to comply with the relevant European Procurement rules in all respects; and if it will need to be separately advertised or publicised by the said probation committee or board under those rules. [24392]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Since the house II—Home Office Unix systems environment—framework arrangement was awarded in accordance with the Public Supply Contracts Regulations, there is no need to have a further competition each time a probation committee or board awards any contract to Bull Information Systems Ltd. under or in pursuance of the house II framework agreement.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the relevant European public procurement regulations and laws in relation to the house II—Bull framework agreement—have been implemented. [24390]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The house II—Home Office Unix Systems Environment—framework arrangement was awarded following a competition which complied with the Public Supply Contracts Regulations, SI 1991, No. 2679. The regulations are the mechanism by which the EC supplies directive is implemented.

Race Relations

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what race relations policies the Prison Service has; and to what extent they are mandatory; [23087]

(2) what means are in place to check establishments for compliance with race relations policy; and what training is given to those who check compliance; [23088]

(3) what special arrangements the Prison Service provides for prisoners who are foreign nationals; [23089]

(4) how many prison governors have a race relations element in their contracts; and what formal race relations management training is given to prison governors; [23135]

(5) how many prisons have facilities for serving kosher or halal food; [23081]

(6) how many prison race relations management teams have a membership which includes a representative from an outside racial equality organisation; [23082]

(7) how many formal complaints on racial grounds have been received by his Department (a) from staff and (b) from prisoners in each of the last five years. [23083]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 9 May 1995]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 17 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about race relations in the Prison Service.

The Prison Service's race relations policy is set out in its policy statement on the subject, a copy of which is attached. This states that all prisoners should be treated impartially and without discrimination on grounds of colour, race and religion. Under the policy, which is mandatory, racially insulting, abusive or derogatory language towards prisoners is not tolerated.

To check establishments are complying with race relations policy, the prison governors' standard business plan includes targets on race issues, for which governors are accountable to their area manager. Governors are also required to complete an annual race relations checklist. These checklist returns form the basis of an annual report on race relations to the Prisons Board. Additionally, annual reports of Boards of Visitors and reports of inspections by HM Chief Inspector of Prisons frequently cover race issues. No specific training for the purpose of checking compliance is given. However, some of those involved, for example, area managers and some Board of Visitors members, will have received general race relations training.

Prison governors' contracts include a race relations element and race relations issues are addressed as part of the modular training course for middle managers, including governor grades. This is delivered by the Prison Service Colleges in conjunction with Leeds Metropolitan University. Governors recruited under the Accelerated Promotion Scheme receive race relations training both as part of initial officer training and on subsequent development courses.

In 1993–94, the latest year for which figures are available, the number of prisons which could provide kosher and halal food were 119 and 117 respectively.

At present, 39 prison race relations management teams have a membership which includes a representative from an outside racial equality organisation.

Information on how many formal complaints on racial grounds have been received by the Prison Service from staff and from prisoners in each of the last five years is not available. However, analysis of the annual checklist returns shows that the number of recorded racial incidents, which includes complaints, is as follows:

	Staff	Prisoners
1990–91	0	22
1991–92	11	95
1992–93	20	121
1993–94	16	206
1994–95	[1]—	[1]—

[1] Information not yet available.

With regard to foreign nationals, the Prison Service has produced a Foreign Prisoners' Resource Pack, which provides information and guidance for prison staff working with foreign nationals, and the prisoners themselves. The pack is available in 12 languages and topics include awareness of foreign prisoners' needs and concerns, the criminal justice system, immigration, customs and excise, embassies, interpreting and translating. There is also a Prisoners' Information Pack which is available in 14 languages. In addition the Prison Service has given support for the Nuffield Interpreters Project to encourage accredited interpreters; and has introduced the language line telephone interpreting service into all prisons.

Prison Service race relations policy statement

1. The Prison Service is committed absolutely to a policy of racial equality and to the elimination of discrimination in all aspects of the work of the Prison Service. It is opposed also to any display of racial prejudice, either by word or conduct by any member of the Service in his or her dealings with any other person.
2. All prisoners should be treated with humanity and respect. All prisoners should be treated impartially and without discrimination on grounds of colour, race and religion. Insulting, abusive and derogatory language towards prisoners will not be tolerated.
3. Race relations concerns every member of the Prison Service. It is the responsibility of every member of staff to ensure that the Department's policy is carried out in relation to other members of staff as well as prisoners.
4. Members of minority religious groups have the same right to practise their faith as those of the majority faith. Wherever feasible in prison circumstances arrangements are made to give them the same practical opportunity to do so.
5. All inmates should have equal access to the facilities provided in the establishment including jobs. The distribution of inmates throughout the establishment and its facilities should as far as practicable and sensible be broadly responsive to the ethnic mix of the establishment.
6. No particular racial group should be allowed to dominate any activity in the establishment to the unfair exclusion of others.

Young Offenders

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the numbers of offences attributed to juvenile offenders (a) in 1979 and (b) in 1994; what were the numbers of juveniles given custodial sentences (i) in 1979 and (ii) in 1994; and what were the reasons for trends in those statistics. [23936]

Mr. Maclean: It is not possible to present an accurate picture of the nature and extent of crime committed by youths aged 10 to 17, as much crime is unreported and not all reported crime is cleared up. We cannot therefore measure the number of crimes actually committed by young people. The best indicator we have is the number of young people known to have been involved in offending, that is, those cautioned by the police for, or convicted by the courts of, a crime.

Information given in the tables show (a) the number of known offenders by age and type of offence and (b) persons sentenced to immediate custody by age and type of offence for the years 1979 and 1993.

Reasons for the trends in known offending may include the demographic fall in the general population of persons aged 10 to 17 from 6.4 million in 1979 to 4.9 million in 1993. The trends may also partly reflect the increased use of informal methods for dealing with young offenders.

1994 data will not be available until autumn 1995.

Animal Procedures Committee

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the current members of the Animal Procedures Committee; and which members of the Animal Procedures Committee are employed by animal welfare organisations. [24014]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The current membership of the Animal Procedures Committee is given. Members' association with animal welfare organisations is shown where appropriate.

Professor Margaret Brazier (Chairman)
Professor Ronald S. Anderson
Professor Margaret Boden
Professor Barry Bridges
Dr. Fiona Broughton Pipkin
Dr. David Christopher
Dr. Yvonne Cripps
Mr. Roger Ewbank—Director of the Universities Federation for Animal Welfare
Dr. John Flack
Dr. Paul Flecknell
Professor Susan Iversen
Mrs. Judy MacArthur Clark
Miss Cindy Milburn—Special Projects Director, World Society for the Protection of Animals
Dr. Iain Purchase
Dr. Jacqueline Southee
Professor Michael Spyer
Dr. Anthony J. Suckling—Director of Scientific Affairs RSPCA
Mr. Les Ward—Director, Advocates for Animals

Suicides

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is (a) the average suicide rate and (b) the suicide rates for those employed in agriculture in each county in England and Wales. [23406]

Mr. Bowis: I have been asked to reply.

The death rates per 100,000 persons aged 16 to 74 for 1991–93 for (i) agricultural workers and (ii) the whole population, from suicide and self-inflicted injury—international classification of diseases code E950–E959—and for injury undetermined whether accidentally or purposely inflicted—international classification of diseases code E980–E989, excluding E988.8—are shown in the table.

	Suicide	Undetermined
(i) agricultural workers	19.9	5.2
(ii) all persons	9.3	3.5

Information on rates by county could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Defence Role

Mr. Merchant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the roles of his Department of Trade and Industry and the Ministry of Defence in regard to the United Kingdom's defence industry. [25667]

Mr. Eggar: The two Departments are in regular contact about the United Kingdom's defence industry.

The Ministry of Defence, as the biggest single customer of UK industry, aims to achieve maximum value for money in procurement, primarily through competition but also, where appropriate, through international collaboration or non-competitive acquisition. It has an interest in ensuring that its supplier base, which includes both specialist defence companies and general companies in most sectors of industry, is efficient, competitive and capable of meeting its needs in both the short and the long term. It works closely with companies to ensure that its requirements are properly understood and to improve the efficiency of the procurement process.

It supports the efforts of UK companies to export defence goods and services.

It funds research and development of technologies needed to meet defence needs. Through the Defence Research Agency it encourages the exploitation of technologies developed for military purposes in civil applications and the exploitation for defence purposes of civil technologies.

The Department of Trade and Industry's objective is to help UK industry compete successfully at home and in world markets. It works closely with the defence industry and related companies, trade associations, universities and other agencies to help improve the industry's international competitiveness. It pursues trade liberalisation world-wide and helps UK industry to take full advantage of market opportunities.

DTI works closely with the Ministry of Defence on issues affecting the competitiveness of the defence industries:

It advises on the industrial implications of MoD procurement policy to ensure that consequences for the competitiveness of the UK defence industrial base are taken into account. On substantial individual defence procurement projects, DTI is consulted well before decisions are taken, to ensure that the industrial implications are considered fully.

Together with MoD it works to promote joint military and civil research activities and adaptation of military technology to civil applications.

It works with MoD to develop a common information base on the defence industries.

Offshore Licensing

Mr. Merchant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will announce the award of licences for the 16th round of offshore licensing; and if he will make a statement. [25668]

Mr. Page: After very careful consideration of applications for exploration licences in the west of Shetlands, we have been able to offer licences for each of the blocks applied for.

Our "fast tracking" of these applications means that over 1,700 sqk of 3D seismic surveys will now be shot this summer with even more to come in 1996. Companies have also committed themselves to drilling 12 wells in the next two years and a further 13 in three years time. This level of commitment demonstrates the keen interest in a very exciting area of the United Kingdom continental shelf.

The blocks attracted a high level of applications with one block receiving eight applications. The competition for some blocks has been intense and some very innovative ideas were presented with a number of very good applications for the same block. A total of 24 applications were received from 17 groups involving 32 companies.

When examining applications we were conscious of the need to protect the environment. Although most of the blocks are some distance from the coast, it is important to ensure that the risks of any oil spills reaching the coasts of the Shetlands and Orkneys are understood and steps taken to minimise the risks and prepare contingency plans. The companies which have been awarded licences have all shown a strong commitment to protecting the environment.

These awards—and the interest in the other blocks offered in the 16th round—shows the continuing high level of commitment by the international oil and gas companies to the UKCS. The opening up of new areas in the west of Shetlands basin as a result of this round will help maintain the UK's position as an oil and gas producer well into the next century.

I plan to announce the remainder of the 16th round awards—for blocks around the coast of Britain and to the north of Scotland—in the summer.

Copyright Tribunal

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes he proposes to make to the procedures of the Copyright tribunal; and if he will make a statement. [24778]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Last year, my Department consulted users of the Copyright tribunal on how far they were satisfied with its performance and on how its procedures might be improved. The overwhelming majority of respondents considered that tribunal procedures were fair, flexible, unintimidating and thorough. However, there were some concerns about the cost and speed of procedures and suggestions for improvement in these and other respects were made. The Department is considering these suggestions in consultation with the chairman of the tribunal and it is likely that a statutory instrument providing for some amendments in procedures will be put forward in due course.

Technopole Information Networks

Mr. John Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much funding he expects to receive from the European Union SPRINT programme for research into technopole information networks. [24150]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The SPRINT programme ended on 31 December 1994. The European Commission was responsible for the selection of SPRINT projects based on merit, and for issuing grants to the successful candidates. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade did not receive any funding from the programme.

The third activity of the EC fourth framework programme for research and development has superseded SPRINT. It brings together under one programme all the Community's efforts on dissemination and exploitation of research results and technological developments. There are provisions in the third activity for support of science parks and networks in support of innovation, though no specific provisions for research into technopole information networks. Projects involving information networks may be eligible for support under other programmes in the fourth framework.

Richard Budge

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 25, at what venues the meetings with Mr. Richard Budge took, place and which Government Departments were represented at each of the meetings. [24941]

Mr. Page: Of the seven meetings with Mr. Richard Budge detailed in my previous answer of 15 May, six were conducted in the office of my right hon. Friend the Minister for Industry and Energy. The meeting on 15 April 1993 took place over lunch in central London. No other Government Departments were represented at any of the meetings.

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his reply of 15 May, Official Report, column 25, which other two directors of A. F. Budge were interviewed. [24939]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: David Thomas Trewick and Martin Connolly were interviewed, together with David Threadkell, a former director.

Mr. Stephen Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his reply of 15 May, Official Report, column 24, what was the cost of the Coopers and Lybrand report on the collapse of A. F. Budge. [24944]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Administrative receivers have a statutory duty to report under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 and the Department makes no payment in respect of such reports. The administrative receivers and Coopers and Lybrand have carried out further enquiries at the request of the Official Receiver and has submitted invoices to date totalling £51,101.18 plus VAT £8,942.70.

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which directors of A. F. Budge were recommended by the Official Receiver for action to be taken against them under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986. [24940]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The content of the Official Receiver's report is confidential between the Secretary of State and the Official Receiver.

Water Treatment Equipment, Iraq

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the DTI has received request for export credit licences for sewerage pumps or other water treatment equipment to Iraq; and if these requests have been granted. [24879]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Export Licences for such equipment have been applied for and, in certain cases, issued. Any export of humanitarian goods to Iraq also requires an authorisation from the United Nations Sanctions Committee.

Construction Contracts

Mr. Cox: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he expects to make a statement on his Department's policy on a construction contracts Bill. [24020]

Mr. Eggar: Matters concerning the construction industry are for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

British Coal Land

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library a list of all the properties in Wales that British Coal proposes to offer for sale. [24774]

Mr Page: This is a matter for British Coal. I understand that the corporation is still finalising the list of properties to be offered for sale. Details will be made public as the properties become available.

Policy Statements

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on how many occasions in each of the last five years his Department published policy statements from non-governmental working parties or organisations; and if he will list the name of the document, the organisation which produced it and the cost to the public purse of publishing it. [24007]

Mr. Ian Taylor: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Plutonium

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will obtain from his United States counterpart a copy of the US Department of Energy's plutonium working group report on environmental, safety and health vulnerabilities associated with plutonium storage, released in November 1994; and if he will arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library. [24295]

Mr. Page: The report referred to was, I understand, published by the US Department of Energy and is publicly available. It can also be accessed on the Internet.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Malaysia

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many applications to the aid and trade provision for support for power projects in Malaysia have been rejected during the last 10 years; and if he will list the grounds for rejection, the date of rejection and the names of the United Kingdom companies involved. [22676]

Mr. Baldry: On the basis of information available, between 1984 and 1993, applications relating to 11 power projects were rejected because they did not meet the developmental, commercial and industrial criteria for the ATP scheme; or for budgetary reasons; or because they were not accepted by recipient Governments. Ten British companies were involved as lead contractors for these projects. Information on the names of companies is commercial in confidence.

One project was rejected in each of the following years: 1988, 1991 and 1993. Three were rejected in 1990. Information is not readily available concerning the dates of rejection for the other five.

SCIAF

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he or his Ministers last met representatives of Scottish Catholic International Aid Fund to discuss overseas development; and if he will make a statement. [24162]

Mr. Baldry: There have been no meetings specifically with the Scottish Catholic International Aid Fund—SCIAF—in recent years. My noble Friend, the Minister for Overseas Development, meets non-governmental organisation on a regular basis to discuss emergency and development issues, and has addressed gatherings of NGOs which have included representatives from SCIAF.

Afghan Refugees

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Pakistan regarding the Afghan refugees now living in refugee camps in Pakistan; and if he will make a statement. [24147]

Mr. Baldry: We regularly discuss with the Government of Pakistan a wide range of issues including Afghan refugees. This issue was raised last month in talks between officials of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Pakistan high commission, who expressed appreciation of our support for Afghan refugees.

AIDS Programme

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government on the issue of the withdrawal of the AIDS programme from the World Health Organisation. [24506]

Mr. Baldry: We support the establishment of the joint United Nations programme on AIDS—UNAIDS—which will replace the World Health Organisation's global programme on AIDS—WHO/GPA—on 1 January 1996. UNAIDS will be co-sponsored by six United Nations agencies, including the World Health Organisation. The other co-sponsors are: United Nations Population Fund, United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation, United Nations Development Programme, the World Bank and the United Nations Childrens Fund.

DEFENCE

Air Training, Germany

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what air training activities are allowed for Royal Air Force aircraft based in Germany. [24801]

Mr. Soames: The supplementary agreement to the NATO status of forces agreement of 3 August 1959, governs the way in which the RAF conducts air training in Germany. In general no fixed-wing flying activity is allowed below 1,000 ft above ground level. However, aircraft may be cleared to fly at 50 ft for limited periods during specific exercises. Medium level training is carried out in temporary restricted areas. Weapons training is primarily conducted at the air weaponry range at RAF Nordhorn, although limited use is also made of other ranges from time to time. The rules governing helicopter training activities in Germany are similar to those in operation in the UK.

UN Peacekeeping Support

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many British helicopters were operating in support of United Nations operations in each of the last 10 years; [24798]

(2) how many British troops were operating in support of United Nations operations in each of the last 10 years; [24799]

(3) how many British Hercules aircraft were operating in support of United Nations operating in each of the last 10 years. [24800]

Mr. Soames: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The United Kingdom has contributed troops to United Nations peacekeeping operations in each of the last ten years. In recent years there has been a rapid increase in the level of peacekeeping undertaken by the UN and the UK's contribution has increased substantially. Some 4,600 British personnel are serving in operations under UN command, and about 3,500 more in operations in support of UN Security Council resolutions. Where necessary British personnel are supported by helicopters and Hercules aircraft. Important support is also provided to other elements of UN operations.

Air Force Personnel

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Royal Air Force maintenance and support personnel there were in each of the last 10 years; [24796]

(2) what was the total Royal Air Force manpower in each of the last 10 years; and what is the estimated Royal Air Force manpower strength in 1997–98. [24797]

Mr. Soames: The total manpower strength of the Royal Air Force and the RAF's maintenance and support element, as at 1 April in each of the years in question is as follows:

Date	Total RAF strength (trained and untrained)	Total RAF maintenance and support personnel (trained and untrained)
1986	93,237	84,861
1987	93,627	85,172
1988	93,291	84,890
1989	91,443	83,385
1990	89,685	81,786
1991	88,371	80,505
1992	85,962	78,183
1993	80,909	73,392
1995	70,754	64,056

For the purposes of this question "maintenance and support" personnel has been defined as all personnel other than those employed on general duties (air) and airmen aircrew duties. It is not our practice to provide estimates of manpower strength more than a year in advance, and the forecast total strength for 1 April 1996 is around 66,500.

Market Testing

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what Royal Air Force activities have been market tested over the last five years. [24795]

Mr. Soames: Full details of market-testing activities in the Royal Air Force over the last five years are not available centrally. However, in the three year period from April 1992 to March 1995 six Royal Air Force activities have been market tested, and a further 16 subjected to other CFQ processes, which resulted in either contractorisation or efficiency measures being taken. Detail of the six market-tested activities are as follows:

(a) Those contractorised following market test:

Inspectorate of Recruitment Exhibition Production Flight, RAF Henlow

Air Weapon Range, RAF Holbeach

Flight checking, 115 Squadron, RAF Benson

Nimrod Major Serving Unit, RAF Kinloss

(b) Those won by in-house bid team following market test:

Air Weapon Range, RAF Cowden

Support Services, Gateway House, RAF Brize Norton

Information to Members

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 201, what considerations led him not to list the hon. and right hon. Members who have been notified of contracts by his special advisor. [24508]

Mr. Rifkind: I do not think listing over 300 contracts, of local rather than national significance, in the Official Report would usefully add to the answer I gave to the hon. Gentleman on 2 May, Official Report, column 201.

Sandia National Laboratories

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all projects his Department is working on jointly with Sandia National Laboratory. [24783]

Mr. Freeman: Under the 1958 UK/US mutual defence agreement, the Atomic Weapons Establishment works closely with Sandia National Laboratory on a number of areas of research. These include:

Neutron Sources

Irradiation Effects on Materials and Components

Non-nuclear Components

Independent Assessment of Nuclear Weapon Safety

Nuclear Weapons Engineering

Nuclear Weapons Physics

Nuclear Accident Response Technology

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what specific support is being provided by Sandia National Laboratory in support of the Trident programme. [24782]

Mr. Freeman: Sandia National Laboratory provides engineering support services associated with certain US-supplied components of the United Kingdom Trident system. Further details are classified.

Latham Report

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what policy his Department has put to the working groups on the Latham report as to the desirability of a single exclusive register for public sector work. [24355]

Mr. Freeman: My officials are actively involved in the follow up work to the Latham report, which is being co-ordinated by the Department of the Environment, and also the efficiency scrutiny into construction procurement. Together, these will form the Govnerment response to Latham's recommendations, including the desirability of a single register for public sector work.

Ground Training

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the future of ground training in the Royal Air Force. [25563]

Mr. Soames: Following issue of the consultative document on 22 March 1995 recommending the closure of RAF Locking and the transfer of its training task to RAF Cosford, representations have been made by the hon. Member for Weston-super-Mare (Sir J. Wiggin), and local authorities. My Department has consulted thoroughly with the trade unions and relevant local authorities, and full and careful consideration has been given to all of the representations that we have received.

Following this work I am satisfied that no issues have been raised which call into question the viability of the proposals, which satisfactorily meet our future ground training needs and save £6,000,000 per annum. I have therefore decided that RAF Locking should close by 1 April 1998.

We will, of course, continue to consult the trade unions about the detailed implementation of the closure and transfer of work to RAF Cosford.

High Velocity Missiles

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will place an order with Shorts for high velocity missiles; and if he will make a statement. [25564]

Mr. Freeman: An order for the development and initial production of high velocity missiles was placed with Shorts Missile Systems Ltd. in 1986. In the light of progress on the project, I have given approval for an order for 1,000 missiles to be placed with Shorts, subject to satisfactory contractual conditions being agreed.

Defence Accounts Agency

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Defence Accounts Agency for 1995–96. [25565]

Mr. Freeman: The chief executive of the Defence Accounts Agency is responsible for providing accounting services for the Ministry of Defence as defined in the agency framework document. During 1995–96, the DAA will be reorganised and its successor organisations will be set new targets. The chief executive of the DAA will however report progress against the DAA targets during the year in a final annual report.

DAA has been set the following challenging key performance targets in 1995–96:

(a) To complete the following workload within the funds allocated for this purpose:

- Manage 89,350 non-industrial pay accounts
- Manage 41,5000 industrial pay accounts
- Complete 130,000 pensions awards/transactions
- Approve 500,000 claims for travel or transfer expenses
- Pay 17,000 fees claims
- Pay 20,000 miscellaneous personal payments claims
- Pay 3,205,000 bills
- Process 45,000 invoices
- Make 396,500 personal payments
- Manage 13,000 imprest accounts
- Process 35,000 HQ receipts
- Process 2,750 banknote orders
- Process 2,250 bank fundings

(b) To meet the agency's quality of service standards in service level agreements and performance targets.

(c) To make efficiency savings with a value of at least 2.5 per cent. of the initial cash allocation.

(d) To compete for payroll and pension awarding business offered through the Government's market testing programme.

(e) To implement the DAA quality strategy by 30 June 1995.

(f) To implement the findings of the agency's first three year review.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 18 May. [23663]

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

China

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister if the President of the Board of Trade has been asked to raise the issue of human rights on his visit to China [24804]

The Prime Minister: The President of the Board of Trade has been briefed on all aspects of our bilateral relationship, and more generally on conditions in China, including human rights.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will discuss with Chancellor Kohl, the letter from the Bundesministerium der Justif to Ms Lisa Mosey, concerning explosive material and baggage handling at Frankfurt, a copy of which has been sent to him by the hon. Member for Linlithgow. [24794]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the reply of 14 March 1995, Official Report, column 498.

TREASURY

Building Societies

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the risk and extent of speculative movement of funds in connection with possible takeovers or conversions of building societies, and the duties of boards of societies in such circumstances; and if he will make a statement. [23266]

Mr. Nelson: Monitoring the movement of funds within the building society sector is one of the tasks of the Building Societies Commission.

Boards of societies faced with speculative flows can respond in a number of ways. These include varying the rates of interest on offer and withdrawing certain types of accounts. In reacting to proposals for takeovers or conversions which may give rise to such flows, the Building Societies Act requires boards to take account not only of the financial interests of their current members, but of the longer-term objectives of the society.

Rural White Paper

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the net annual financial saving, or cost, of his Department's submission for the proposed White Paper on the rural economy. [24332]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Proposals for the rural White Paper remain subject to continuing collective consideration and discussion. The cost of measures contained in the White Paper will be taken into account in the public expenditure survey.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the yield from inheritance tax arising from United Kingdom securities held by non-United Kingdom residents in each of the last three years. [24713]

(2) how many non-United Kingdom residents incurred an inheritance tax liability arising from their holdings of United Kingdom securities in each of the last three years. [24714]

Sir George Young: For inheritance tax purposes, it is the country of domicile that determines liability and not the country of residence. I regret that information for estates where the deceased was domiciled outside of the United Kingdom is not held centrally. The information requested could therefore be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Tax Allowance Transfers

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost of making individual tax allowances transferable between spouses; and if he will make a statement. [24568]

Sir George Young: The full year revenue cost at 1995–96 income levels is estimated to be about £3 billion. This estimate does not take into account any behavioural change which could result from such a measure.

Mortgage Protection Policies

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the review into the taxation of proceeds for mortgage protection policies was set up; what are its terms of reference; who is conducting it; when he expects it to report; and if he will make a statement. [23630]

Sir George Young [holding answer 10 May 1995]: My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor made it clear in the statement he issued on 2 May that benefits under mortgage payment protection policies will be exempt from tax. The decision resulted from a review that had been under way for some months.

Summer Economic Forecast

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the expected publication date for the Treasury's summer economic forecast. [24495]

Mr. Aitken [holding answer 17 May 1995]: We expect to publish the summer economic forecast on a similar date to last year. I will let the hon. Gentleman know the exact date as soon as it is decided.

EDUCATION

Pre-school Education

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what percentage of children under the age of five years receive nursery or pre-school public education in each member state of the European Union. [24219]

Mr. Forth: Information is not collected centrally in the form requested. The latest available international comparisons of under-fives participating in public and private education are shown in the table. Separate participation rates for nursery provision only are not available.

Non-teaching Staff

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education from which schools she has received reports that (a) dinner ladies and (b) school crossing patrol persons have undertaken teaching duties. [24422]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend is not aware of any such cases. Non-teaching staff are widely used to supervise pupils and to support the work of teachers; decisions on their deployment are for headteachers.

Supply Cover

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is her estimate of the cost of supply cover for classroom teachers, while primary schools carry out the standard assessment tests. [24781]

Mr. Forth: The estimated cost of supply cover for teachers administering the national curriculum tests and tasks to seven and 11-year-olds is around £15 million.

Schools, Ealing

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to her answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 14 on the educational spending in Ealing, if she will give an expenditure breakdown of the figures of (a) £517.33 and (b) £923.45 for expenditure per primary and secondary pupil in locally-managed schools other than that allocated to schools under the locally managed school budgets; and if she will make a statement. [24878]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table provides the information requested. It is derived from the planned expenditure totals and pupils numbers shown in the 1995–96 budget statement published by the local education authority under section 42 of the Education Reform Act.

EMPLOYMENT

Remploy

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what alterations he has made to the recruitment criteria for disabled persons employed by Remploy; [24885]

(2) what discussions he has held with the management board of Remploy about changes to the recruitment criteria for disabled people. [24886]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Peter Hain, dated 18 May 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the recruitment criteria for disabled persons employed by Remploy.

There has been no change to the recruitment criteria for disabled persons employed by Remploy. Remploy is part of the Employment Service's Supported Employment Programme. This programme is open to people with severe disabilities who are registered under the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944 and who, because of the severity of their disability and its effect on their productivity, are unlikely to be able to obtain or retain jobs in open employment.

As there have been no changes to the criteria, we have not held discussions with Remploy management on this subject.

I hope this is helpful.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Maxwell Brothers

Mr. Byers: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what contributions have so far been made from the legal aid fund towards the defence costs of (a) Kevin Maxwell and (b) Ian Maxwell; and what have been the costs incurred by the defence in carrying out public opinion surveys. [24925]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The total amount of criminal legal aid paid to date to lawyers acting for all six defendants in R v. Kevin Maxwell and Others is £4,745,391. This amount includes final costs in the magistrates' court of £829,377 as well as payments on account, as of 24 January 1995, in the Crown Court of £3,916,014. All payments include VAT and disbursements, such as expert witness and accountancy fees, and other expenses necessarily incurred. It would not be appropriate while the case is continuing to give a further breakdown of these figures. Nothing has been paid from the legal aid fund to cover the cost of public opinion surveys conducted by the defence.

Judges

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list all full-time judges aged over 70 years still sitting on the bench. [23938]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The information requested as at 10 May 1995, is as follows:

Lords of Appeal in Ordinary
Lord Jauncey of Tullichettle
Lord Keith of Kinkel
Heads of Division
The President of the Family Division (Sir Stephen Brown)
Lord Justices
Lord Justice Beldam
Lord Justice Glidewell
Lord Justice Neill

Judge Richard Lowry QC
Judge Mildon QC
Judge Phelan
Judge Stroyan QC
Judge Sir Lawrence Verney TD, DL
Judge Ian Webster
District Judges
District Judge Goodman
District Judge Hughes
District Judge Keyes
District Judge Lam

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the names of those judges whose period in office has been extended by the Lord Chancellor beyond their statutory retiring age; and when he now expects each to retire. [23939]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor exercises the powers available to him under section 26(4) to (6) of the Judicial Pensions and Retirement Act 1993 where he considers it desirable in the public interest to continue a judge in office for a period, or further period, not exceeding one year, up to the age of 75.

Judge David Kt QC is the only circuit judge in office whose appointment has been continued beyond his statutory retirement date. The continuance expires on 30 April 1996. No district judges in office have been continued beyond their statutory retirement date. There are no powers to continue more senior judges in office beyond their statutory retirement date.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Professional Staff

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the numbers of professional grade officials employed by the United Nations and its agencies who are citizens of (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the United States of America, (c) France, (d) Sweden, (e) India, (f) Canada, (g) the Netherlands, (h) Japan, (i) Ireland and (j) Belgium. [23707]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The numbers of professional staff, including senior officials, employed by the United Nations and its agencies who are citizens of the ten countries listed are given in the following table.

Peaceful Nuclear Explosions

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the policy position taken by Her Majesty's Government in regard to the support for article V, on peaceful nuclear explosions, of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty at the review and extension conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty in New York. [24423]

Mr. David Davis: We expressed the view that there are no useful peaceful applications of nuclear explosions.

Passports (Date-stamping)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what circumstances it is permitted within EU laws or other ordnances for Belgium frontier authorities to date stamp the passports of United Kingdom passport holders on entry into Belgium. [24865]

Mr. David Davis: Date-stamping of United Kingdom passports by Belgian immigration authorities would not necessarily be contrary to EC law provided that it could not be construed as an immigration control on a British citizen, and provided that it was not done in circumstances which amounted to discrimination on the ground of nationality. Nevertheless it appears that the few cases reported recently of such date-stamping were the result of administrative error and the Belgian authorities assure us they have taken steps to see that it does not happen again.

Holy Shrine, Charar-e-Sharief

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Indian and Pakistani Governments regarding the destruction of the holy shrine, Charar-e-Sharief. [24897]

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has not had discussions with the Indian and Pakistani Governments regarding the destruction of the shrine at Charar-e-Sharief.

Social Development Fund

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what factors led to the United Kingdom not participating in the Council of Europe's social development fund. [24802]

Mr. David Davis: The cost of the United Kingdom joining the social development fund would be prohibitive. As a major contributor to the Council of Europe, our initial investment would be around £30 million, with annual running costs of about £225,000. This could be met only by diverting aid resources from bilateral and multilateral aid programmes.

Pakistan (Drugs)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what action Her Majesty's Government are taking (a) directly, (b) through the EU and (c) through other organisations, to assist the Government of Pakistan in combating drug trafficking; what assistance is being given to the supply of equipment to combat drug trafficking with particular reference to helicopters; and if he will make a statement. [22306]

Mr. Baldry [pursuant to his reply 2 May, Official Report, column 151]: I regret that the last three paragraphs of my answer of 2 May were inadvertently omitted. The full answer is as follows:

We have given considerable narcotics-related assistance to Pakistan both bilaterally and through multilateral channels. Last financial year, bilateral assistance includes the provision of law enforcement training by HM Customs and Excise. Multilaterally we have pledged over £8 million since 1985 to projects administered by the United Nations drug control programme to strengthen law enforcement control of the Pakistan/Iran/Afghanistan border area and to reduce the supply of opium through rural development.

As part of the programme of assistance, we agreed to fund the purchase of two helicopters to enhance the capacity of the ANF to interdict drugs convoys in the area bordering Afghanistan and Iran.

Assistance by EU Governments is co-ordinated through the forum of the Dublin group both locally and in Brussels. Assistance by the European Commission has been mainly directed towards narcotics demand reduction.

HM Customs and Excise works closely with Pakistani law enforcement agencies. We stand ready to provide further assistance and are considering additional requests from the Pakistan Government for training and equipment to enhance their capability to counter drug trafficking.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

"Management Matters"

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the cost of printing, publishing and distributing "Management Matters"; who paid this and what charges were made to private organisations who were allowed to insert looseleaf advertisements in the magazine. [24587]

Mr. Horam: The average gross cost of printing, publishing and distributing each edition in the 1994–95 financial year was approximately £12,800.

The cost of producing "Management Matters" is met from the Cabinet Office—Office of Public Service and Science—budget.

Organisations which wish to place a looseleaf insert in the magazine are charged at a rate of £38 per 1,000 leaflets. Revenue raised is used to offset the magazine's production costs.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on whose and on what authority the Government publication for civil servants, "Management Matters" included looseleaf advertising for insurance and life assurance. [24585]

Mr. Horam: Each looseleaf advertisement that is inserted in "Management Matters" is approved by the magazine's editorial board prior to publication. The board, which comprises officials from the Cabinet Office—OPSS—and HM Treasury, examines each proposed advertisement against pre-determined criteria.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment has been made as to whether the insertion of looseleaf advertising for private organisations selling financial and other services in "Management Matters" might be understood by readers as implying an endorsement of particular commercial products, not withstanding disclaimers; and if he will place in the Library the reports which have evaluated such matters. [24586]

Mr. Horam: There are precedents for civil service publications carrying advertising. The editorial board gave careful consideration to the decision to insert looseleaf advertisements in "Management Matters". Taking into account the strict criteria it would apply and the disclaimer included in each edition—on which it took legal advice—the board took the view that such advertisements could not reasonably be regarded as bearing official endorsement.

Civil Service Pension Scheme

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to market test the management of the civil service pension scheme; and if he will make a statement. [24371]

Mr. Horam: The 1992 efficiency scrutiny identified administration of the principal civil service pension scheme as suitable for market testing. New information technology for administration of the scheme, which will start to become operational towards the end of this year, will facilitate the market-testing process. This will also enable service standards to be raised and costs reduced. It will however first be necessary for Parliament to approve an order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act which will remove the legal impediment that at present exists to market testing PCSPS administration.

Occupational pension arrangements for civil servants will continue to be provided through the PCSPS. The PCSPS will be managed and controlled by the Office of Public Service and Science.

AIDS

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the research work his Department sponsors on HIV/AIDS which incorporates international co-operation. [24694]

Mr. Horam: A list of current research work into AIDS/HIV funded by my Department through the research councils, and involving international co-operation has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. This list show the titles of the projects, by whom they were carried out and, where information is available, the resources allocated.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the research work sponsored by his Department and the amount spent on each project for AIDS/HIV treatment and prevention for the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [24693]

Mr. Horam: The Medical Research Council provided data in answer to a similar question on 11 May 1995, and this was placed in the Libraries of both Houses. Equivalent information for the other research councils funded by my Department which have undertaken research into AIDS/HIV treatment and prevention is as follows:

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

EU Fishing Industries

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has about the (a) Government construction grants, (b) fuel subsidies, (c) enforcement of minimum/maximum catch sizes, (d) enforcement of log book reporting and (e) elimination of secret fish holds in each of the other fishing nations of the EEC. [23986]

Mr. Jack: On construction grants and fuel grants, I refer the Hon. Member to the answer that I gave on 6 February 1995, Official Report, column 84.

Latest information on the results of inspections on member states' vessels is provided in the summary tables for 1993, produced by the Commission in accordance with Commission regulation (EEC) No. 3561/85: a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Fish Imports

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from east coast fishermen regarding the importation of cheap fish from Russia, Norway and Iceland. [24152]

Mr. Jack: I regularly consult producers' interests on the question of imports from outside the European Union and this was one of the issues raised with me by fishermen's leaders on my recent visit to Tynemouth earlier this month. Subsequent to that, I have not heard directly on this matter from east coast fishermen.

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will impose quota restrictions on the importation of cheap fish from Russia, Norway and Iceland. [24151]

Mr. Jack: Mechanisms already exist within European Union legislation to take action against imports from outside the EU where they can be shown to be having a disruptive effect on the market over a period of time. Unqualified restrictions on imports would serve only to prevent UK processors from obtaining the raw material supplies that they need to maintain the range of fish products available to the consumer. I believe that there is scope for better communication within the industry to help match supply and demand. I hope shortly to call a meeting of interested parties to explore the issue further.

Access to the Countryside

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will set out for (a) the countryside access scheme allowing public access to set-aside land and (b) the scheme allowing access for land in environmentally sensitive areas (i) its number and direction of such agreements, (ii) the location and size of these sites, (iii) what steps have been taken to inform the public of these access opportunities, (iv) the payment made to the landowner of each site, (v) the administrative costs of these schemes, (vi) whether public access was available on each site prior to designation under the schemes. [24618]

Mr. Jack: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Countryside Access Scheme

(i) There are currently 78 agreements in England. There are similar schemes in Wales and Scotland.

(ii) Details of access agreements have been lodged in the library of the House. The following table gives a summary of the position by county.

County	Size (in hectares)
Bedfordshire	91.3
Cambridgeshire	93.63
Essex	126.93
Hertfordshire	22.05
Norfolk	111.06
Buckinghamshire	21.57
Suffolk	142.52
Cumbria	4.45
Wiltshire	41.09
Warwickshire	16.7
Gloucestershire	14.33
Yorkshire	52.04
Humberside	14.74
Devon	15
Cornwall	15
Oxfordshire	42.55
Surrey	7.21
Hampshire	6.89
Kent	26.27
Northamptonshire	75.5
Nottinghamshire	21.78
Shropshire	1.68

(iii) Participants are asked to send a map of the land opened to public access provided by the Ministry, to their local parish council. Further copies of maps are sent to the Countryside Commission, the Rambler's Association and, where appropriate, the local national park authority. Members of the public can request free copies of these maps.

(iv) The first payments to participants will be made early in 1996. Participants will receive an annual rate of £90 per hectare of route opened and £45 per hectare of open field opened to public access for a period of five years. Participants can normally only claim up to a maximum of 15 hectares of public access on any one farm.

(v) In 1994–95 administrative costs were £300,000 in England. This figure includes significant start-up costs as the scheme only opened for applications in September 1994.

(vi) Project officers inspect every potential public access site, any land where there is evidence of existing de facto public access will not normally be accepted into the scheme. Similarly, land which is designated as a public right of way or land to which public access has been secured under another publicly funded scheme is not eligible.

(b) Environmentally Sensitive Areas Scheme

(i) 26 management agreements with access tier.

(ii) Details of the access agreements have been lodged with the library of the House. The following table provides a summary by Environmentally Sensitive Area.

ESA	Number of agreements	Total length (in kilometres)
Broads	4	4.62
Pennine dales	2	0.91
Somerset levels and moors	1	0.31
South Downs	1	1.38
Suffolk river valleys	1	0.98
Exmoor	2	1.01
Lake District	10	7.55
South West Peak	1	1.25
Dartmoor	3	5.84
Upper Thames tributaries	1	0.48

(iii) Maps of completed access routes are sent to the relevant parish councils, the Countryside Commission, the National Park Authority (Where applicable) and the Rambler's Association. These maps may also be sent to other organisations and members of the public, on request.

(iv) Agreement holders receive £170 per kilometre of access route.

(v) Unlike the countryside access scheme, it is not possible to disaggregate the costs of administration of the public access tier from the total costs of administering the ESA scheme.

(vi) Only land which offers new or additional access opportunities is eligible for the scheme. Land which is subject to an existing right of way is not accepted.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [25536]

Mrs Browning: A further report on BSE in Great Britain is available today. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

The report provides information about the continuing decline in incidence of the disease, further proposed changes to the controls and the on-going research programme.

The number of cases of BSE being reported at present is 45.3 per cent. fewer than at the same time last year and there is continued downturn in incidence of BSE in five-year-old and younger animals. Both changes are attributed to the ban on feeding ruminant protein to ruminant animals which was introduced in 1988.

I have also arranged for copies of the BSE progress report presented to the Office International des Epizooties this week to be placed in the Library of the House.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Mr. Clappison : To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for the future of the countryside stewardship scheme. [25537]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government are publishing today a public consultation document which seeks views on the development of the Government's strategy for environmental land management schemes in England. The consultation document results from a review of the future role of the countryside stewardship scheme and of ways of better integrating and focusing all environmental land management schemes in England, announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment last year on 21 June 1994, Official Report, column 106. The review was carried out by a working group comprising officials from my Department, the Department of the Environment, the Countryside Commission, English Heritage and English Nature. Copies of the consultation document are available in the Library of the House.

The Government believe that environmental land management schemes are one important means of promoting environmental and amenity benefits in the countryside. The conclusion of the pilot phase of countryside stewardship and the decision that it should be transferred to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in 1996 represent a landmark in the development of such schemes and an opportune moment to review their strategic development.

The main proposals of the working group are that:

the countryside stewardship scheme should continue to be based on the key principles established during the pilot phase; subject to the availability of resources, the full range of stewardship options should be retained; countryside stewardship and the environmentally sensitive areas scheme should be developed into the Ministry's two core environmental schemes when I take over responsibility for stewardship from April 1996;

the farm and conservation grant scheme should not continue as a separate scheme in England but capital grants for conservation purposes should be integrated into other schemes, principally countryside stewardship;

further scheme mergers should be considered once the new agri-environment schemes have been operating long enough to be evaluated; subject to resources being available, the focus of countryside stewardship should be broadened to include two new options targeting traditional stone walls and banks and the remaining unimproved areas of old meadow and pasture on neutral and acid soils throughout lowland England;

the ministry should develop a fuller information service to act as a first stop shop for information and basic advice on the range of environmental schemes for farmers and land managers.

In addition, I have decided in consultation with my right hon. Friend that a national steering group should be set up to advise the Ministry on the objectives, targets and priorities of all its environmental incentive schemes, their effective development and deployment and their monitoring and evaluation, and that liaison arrangements should also be made regionally.

The objective of these proposals is to improve the integration and focus, and hence the effectiveness and efficiency of the Government's range of environmental land management schemes. They are designed to improve the service provided to land managers and to yield greater environmental benefits in the countryside. As such, they would represent a major development of the Government's strategy for such schemes.

My right hon. Friend and I look forward to receiving the responses to this consultation document, which will be fully taken into account in the Government's preparation of the forthcoming rural White Paper.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Museum Entry Charges

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is his estimate of the revenue accruing to the Exchequer from charges for entry to museums. [22400]

Mr. Dorrell: Of the 17 museums and galleries directly sponsored by my Department, seven charge for admission to their collections and exhibitions. During 1994–95, the income generated by these organisations for admissions is estimated at £11.39 million.

Information about revenue raised from admissions to local authority and independent museums is not held centrally.

ENVIRONMENT

Urban Programmes

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the total amount of resources available for local authorities for urban programmes for the last year for which figures are available; and if he will list the allocations to individual authorities. [24359]

Mr. Curry: Urban initiatives by local authorities are supported through main programme expenditure by several Government Departments. This is supplemented by targeted programmes which have been brought together into the single regeneration budget. SRB resources are made available to local authorities and other organisations, reflecting the partnership-based approach of many schemes. In total the SRB will fund more than £1.3 billion of regeneration work in 1995–96 in urban and other areas. The Department's 1995 annual report, a copy of which is in the Library, provides detailed information about the programmes supported.

Sheltered and Supported Housing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he and his ministerial colleagues have made of the savings to the Exchequer that voluntary organisations provide with sheltered and supported housing. [24026] respectively of the total sheltered and supported rented housing available for elderly people. Research published last year by the Department[1] found that 28 per cent. of Abbeyfield societies and 100 per cent. of almshouses capital costs were met from non-exchequer sources. Seven per cent. of Abbeyfield and 25 per cent. of almshouses revenue costs were also met from non-exchequer sources.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Two of the key voluntary providers of sheltered and supported housing are the Abbeyfield societies and almshouses. In 1990 their housing stock represented 1 per cent. and 3 per cent.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the Government's conclusions following the completion of consultation on their proposals for extending compulsory competitive tendering to information technology, finance and personnel services. [25561]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: We have been discussing how best to give effect to the Government's decision to extend compulsory competitive tendering to white collar professional and corporate services with local authority representatives and other interested parties since early 1993. That consultation has proved valuable to all parties and I am grateful to all those who play a part.

Last summer we put in place statutory instruments which extended CCT to legal and construction and property services. In the autumn we issued consultation papers setting out the proposed regime for information technology, finance and personnel services. Those attracted between them over 600 responses to my Department, together with 112 to the Scottish Office and 54 to the Welsh Office.

I have considered all the points made carefully with colleagues in all the departments with an interest in the services concerned and am now able to announce the Government's final decisions on CCT for these remaining services.

IT Services

Taking first IT services, we have concluded that both the percentage competition requirement of 70 per cent. for this work and the implementation timetable set out in the consultation paper are reasonable and do not intend to alter either, save that English shire authorities remaining unchanged following review by the Local Government Commission will now be expected to follow the timetable I announced on 29 March at column 644. There is no case for any other substantive change to the proposals put forward in last year's consultation paper. On matters of detail, I am now able to:

confirm that we intend to make an exemption for fire brigade mobilisation and communications systems. The precise wording of this is being discussed with fire service representatives and a specific exemption order will be brought forward in due course. The defined activity does not include fire brigades' radio systems; confirm the proposed credit for in-house IT support to contractors who have taken on other work on behalf of a defined authority, allowing the authority to count this work towards satisfying its CCT obligations, provided it had been the contractors decision to use the IT in question.

confirm the proposed amendment to guidance on the avoidance of anti-competitive behaviour which will allow an authority to require that contractors use specified software or hardware, including the authority's own systems, where this can be justified on operational grounds.

I have decided to reject arguments for a short term exemption from CCT for project work underway at the time competition bites.

Finance Services

We have given very careful consideration to the competition percentage for finance services. The Government wish to put real pressure on authorities to market test theses services and I am confident that all authorities can achieve the competition requirement of 35 per cent. proposed in the consultation paper. We do not, therefore, intend to change this figure.

In reaching this conclusion we have had in our minds the Government's commitment that there should be no pressure for compulsory testing of housing benefit or council tax benefit administration. Similarly, the Government have made clear that we are not seeking to compel market testing of those revenues tasks which are to be the subject of an order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 permitting the work to be undertaken by third parties. My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Social Security and I consider that authorities can achieve this figure without necessitating the market testing of benefits work or the revenues tasks I have mentioned.

We accept that there are some statutory constraints to contracting out aspects of revenues or benefits work, and many of the services are sensitive. Nevertheless a number of authorities have already shown that, even with these limitations, market testing of this work can improve the quality of the service they are able to offer, and we would encourage them to explore this option on a voluntary basis. Should they choose to do so, this can be counted towards satisfying their obligations under the CCT regime.

Should the percentage chosen in the event be at such a level as to compel any authority to market test benefits administration or other work which we have said should only be exposed voluntarily, we will consider further the arguments for change. Where individual authorities can demonstrate they cannot meet the figure without being compelled to test benefits work the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Social Security and I will consider sympathetically any request they may put forward for a specific exemption.

In the case of education-related benefits service and student awards administration my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and I have concluded that this work is more closely integrated with the education service that any other part of the authority. The volume of work these services make up is small, and we have concluded there would be little benefit, and possibly some disruption of services, if they were included in the CCT regime. We will, however, wish to consider carefully other methods for improving the efficiency of these services.

Also on finance services, we intend to make two further changes to the proposed regime. The first is to allow a temporary exemption from CCT for project work on the development and implementation of financial information and management systems underway when CCT bites. This will allow internal management changes, some of which may flow from CCT, to be implemented smoothly.

Secondly, I intend to allow English metropolitan districts and London boroughs an additional six months to implement CCT extension, taking their start date to 1

April 1997. This recognises the foreshortened timescale facing these authorities as they prepare for CCT and the need for an adequate lead-in time before new contracts can become operational. The timetable for reorganised shire authorities remains unchanged from that set out in the consultation paper, that which status quo shires will be expected to meet was explained in my announcement of 29 March.

Personnel Services

Turning lastly to personnel services, we have concluded that the defined activity should be amended to reflect practical concerns raised about the difficulties of bringing certain work into the CCT regime. We intend to specifically exclude:

(i) all training undertaken by a local authority on behalf of a Training and Enterprise Council (TEC), or, in Scotland, Local Enterprise Council (LEC).

(ii) personnel work undertaken by local authorities as members of consortia (with educational institutions and others) for the pre- and post-qualification training of social workers.

(iii) operational training of fire fighters.

Colleagues in the Department for Education and I also intend to allow in-service teacher training and other education-related training funded through the grant for education support and training—GEST—to be counted towards satisfying the competition requirement in the same way as we have agreed delegated spending under the LMS initiative should count. In Wales Athrawon Bro services will similarly count.

We have also considered carefully authorities concerns that the competition percentage, which we proposed be 35 per cent., was too high and may compel them to introduce organisational changes or to tender unsuitable work. We have concluded that a reduction in the figure is necessary to accommodate these concerns and therefore intend to set the competition requirement at 30 per cent

The study of the options for setting the competition requirement undertaken by KPMG on our behalf illustrated that many authorities already actively test the market for certain aspects of personnel work. Much specialist training, for example, is already provided through contract by external organisations. Since they already have a good record in market testing, CCT should present no new difficulties to authorities, For this reason, I have concluded that no additional time is required to implement personnel CCT. All authorities will therefore be expected to meet the timetable set out in the consultation paper, with the exception of status quo English shire authorities, for which I announced a revised timetable on 29 March.

Finally for personnel services we also intend to increase the de-minimis exemption for personnel work from £300,000 to £400,000 to permit smaller authorities to protect core services.

Fire Authorities

The regime I have described will, subject to certain exemptions outlined in the consultation papers, apply to all defined authorities which are subject to CCT, with the exception of police authorities, metropolitan fire and civil defence authorities, including London, and combined fire authorities. CCT for IT, finance and personnel in police authorities is the subject of separate consultation still underway.

For single purpose fire authorities my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State at the Home Office and I have now decided that, having exempted operational training the competition requirement for the remaining work within the defined activity of personnel services should be reduced to 15 per cent. For IT and finance work the competition requirements remain at 70 per cent. and 35 per cent. respectively, as for other authorities. The implementation timetable for English single purpose fire authorities will remain aligned with that applying to metropolitan districts and London boroughs, save that any new combined authority created following the implementation of local government reorganisation will have two years from the local date for reorganisation to take effect before CCT will bite.

Conclusion

I will be bringing forward a draft order to add these new services to the CCT regime shortly. Once the House has had the opportunity to debate and approve this order we will bring forward further regulations to put in place the remainder of the regime I have today announced.

The regime I have described today will apply to defined authorities in England, Scotland and Wales. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales is considering comments made on the timetable for implementing CCT extension in Wales and will make an announcement in due course. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland announced the timetable which the new Scottish unitary authorities will be expected to follow on 27 January.

This announcement is intended to give all authorities a clear basis on which to plan for the extension of CCT. We will write with copies of the new statutory instruments and detailed guidance on each of the new services as soon as possible.

Following extensive consultation we have now established the statutory framework on which the extension of CCT to all of the white collar services will proceed. This is challenging but, I believe, fair and offers a flexible regime which meets many of the concerns raised with us. I urge all those concerned to strive for the successful implementation of CCT to ensure that local people receive the acknowledged benefits that competition may bring.

Anti-competitive Behaviour

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he has decided to take against Ribble Valley district council, Sandwell metropolitan borough council and South Lakeland district council following the notices served on them last year for anti-competitive behaviour. [25562]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: On 20 July 1994, my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, served a notice under section 13 of the Local Government Act 1988 on South Lakeland district council, setting out his view that the authority had acted anti-competitively during a competition for ground maintenance work. On 30 September he served a similar notice on Sandwell metropolitan borough council, also for ground maintenance work, and on 21 November he served a similar notice on Ribble Valley district council, for refuse collection work.

My right hon. Friend has given careful consideration to the responses to the notices and has today given the authorities directions under section 14 of the Local Government Act 1988.

South Lakeland is required to retender the grounds maintenance work which was the subject of the notice so that new arrangements are in place by 1 April 1996, and to seek the Secretary of State's consent if it wishes to reassign the work to its direct service organisation.

The direction given to Sandwell requires the authority to seek the Secretary of State's consent if it wishes to award the ground maintenance work which was subject of the notice to its direct service organisation when the current arrangements expire in 1997.

Ribble Valley has been directed to retender its refuse collection work so that new arrangements are in place by 1 July 1996, and to seek the Secretary of State's consent if it wishes to reassign the work to its direct services organisation.

Minister for Bristol

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what expenditure has been incurred by the office of the Minister for Bristol since the present Minister took up post. [24525]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 17 May 1995]: Since taking up post, the total expenditure incurred by Lord Astor's office in making visits to Bristol amounts to £1,159.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what dates the present Minister for Bristol has visited the city on official business; and whom he met. [24526]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 17 May 1995]: The present sponsor Minister for Bristol has visited the city on six occasions. The dates of these visits were:

14 October 1994
11 November 1994
16 January 1995
17 February 1995
15 March 1995
12 May 1995

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what initiatives the present Minister for Bristol has taken for the benefit of the people of the city. [24527]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 17 May 1995]: The present sponsor Minister for Bristol has, during the first few months of his appointment, been working to encourage partnerships between the public and private sectors which are vital to the future success of Bristol and to capitalise on the substantial public investment secured for the city through, among other things, the Bristol development corporation and single regeneration budget challenge fund.

Autistic Children

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of local authorities provide specialist facilities for autistic children; and if he will make a statement. [23677]

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 15 May, Official Report, column 13.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants were awarded (a) weekly industrial disablement benefit and (b) reduced earnings allowance in each of the last five years for which figures are available in Newham; how many claims for industrial disablement benefit and reduced earnings allowance were allowed in each of the last six years for which figures are available; and what were the total amounts of (i) lump sum back payments and (ii) gratuities awarded in each year in Newham. [23790]

Mr. Hague: The administration of industrial injuries disablement benefit is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 17 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about awards of Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit (IIDB) and Reduced Earnings Allowance (REA) in the Benefits Agency's Newham District.

Information about awards of benefit, or claims allowed, is not available for all of the periods requested because collection of the relevant data on an individual office basis did not begin until October 1991. The figures for 1991–92 relating to awards and claims allowed therefore cover a period of only six months. The available information is at Annex A.

The distinction between the figures for IIDB allowed and awarded is that some successful claims do not attract benefit because they are assessed at less than 14%. On the other hand, all claims allowed for REA result in an award of benefit.

Information about lump sum back payments and gratuities is not readily available and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Annex A: Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit

St. Paul's Angels Nursery

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was the expected working life of St. Paul's Angels benefit agency nursery, Brixton, when it was opened; [24711]

(2) if St. Paul's angels benefit agency nursery, Brixton, is able to offer vacant places to the general public; [24709]

(3) what are the grounds for closing St. Paul's Angels benefit agency nursery, Brixton, after September. [24710]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 17 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the St Paul's Angels Nursery in Brixton.

The nursery was opened on 19 June 1991. No timescale was put on the life of the nursery, but to ensure continuing value for money it has been subject to financial review since it opened.

Since 1991, with the transfer of the bulk of benefit processing work from Brixton to Belfast there has been a significant reduction of locally based Benefits Agency staff to about 70 on the Brixton site. Despite vigorous efforts by management, take up of places has been low and from September 1995, no District staff plan to use the nursery. A review, conducted in March 1995, shows that the nursery does not satisfy the Treasury value for money criteria and there is a financial shortfall.

I should add that local management have attempted to accommodate domestic arrangements by extensive use of flexible working patterns, including allowing staff to work part time.

It is not possible to open the nursery to the public as the Benefits Agency may not trade as a business in competition with the private sector. The Agency is consulting once more with other Government Departments and Agencies in the locality to see if they would be willing to pay the necessary subsidies in respect of their staff's use of the facility. Until this has been done no decision about the future of the nursery can be taken.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Incapacity Benefits

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on what date he received the memorandum from Disability Wales on incapacity benefits, posted to his Department on 4 December 1994; on what date he sent an acknowledgement of receipt of this letter to Disability Wales; and when he expects his Department to answer the letter. [23950]

Mr. Hague: A copy of the letter dated 4 December 1994 from Disability Wales was received on 22 March.

A reply was sent on 17 May.

Fraud

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the estimated amount of benefit fraud in each year since 1979. [23674]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information requested is not available. The benefit savings figures for the fraud detected from 1986–87 are in the table.

Year	Benefit Savings £ million
1986–87	[1]144
1987–88	[1]196
1988–89	[1]262
1989–90	[1]309
1990–91	[2]341
1991–92	[2]427
1992–93	[2]558
1993–94	[2]654

[1] Count by district offices.
[2] Count by area fraud sectors after the internal fraud organisation changed.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, (1) what plans he has to exempt sheltered and supported housing from the remit of the proposed changes to housing benefit; [24023]

(2) what discussions he has had with the National Federation of Housing Associations and other interested bodies with respect to the proposed housing benefit changes, with particular reference to sheltered and supported housing; [24025]

(3) what savings he is expecting by the expected reductions in housing benefit for sheltered and supported housing; [24027]

(4) what analysis was made by his Department of the extra costs that sheltered and supported housing would bear under his proposed housing benefit changes. [24024]

Mr. Roger Evans: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has recently received the report of the Social Security advisory committee following its public consultation on the proposed changes to housing benefit. We will be considering carefully the position of sheltered and supported housing under the changes as part of our response to the report.

Amputees

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the (i) categories and (ii) range of clothing grants which may be paid to (a) single upper limb amputees, (b) double upper limb amputees, (c) single lower limb amputees, (d) double lower limb amputees, (e) amputees who have lost one upper and one lower limb. (f) triple amputees and (g) those who have had all four limbs amputated. [24122]

Mr. Hague: An allowance may be awarded to an arm or leg amputee or other war disablement pensioners whose pensioned disablement and/or prosthesis causes wear and tear of his clothing. Payment of the allowance is not restricted to amputees. The allowance may be paid at one of two rates as follows:

	£ per annum
Higher rate	129.00
Lower rate	82.00

If the pensioner wears a single artificial limb—other than a tilting-table limb—the lower allowance is awarded. If he wears a tilting-table limb or has more than one artificial limb, the higher rate is awarded. In any other case where the Secretary of State is satisfied that as a result of the pensioned disablement there is exceptional wear and tear of the pensioner's clothing, the allowance may be awarded at a rate not exceeding the higher rate.

The rate paid to an amputee pensioner is not solely dependent on the site on amputation nor on the number of amputations but on a medical assessment as to the extent the pensioner's accepted disablement and/or prosthesis causes were and tear of his clothing.

Fraud

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of claimants of incapacity for work benefit who are likely to attempt fraud through the false or unnecessary use of wheelchairs; and if he will make a statement. [24076]

Mr. Hague: We have not made such an estimate.

Low Income Statistics

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will publish a response to the Social Security Select Committee's report, "Low Income Families: Low Income Statistics:", published on 21 March 1995. [25538]

Mr. Burt: A Government response to the Social Security Select Committee's report, "Low Income Families: Low Income Statistics" has been published today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were (a) the running costs of the Child Support Agency and (b) the costs incurred by his Department in dealing with Child Support Agency matters in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95. [24831]

Mr. Burt: The annual accounts for the year ended 31 March 1994 were published on 28 November 1994. These included an expenditure statement prepared on an accruals basis and show that the net cost of operations during 1993–94 was £139 million. Similar accounts will be prepared for 1994–95 and published in the agency annual report.

It is not possible to identify separately the expenditure incurred by the Departmental headquarters in respect of Child Support Agency matters.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average length of time the Child Support Agency takes to make an assessment; and thereafter in what period those assessed have to make a payment. [20138]

Mr. Burt [Pursuant to his reply Official Report, column 106, 1 May.]: The information I gave regarding the time taken to complete an assessment was incorrect. The correct information is as follows:

The length of time taken to complete an assessment is variable as it depends on the receipt of information from various sources. Once the agency has all the information it needs, it is currently taking 99 days to complete an assessment. Where no payment is received within 14 days from notification of the maintenance assessment, the agency can consider enforcement action.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update (a) table G2.04, relating to benefit status of parent or person with care and absent parent, (b) table G2.07 relating to net income from employment of absent parents where maintenance has been assessed and (c) table G2.08 relating to distribution of maintenance assessments of the "Social Security Statistics 1994" by reference to the most recent data from the caseload of the Child Support Agency. [24836]

Mr. Burt: The information requested, based on information available at March 1995, is in the tables.

Severe Disability Premium

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the cost implications for income support for severe disability premium of the Court of Appeal's decision in the case of Anne Marie Bate; how many cases are potentially involved; and if he will make a statement. [24880]

Mr. Roger Evans: On 9 May the House of Lords Judicial Committee granted the Secretary of State and chief adjudication officer leave to appeal the Court of Appeal judgment in the case of Anne Marie Bate. This means that the exact impact of the judgment on the payment of the severe disability premium within income support will depend on the decision of the House of Lords.

It is difficult to assess the cost implications and numbers of potential cases. The judgment could result in an estimated 45,000 income support claimants being entitled to between one and eight days severe disability premium as a result of the two day period between the judgment and the introduction of amending legislation restoring the original policy intention behind the premium. Additional costs could also arise from appeals currently within the appeal system or later appeals.

Payment of benefit arising as a result of the case has been suspended pending the result of the appeal.

Income Support

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the savings to the Exchequer from the lower rate of income support benefit payable to those aged between 18 and 25 years. [22407]

Mr. Roger Evans [Pursuant to his reply 9 May Official Report column 391]: The information I gave regarding the current annual cost of raising the income support rate for 18 to 24-year olds was incorrect due to a typographical error. The correct information is as follows.

The current annual cost of raising the income support rate for 18 to 24 year olds to that payable for single people aged 25 and above would be about £420 million.

Notes:

1. The figure is based on the 1990, 1991, 1992 Family Expenditure Surveys, uprated to 1995–96 prices and benefit levels.
2. The figure includes the additional cost of linked increases in housing benefit and council tax benefit.

SCOTLAND

Equal Opportunities

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made within his Department on equal opportunities matters. [21481]

Mr. Lang: The Scottish Office as an employer, has made considerable progress on equal opportunities issues. Its initiatives have been based on the 1984 report, on "Equality of Opportunity for Women in the Civil Service", and also on the Cabinet Office "Programmes of Action on Race and Disability".

Details of these initiatives can be found in the following Cabinet Office publications:

Civil Service Data Summary 1994

Equal Opportunities for Women in the Civil Service—10 Year Progress Report 1984–94

Annual Reports on the Progress of Women and People of Ethnic Origin.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress he hopes to achieve in his Department over the next three months to push forward the declaration signed in October 1994 at the Vienna conference in preparation for the fourth UN conference on women; and if he will agree to incorporate a section on equal opportunities in his Department's annual report. [21483]

Mr. Lang: The Government are committed to the principles set out in the regional platform for action agreed at the preparatory conference in Vienna for the fourth UN world conference on women. We have taken these forward through a wide range of programmes and initiatives and will continue to do so.

In line with the Government's commitment in the White Paper "Taking Forward Continuity and Change", the Scottish Office is committed to reporting on equal opportunities in its annual report.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the gender assessment being prepared by his Department. [21482]

Mr. Lang: The Scottish Office policy, in line with guidance issued in 1992 by the ministerial group on women's issues, is that policy proposals should ensure that unlawful or unjustifiable sex or race discrimination does not occur and that similar principles apply to people with disabilities, older people or ex-offenders. This scrutiny is part of a continuous and routine process, as part of policy advice to Ministers.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which Minister in his Department has responsibility for equal opportunities issues. [21480]

Mr. Lang: I am responsible, along with my ministerial team, for ensuring that Government policy on equal opportunities is implemented in the Scottish Office.

Closed Circuit Television

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what principle determines the levels of funding allocated to local authorities for closed circuit television systems in Scotland as compared with England and Wales. [23641]

Mr. Lang: Capital consent allocations to Scottish local authorities are not project specific and it is for local authorities themselves to determine their own priorities for their areas, including the provision of closed circuit television systems, from within the total resource available to them.

A recent competition by the Home Office to fund closed circuit television systems in England and Wales was not emulated in Scotland. In Scotland we remain firmly of the view that funding for the installation of CCTV should continue to be provided by joint ventures involving local businesses, local authorities and other groups who derive a direct benefit from the resource.

These financial arrangements, involving a large public sector commitment, have worked well. I am glad to say that there are already 13 CCTV schemes in Scotland, with more in prospect.

Public Bodies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the non-departmental public bodies, arms-length organisations, and executive agencies which can be referred to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration. [24212]

Mr. Lang: The following non-departmental public bodies, sponsored by my Department fall within the jurisdiction of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration.

Crofters Commission

New Town Development Corporations

Red Deer Commission

Scottish Arts Council

Scottish Homes

Scottish Legal Aid Board
Scottish Medical Practices Committee
Scottish Natural Heritage
Scottish Sports Council
Scottish Tourist Board

Executive agencies are within the jurisdiction of the Parliamentary Commissioner in the same way as their parent Department. Scottish Office executive agencies are:

Scottish Prison Service
Historic Scotland
Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency
Scottish Agricultural Science Agency
Scottish Office Pensions Agency
Students Awards Agency for Scotland

Water Boards

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money has been allocated to set up the three new water boards in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [24805]

Mr. Kynoch: A total of £9.7 million has been allocated for grant-in-aid to the new water authorities in 1995–96. The allocations to individual water authorities is shown in the respective grant-in-aid tables at chapter 4 of the Scottish Office departmental report, published as Cm 2814.

Lucia Martin Johnson

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will intervene in the case of Lucia Martin Johnson of Craigendmuir park, Cardowan, Stepps, to prevent her removal from the United Kingdom. [24863]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Under the provisions of the Hague convention on the civil aspects of international child abduction, which were incorporated in to the laws of the United Kingdom by the Child Abduction and Custody Act 1985, such decisions are for the Court of Session and not for my right hon. Friend.

Smoking

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what facilities are provided and arrangements made for the well-being and comfort of staff who (a) smoke and (b) do not wish to be affected by smoking at (i) the workstation and (ii) rest, recreation and refreshment facilities at Dover house, Whitehall, London. [25233]

Mr. Lang: My Department introduced restrictions on smoking in 1990 under which smoking is not permitted by staff at any time in work areas, reception areas, corridors, toilets, lifts, conference rooms and staff restaurants, except where there are designated smoking areas. In Dover house there is a designated smoking room in which staff may smoke.

Fisheries Committee

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what considerations led to the decision not to release externally the annual report of the electricity Fisheries Committee. [24189]

Sir Hector Monro: [holding answer 15 May 1995]: The annual reports which the Fisheries Committee has made to my right hon. Friend in recent years, were produced on its own initiative. There is no statutory requirement for them. They were made without any expectation on the part of the committee, or hydro-electric companies, that the reports would be given wider distribution. For that reason, these reports have not been released externally. However, the committee will be informed that any future annual reports will be made available on request.

HEALTH

Charges and Receipts

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 177, what assumptions informed her estimate of charges and receipts in tables of the departmental report for 1994–95 and 1995–96. [23620]

Mr. Sackville: The estimates of charges and receipts for 1994–95 and 1995–96 were published in table 3 of the departmental report, Cmnd 2812.

The estimates of hospital and community health services charges and receipts for 1994–95 were based on the latest national health service trust audited summarisation accounts and on accounts and estimates from health authorities. The 1995–96 hospital and community health services current estimate is based on projections of past trends in receipts and will be revised in the usual way as further information becomes available. The HCHS capital receipts for 1994–95 and 1995–96 assume that some expected land sales which were not completed in 1994–95 will take place in the following year.

The estimate of family health service charges and receipts for 1994–95, reflected the charge levels then in force and forecasts of the volume of prescriptions and dental treatments. The planned increase for 1995–96 reflects the increase in family health services charges announced on 22 February, updated forecasts of the volume of prescriptions and dental treatments, and the knock on effect on charges of the increase in dental fees from 1 April, following the recommendation of the Doctors and Dentists Review Body.

Dental Services

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the number of adults who no longer have access to NHS dentists. [24406]

Mr. Malone: All family health services authorities in England report that they can help patients who contact them to find national health service dentists.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if her Department will undertake an assessment of the report commissioned by the Austrian Government in 1993 on the role of fluorides in the prevention of caries. [24803]

Mr. Malone: Yes, when it is received.

Operations

Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average cost of (a) a hip and (b) a cataract operation undertaken by hospitals in Derby. [24215]

Mr. Sackville: The information is not available centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to contact Mr. Graham Rudd, chairman of Southern Derbyshire health authority, for details.

Annual Reports

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will introduce legislation to make it a statutory requirement for (a) the Advisory Committee on National Health Service Drugs, (b) the Advisory Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Food, (c) the Committee on the Carcinogenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment, (d) the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Food Policy, (e) the Committee for Monitoring Agreements on Tobacco Advertising and Sponsorships, (f) the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment, (g) the Committee on the Mutagenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment and (h) the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment, to lay an annual report before Parliament. [24203]

Mr. Sackville: There are no plans to introduce legislation to make it a statutory requirement for any of these bodies to lay their annual reports before Parliament. The following bodies already publish their annual reports through HMSO:

Advisory Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Food;

Committee on the Carcinogenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment;

Committee for Monitoring Agreements on Tobacco Advertising and Sponsorship;

Committee on the Mutagenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment.

Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment.

The annual report for the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Food Policy is available from the body itself. Reports from the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment are published by HMSO, although not necessarily annually.

The Advisory Committee on National Health Service Drugs does not publish an annual report. Its recommendations are made to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State who considers them in the formulation of policy.

Nurse Training

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many individuals have commenced nursing training in each of the last five years. [24354]

Mr. Sackville: Data on the number of entrants to initial pre-registration nursing education are collected by the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting. Copies of the board's annual report for 1993–1994 are available in the Library.

Kawasaki Disease

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 28 February, Official Report, column 495, what information about Kawasaki disease has now been made available to doctors through (a) her Department and (b) health authorities. [24080]

Mr. Sackville: The chief medical officer plans to include advice on the diagnosis and treatment of Kawasaki disease in his "Update" newsletter which is sent to all doctors in contract with the national health service. Copies are also placed in the Library.

Details of the information which health authorities make available to doctors is not collected centrally.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will support the campaign to make the people of the United Kingdom more aware of myalgic encephalomyelitis; if she will increase official recognition of the disease; and if she will make a statement. [24096]

Mr. Sackville: We recognise what is increasingly being referred to as chronic fatigue syndrome as a potentially debilitating and distressing complex and we would support any informed efforts to raise awareness of this condition. Unfortunately, the causes of CFS are not understood, nor is there a generally agreed method of treatment.

The national task force on CFS, PVFS—post viral fatigue syndrome—and ME, which is independent of the Department, has produced a report. With a view to securing progress and promoting the development of a professional consensus, the chief medical officer has invited the conference of medical royal colleges to consider the report. The views of the conference of colleges will be of much assistance to the Department in helping to determine the best way forward.

Temazepam

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she next plans to meet representatives of the Advisory Committee on the Misuse of Drugs to discuss the rescheduling of temazepam; and if she will make a statement. [24120]

Mr Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Lord President of the Council gave the hon. Member for Ayr (Mr. Gallie) on 10 May at column 756.

Capital Expenditure

Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the capital expenditure on (a) the Derbyshire royal infirmary, (b) Derby City general hospital and (c) the Queens medical centre, Nottingham since (i) 1979 and (ii) 1992. [24213]

Mr. Sackville: Information on capital expenditure is not available centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to contact David Dawson, Norman Woods and Martin Suthers, chairmen of Derbyshire royal infirmary, Derby City general hospital and Queen's medical centre, respectively for details.

Peto Institute

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions she has had with the Foreign Secretary in respect of the transfer of moneys promised to the Peto institute in Hungary to the Peto institute in Britain; [24503]

(2) if the Peto institute complies with the criteria under the section 64 scheme, to apply for a grant this year; and what other financial assistance is available to the Foundation for Conductive Education. [24504]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 18 April at column 113. Any application from the Foundation for Conductive Education for funding in 1996–97 under the section 64 scheme would be considered on its merits. The Health and Education Departments keep in close touch with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office about the agreement between the United Kingdom and Hungarian Governments covering the construction of a new international Peto institute in Budapest and I met the Hungarian Minister of Health in Budapest on 19 September 1994 to discuss progress.

Rubber Gloves

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what dangers her Department has identified in the use of certain types of rubber gloves used by health service workers; what assessment her Department has made of allergic reactions caused by the use of rubber surgical gloves used by health service workers; and what advice her Department gives to DHAs as to the purchasing of rubber surgical gloves. [24580]

Mr. Sackville: The Department is investigating claims of an apparent increase in the incidence of latex sensitivity in the last two years. The Medical Devices Agency is consulting experts in the field and reviewing survey information from other countries. A safety notice will be issued shortly drawing attention to the fact of latex sensitivity. Health authorities and national health service trusts are advised to buy surgeon's gloves and examination gloves which meet the Department's specification and quality standards, as do all such gloves supplied through the national and divisional contracts of the NHS Supplies Authority. Non-latex gloves are available under those contracts, if required.

Richard Linford

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will call for a report into the medical care given to Mr. Richard Linford and Mr. Christopher Edwards, prior to their imprisonment; and is she will make a statement; [24665]

(2) if she will make a statement on the treatment of Mr. Richard Linford at Broomfield hospital, Chelmsford following his arrest for assault in November 1994. [24664]

Mr. Bowis: North Essex health authority, Essex social services and the Home Office, representing the Prison Service, are establishing an independent inquiry into the care of Christopher Edwards and Richard Linford as required by HSG(94)27, copies of which are available in the Library.

Hib Vaccine

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what impact the Hib vaccine has had on cases of Hib meningitis since its introduction. [24563]

Mr. Sackville: The introduction of Hib vaccine, in October 1992, has had a dramatic impact on cases of invasive Hib disease, including meningitis. Disease among young children targeted by Hib immunisation has almost completely disappeared. Laboratory reports show that cases of Hib meningitis in the under-fives fell from 347 in 1991 to just 11 last year; a reduction of 97 per cent.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her Department's policy on advice to be given to parents by GPs about the level and type of protection given against meningitis by the Hib vaccine; and what monitoring is undertaken by her Department to ensure this advice is complied with. [24565]

Mr. Sackville: Before the introduction of Hib vaccine into the childhood immunisation programme in October 1992, the Department of Health provided all health professionals with a comprehensive pack of information on the vaccine, including guidance on answering parents' questions. The pack includes information from Hib vaccine trials which showed 95 per cent. of children immunised developed effective levels of protection. It also clearly states that the vaccine gives protection against the invasive forms of Hib disease, including meningitis, but that it will not protect against other types of meningitis. Information about the type of protection Hib vaccine gives against meningitis is also contained in parents' information literature published by the Health Education Authority.

The Health Education Authority conducts a continuous tracking study of parental attitudes and knowledge of all immunisations in the childhood programme, including Hib. for the Department.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the incidence of tuberculosis among persons who had at some stage had the BCG vaccine in each of the last five years; and what conclusions she has reached concerning the effectiveness of the BCG from this information. [24566]

Mr. Sackville: Whether or not a patient with tuberculosis had previously received BCG vaccine is not routinely recorded, nor was this information collected during the 1993 national survey of notifications of tuberculosis.

Hospitals

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will set out for (a) St. Bartholomew's hospital, London and (b) North Tees general hospital, Stockton-on-Tees (i) the catchment population, (ii) the annual revenue and capital budgets, (iii) the number of consultant medical staff, (iv) the number of nursing staff, (v) the average waiting time for patients and (vi) the proximity of the nearest general hospital. [24700]

Mr. Sackville: The information on St. Bartholomew's hospital is not available centrally, as St. Bartholomew's is a constituent part of a larger unit—the Royal London Hospitals national health service trust. My hon. Friend may wish to contact the chairman of the trust, Sir Derek Boorman for specific details.

For information about North Tees general hospital, my hon. Friend may wish to contact Ms J. Graham Bowman, chairman of the North Tees health NHS trust, for details.

Asthma

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of childhood asthma have been reported in Britain in each of the last 15 years; and what percentage this is of the children in Britain. [24561]

Mr. Sackville: Information is not available in the form requested. It has been estimated that 4 to 6 per cent. of children have asthma requiring regular medical supervision.

Earlier this year, the Department of Health published "Asthma—An Epidemiological Overview", copies of which are available in the Library. This overview brings together a range of statistics on asthma.

Recruitment

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received from (a) hospitals and (b) general practice about difficulties in recruiting doctors; and if she will make a statement. [24721]

Mr. Malone: We have received some representations from NHS trusts. However, this may be due to factors such as the geographical location or proposed duties of the posts. The number of NHS consultants continues to rise steadily, with average annual increases over the five years to 1993 well in excess of the Government's 2 per cent. target.

The specialist workforce advisory group, SWAG, recognises the need to have better information about recruitment difficulties in relation to hospital doctors. SWAG has recently conducted a survey on this issue in a small sample of trusts. Most of the responses have now been received, and SWAG will use this information to help it make decisions on the relative priority with which it should examine individual specialties.

Some general medical practitioners have expressed concern about recruitment into general practice. However, the number of general practitioner principals continues to increase year on year.

Alcohol Consumption

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence she has received on the relationship between alcohol consumption and heart disease; and if she will make a statement. [24712]

Mr. Bowis: This is one of the matters currently being considered by the inter-departmental group on sensible drinking. The group has received about 90 pieces of evidence on the effects of alcohol consumption on health, including the effects on heart disease.

Emergency Admissions

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the number of (a) surgical, (b) adult medical, (c) paediatric, (d) intensive therapy units, (e) A and E and (f) other, emergency admissions in each of the last 10 years. [24722]

Mr. Sackville: Information for the years 1988–89 to 1993–94 is shown in the table. Comparable data for earlier years are not available centrally. Patients in intensive therapy units are admitted under the care of consultants in the specialties that provide the treatment.

Emergency admissions, numbers of finished consultant episodes:

World Health Organisation

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is Her Majesty's Government's policy in respect of the motion made by certain African countries in respect of the position of the current director general of the World Health Organisation. [24507]

Mr. Malone: The draft resolution proposed by two African countries in respect of the current director general of the World Health Organisation was withdrawn by its sponsors after it failed to attract support among other African countries, and before member states from other WHO regions had commented on it.

Junior Doctors

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to improve the working conditions, living conditions and terms of employment of junior doctors; what percentage of junior doctors is currently receiving implemented improvements; and if she will make a statement. [24695]

Mr. Malone: "The New Deal on Junior Doctors' Hours", copies of which are available in the Library, has resulted in significant improvements in the conditions of junior doctors. Over 96 per cent. of the 27,669 junior doctors and dentists in England now comply with the current new deal contracted hours' targets.

We have devoted over £180 million to support the new deal. Our task forces, working closely with hospitals, have made excellent progress in using this money not only to reduce junior doctors' hours but to make real improvements in their living and working conditions. Over 2,000 new posts for doctors, including over 900 extra consultant posts, have been funded centrally or locally to support the new deal. We have also enabled task forces to spend significant sums in-year on improving living and working conditions.

We introduced in 1992 a new, more flexible, pay system which recognises the diversity of junior doctors' working patterns and rewards them according to their level of work intensity. We have also accepted a recommendation this year from the Doctors and Dentists Pay. Review Body to increase the rate of pay for on-call work for house officers and senior house officers. This improves their position relative to other doctors in training.

We are committed to ensuring that the very encouraging progress made so far is sustained and that we continue to move forward in providing a better working and training environment for junior doctors. This will help to improve the quality of patient care delivered by doctors.

Medical Graduates

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many medical graduates leave the profession within three years of graduation. [24696]

Mr. Malone: Data are not available in the form requested.

Pre-Registration House Officer Posts

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the process for allocation of pre-registration house officer posts. [24697]

Mr. Malone: The Department seeks the advice of the postgraduate deans and the medical profession's joint consultants committee on the number and distribution of pre-registration house officer posts. The aim is that there should be sufficient posts to ensure that all new graduates are able to obtain a PRHO post. There is a small—currently 12.5 per cent.—excess of posts to ensure that they have some choice.

Ambulance Services

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make a statement on the change in emergency demand and urgent demand for ambulance services in 1994–95; [24698]

(2) if she will list the ambulance services which failed to meet patients charter standards in any month for the year 1994–95, and the total number of months in which each ambulance service failed to meet patients charter standards; and if she will make a statement. [24699]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not collected on a monthly basis. Information on ambulance service activity in 1994–95 will not be available until later in the year.

Read Clinical Codes

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the total sums paid for the Read code by the NHS; and to whom these sums were paid. [24762]

Mr. Sackville: The sum paid by the Secretary of State for the Read clinical codes is commercial-in-confidence information. The agreed amount was paid directly to the inventor and developer of the codes, Dr. James Read, in April 1990.

Telephone Links (South Thames Regional Office)

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the total cost to South Thames regional health authority of purchasing electronic links computer equipment for new 10 digit telephone numbers within the NHS; [24789]

(2) from which budget South Thames regional health authority is purchasing electronic links computer equipment. [24788]

Mr. Sackville: The telephone switchboard at Eastbourne terrace, the location of both South and North Thames regional health authorities, will be upgraded at a cost of £8,500 to make it compatible with the existing Department of Health telephone system. This will have significant benefits and will be funded from the office information system implementation budget for the North and South Thames regional office.

Breast Cancer

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration she is giving to extending the age that women are automatically screened for breast cancer. [24824]

Mr. Sackville: A study is being planned looking at the benefits and cost-effectiveness of including women aged 65 or over in the breast screening programme. Research is already under-way on the effectiveness of screening women aged 40 to 50.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the research currently being conducted into (a) breast screening of women 65 years and over, (b) breast screening of women under 50 and (c) the interval between breast screening which her Department has (i) commissioned and (ii) evaluated; and if she will detail for each (1) the body undertaking the research, (2) the geographical areas covered, (3) the sample size, (4) the expected completion date and (5) the cost of the exercise. [24825]

Mr. Sackville: The United Kingdom Health Departments, along with the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, and the two major cancer research charities—the Cancer Research Campaign and the Imperial Cancer Research Fund—are currently funding four studies into breast cancer screening costing £5 million over five years. Two of these trials relate to:

(i) The effects of screening women annually from age 40

This is a multi-centre trial of some 195,000 women aged 40–41 who were identified and randomly allocated to a study group of 65,000 or a control group of 130,000. An interim analysis will take place in 1996, after which a decision on future funding will be taken.

(ii) The effects of screening more frequently than every three years in women aged 50 and over

This is a five-centre randomised trial looking at annual screening. The aim is to recruit 100,000 women aged 50 to 64. This trial is due to finish in 1996.

The trials are being co-ordinated by the United Kingdom co-ordinating committee on cancer research. The Department of Health contributed £270,000 to the trials in 1994–95.

The Department also funds the cancer screening evaluation unit at the Royal Marsden hospital, Sutton, by some £400,000 per year. The CSEU has a wide remit for the evaluation of cancer screening, a large part of which relates to breast cancer screening. This includes the co-ordination of the multi-centre UKCCCR age trial.

A study is planned to look at the benefits and cost-effectiveness of including women aged 65 or over in the breast screening programme.

Imported Monkeys

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made as to potential health hazards posed by the import of monkeys into the United Kingdom. [24786]

Mr. Sackville: All monkeys imported into Great Britain have to be licensed by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and must spend six months in quarantine. Importers carry out tests for infectious agents that might be transmitted to humans before importation and during the period of quarantine. Instructions on preventing the spread of infection are given to those who handle monkeys as part of their work. Our medical advice is that these steps are adequate to protect human health.

Medical Insurance

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what responsibility a family health services authority has to ensure that a general practitioner holds current medical insurance. [24785]

Mr. Malone: None. General practitioners, as self-employed contractors, have responsibility for ensuring where appropriate, that they hold medical insurance. Subscriptions to medical defence bodies are fully reimbursed to the profession through the cost-plus contract.

Disciplinary Tribunals

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances a nurse may present evidence to a hospital disciplinary tribunal. [24787]

Mr. Sackville: There are no special provisions or circumstances which affect the attendance of nurses at disciplinary hearings; like other members of staff they may be called on to give evidence.

HIV-AIDS

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what initiatives have been undertaken by her Department to warn young people of the need to protect themselves against HIV when travelling abroad. [24862]

Mr. Sackville: The Health Education Authority which has the responsibility for the national HIV public education programme runs a summer campaign every year to alert travellers to the risk of HIV infection when they go abroad. This year and for the past two years the Department of Health has also run its HIV "Travel Safe Campaign" which is aimed at young, independent travellers. National initiatives are amply supported by travel projects funded at local level in the national health service.

TRANSPORT

Motorway Traffic, Hampshire

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what sections of motorways in Hampshire currently have traffic levels which exceed on average 75,000 vehicles per day; and what sections are expected to have such traffic levels by 2000. [24299]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 18 May 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport what sections of motorways in Hampshire currently have traffic levels which exceed on average 75,000 vehicles per day and what sections are expected to have such traffic levels by the year 2000.

The following sections of motorway currently have traffic levels in excess of 75,000 vehicles per day:-

M3 Junctions 4–6 (Camberley to Basingstoke)

M27 Junctions 5–9 (Stoneham to Park Gate)

M27 Junctions 11–12 (Fareham to Portsmouth)

By the year 2000, the following additional sections are expected to have flows in excess of 75,000 vehicles per day:-

M3 Junctions 9–14 (Winnall to M27 Chilworth)

M27 Junctions 4–11 (Chilworth to Fareham).

Road Surfacing

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the cost of (a) laying and (b) maintaining 100 yards of (i) porous and (ii) conventional asphalt. [23863]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 18 May 1995:

The Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts MP, has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning the cost of (a) laying and (b) maintaining 100 yards of (i) porous asphalt and (ii) conventional asphalt.

My previous answer of 8 March quoted a range of prices for one kilometre length within a typical surfacing contract. Prices for a 100 yards length would be approximately 10% of those quoted figures. For instance a two lane dual carriageway all purpose road would be £10,000 to £20,000 for porous asphalt and £7,000 to £10,000 for conventional asphalt. I should point out that where only short lengths such as 100 yards are to be surfaced the costs would rise substantially for both porous asphalt and conventional asphalt due to the increased impact of fixed site costs. As we have little experience of such working we are unable to be more precise.

Differences in maintenance cost between porous asphalt and conventional asphalt relate chiefly to the need for more frequent resurfacing with porous asphalt, the extra cost of the porous asphalt material and the more frequent salting operations needed for porous asphalt in winter. It is currently not possible to give any representative information on the additional cost of salting given the limited amount of porous asphalt which has been laid and the recent mild winters. However, I am able to give you an indication of the difference in material and laying costs. Broadly speaking, maintaining a porous asphalt surface over the life of a road will be of the order of double the cost of maintaining a conventional asphalt surface. This does not take into account the effect of traffic delays during roadworks which will add to the cost of maintaining porous asphalt because of the need for more frequent resurfacing.

As explained in my letter the costs are influenced by numerous factors such as traffic and climatic conditions. These also have an influence on the life of a road surface. Consequently the performance of the different surfaces will vary significantly from site to site.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the locations of the sections of Britain's motorways that currently have porous asphalt surfacing; what total length of motorways is covered in porous asphalt surfacing; and what total length of motorway covered in porous asphalt surfacing currently have traffic levels (a) below and (b) above 75,000 vehicles per day. [24300]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 18 May 1995:

The Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts MP, has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning the locations of lengths of porous asphalt laid on motorways throughout Britain and of those the total lengths carrying above and below 75,000 vehicles per day.

You will appreciate that the Secretary of State for Transport and the Highways Agency are responsible only for roads in England. Roads in Scotland and Wales are the responsibility of the appropriate Secretaries of State and I am not able to provide information to you for those areas.

Porous asphalt surfacings have been used within two long term trials on the M1 in Yorkshire and on the M6 in Lancashire. In addition, porous surfaces have been used on the M40 (Junction 6 - Postcombe) and on the M25 widening (Junctions 7-8) currently under construction.

To date the total length of motorway covered with porous asphalt is approximately 4.5 miles excluding the trials. These trials comprise approximately 1.1 miles but in each case it is only one or part of one of the two carriageways which has been treated.

None of the lengths with porous asphalt surfacing carry flows less than 75,000 vehicles per day.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 9 May, Official Report, columns 351–52, in what specific circumstances porous asphalt is considered not to be technically suitable as a noise mitigation measure on motorways. [24461]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 18 May 1995:

The Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts MP, has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning the specific circumstances porous asphalt is considered not to be technically suitable as a noise mitigation measure on motorways.

The technical limitations on the use of porous asphalt on motorways and other trunk roads are set out in the Design Manual for Roads and Bridges, Volume 7, Section 2, Part 4, HD27/94 as published by HMSO. This states that porous asphalt should not be used in the following situations:

a) On areas where the pavement strength is sub-standard.

b) On areas where there is considerable acceleration, braking, turning and parking.

c) On tight radius curves, and loops of radii less than 75 metres, or when gradients exceed 10 per cent., without advice from the Overseeing Department.

d) On areas where excessive deposits of detritus or oil and fuel may be experienced; such as parking areas, exits from farms and quarries and other industrial sites.

e) On areas where the use of tracked vehicles, construction plant, farm equipment or similar industrial vehicles is expected.

f) On areas where the cross-fall is insufficient to remove water to the road edge such that flooding may occur in the porous asphalt.

g) At locations where free drainage cannot be accommodated along the low edge of the surfacing; for example abutting other types of construction such as a concrete carriageway.

h) Generally on lengths of carriageway less than 100m, because of spray carry-over from adjacent surfacing, unless special conditions prevail.

i) Where cyclists use the carriageway and where kerbs are provided, unless provision is made to ensure drainage design overcomes any possible safety hazards.

j) On existing new bridges where it is not possible to adequately drain the surface.

k) In urban environments, where frequent excavations by statutory undertakers may occur.

l) Where traffic levels exceed 4,000 commercial vehicles per lane per day, at opening, without reference to the Overseeing Department. This is being extended to embrace traffic levels up to 6,000.

Porous asphalt is not recommended for use on jointed concrete or flexible composite road pavements without seeking advice from the Overseeing Department. Additionally, it is not recommended for certain steel deck bridges.

Whilst the above limitations currently apply the Highways Agency has implemented a research programme to see if it is possible to produce more durable porous asphalt and reduce the number of limitations.

Motorway Noise

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 9 May, Official Report, column 345, what is the definition adopted by his Department of noise levels being unreasonably high at adjacent properties to a motorway; and what consideration is given to the expected increase in noise levels due to the future growth in traffic. [24458]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 18 May 1995:

The Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts MP has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning the definition adopted of noise levels being unreasonable adjacent to motorways and what allowance is made for traffic growth.

The level of traffic noise which is taken to be unreasonable is that prescribed by the Noise Insulation Regulations, namely a level which is predicted to exceed 68 db(A) at the facade of a residential property, of which an increase of at least 1db(A) is attributable to traffic on the new or improved road. Future growth of traffic, both on the new road and associated roads in the area, is taken into account by basing predicted noise levels on the most adverse combination anticipated within 15 years of the new road or improvement being open to traffic.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 9 May, Official Report, column 344, for what reasons only motorways which had a start of works prior to April and which are still under construction are considered for the provision of acoustic fencing. [24459]

Mr. John Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 18 May 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons only motorways which had a start of works prior to April and that are still under construction are considered for acoustic fencing.

The provision of acoustic fencing is considered for all new motorway and motorway widening schemes as the noise mitigation part of a package of environmental measures. But how much is provided in any one year depends on when the particular scheme starts and the contractors programme of work on that scheme.

Thus in answering your previous question, we could only give details of fencing for schemes which had started and therefore had a known contractors works programme. Information for schemes which are due to start this year will become available when the contractors submit their programme and I shall write to you again.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 9 May, Official Report, column 346, how he allows for the cost of compensation for loss in property values under part I of the Land Compensation Act 1973 in making a cost benefit analysis of proposals for acoustic fencing and other noise mitigation measures for motorways in the absence of specific figures. [24400]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 18 May 1995:

The Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts MP, has asked me to write to you in reply to your Parliamentary Question concerning how costs of compensation for loss in property values under Part I of the Land Compensation Act 1973 are taken into account in cost benefit analysis of proposals for acoustic fencing.

Composite estimates of the likely amount of compensation payable are provided by the District Valuer at various stage of development of a road proposal. Estimates of the element of compensation attributable to loss in property value under Part I of the Land Compensation Act take into account the mitigating effect of any protective measures included in the options or alternatives which the District Valuer is asked to consider.

Street Furniture

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what estimate he has made of the likely reduction in the numbers of serious and fatal accidents if steel or concrete light standards and telegraph poles were replaced by aluminium poles and standards. [24904]

Mr. Norris: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) serious and (b) fatal accidents involved collision with lighting standards and telephone poles in each of the last five years. [24905]

Mr. Norris: The information requested is shown in the table:

Fatal and serious accidents involving collision with lamp posts, telegraph poles or electricity poles: Great Britain 1989–93

North Sea Conference

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he will (i) put forward and (ii) support at the North sea ministerial conference in Denmark on 8 June in respect of shipping; and if he will make a statement. [24404]

Mr. Norris: A note on UK policy objectives for the fourth North sea conference was placed in the Library of the House on 16 May. My Department has been fully involved in the preparations for the fourth North sea conference, and has already made a number of proposals consistent with our policy on marine safety and pollution following Lord Donaldson's report, "Safer Ships, Cleaner Seas".

The Government will be represented at the North sea conference by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. He will be proposing and supporting a wide range of measures to enhance ship safety, to reduce accidental and operational discharges from ships, to improve the clean-up of spills and to secure better compensation for the victims of marine pollution damage, especially through the development and ratification of the convention on hazardous and noxious substances.

Coast Watch Services

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what instructions he has given to the Coastguard Agency in respect of co-operation with the National Coastwatch Institution; and if he will make a statement. [24669]

Mr. Norris: The Coastguard Agency welcomes any useful information which the National Coastwatch Institution may provide. It is always ready to encourage any responsible organisation volunteering information which might assist the coastguard in fulfilling the national responsibility for co-ordination of civil maritime search and rescue.

Ferry Safety

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he plans to publish the results of the evacuation trials conducted by the HSA on new high-speed catamaran passenger craft; and if he will make a statement. [24920]

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for the Marine Safety Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 18 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about evacuation trials on new high-speed catamaran passenger craft.

There are no plans to publish the results of the evacuation trials conducted by the Marine Safety Agency (MSA) on high-speed catamaran passenger craft. The MSA is, however, fully satisfied that the craft currently operating from United Kingdom ports can meet the required evacuation time for this type of vessel.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration he gave to the evacuations from the Achille Lauro and the Lakonia when postulating evacuation times for ferries using United Kingdom ports; and if he will make a statement. [24922]

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for the Marine Safety Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 18 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about evacuation times for roll-on roll-off ferries with regard to the cases of the "Achille Lauro" and the "Lakonia".

Responsibility for the investigation of casualties to ships lies with the flag state; neither the "Achille Lauro" nor the "Lakonia" were registered with the United Kingdom. The flag state may thus determine what changes are required to the regulations of the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea (SOLAS) and, put forward proposals for discussion within the International Maritime Organization. Any changes agreed, including for example evacuation times, would be implemented by the United Kingdom and other Administrations signatory to the SOLAS Convention.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons he has not yet accepted the Marine Safety Committee document 65/4, "RoRo Ferry Safety". [24822]

Mr. Norris: The Secretary of State has already broadly welcomed the recommendations of the panel of experts, now issued as Maritime Safety Committee document 65/4, in his oral statement to the House on 5 April 1995, Official Report, column 1753. The Government will continue to press for the adoption of measures to enhance ferry safety recommended by the panel.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, when he expects the review of the financial implications of Marine Safety Committee document 65/4, "RoRo Ferry Safety", to be completed and published. [24823]

Mr. Norris: The Secretary of State for Transport, in his oral statement to the House on 5 April 1995, Official Report, column 1753, emphasised that any new measures proposed as a result of the recommendation made by the International Maritime Organisation's panel of experts would be subject to a full analysis of the potential costs and benefits. The Marine Safety Agency is currently investigating the costs of implementing various possible new requirements for ro-ro ferries. This information should be available in time for the negotiations on ferry safety at the International Maritime Organisation in November.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary or State for Transport how much time is allocated to muster passengers from 10 decks to lifeboat points in the standard 30-minute evacuation of 2,000 people from roll-on-roll-off ferries. [24919]

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for the Marine Safety Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 18 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about allocation of the 30 minute evacuation time for roll-on roll-off ferries.

No specific period is allocated for the muster of passengers. The muster of passengers will commence when the general alarm signal is given whereas the 30 minute evacuation period begins with the abandon ship signal which may be given sometime later.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has sought or received views from the Royal Institute of Naval Architects on the estimated costs and timescale of introducing the recommendation in Marine Safety Committee document 65/4,"RoRo Ferry Safety". [24821]

Mr. Norris: The Government are aware of the views of the Royal Institution of Naval Architects on the issue of ferry stability, in particular its views submitted to the International Maritime Organisation's panel of experts.

The Government will continue to press for the adoption of recommendations on roll-on roll-off ferry safety made by the International Maritime Organisation's panel of experts on ferry safety. We need to take matters forward on the basis of the panel's recommendations, including a full analysis of the costs and benefits of implementing new measures.

Marchioness

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what facilities were made available for the Marchioness action group to examine or photograph the hull of the Marchioness (a) on the shore at Southwark and (b) at any other named location; to whom and on whose authority the hull was sold; and on what date it left the Thames. [24744]

Mr. Norris: Although the marine accident investigation branch inspected the hull of the Marchioness in the course of its investigation, at no time was either access to the vessel or sale of the vessel under its control.

The sale of the vessel would have been a matter for the owners, Tidal Cruises Ltd, following its release by the police on completion of their investigations. My Departments has no records relating to the sale of the vessel.

Accident Inquiries

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will accept as a regular procedure that any major transport accident which involves either large-scale loss of life or has significant implications for transport policy should normally lead to the setting up of a public inquiry. [15905]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 24 March 1995]: Ministers must be free to consider the most appropriate form of inquiry, taking into account the circumstances of the accident and its severity. The purpose of any inquiry must be to establish the facts and cause of the accident, to evaluate what lessons can be learnt and to make recommendations to avoid future recurrence. Technical inquiries, such as those by the independent marine accident investigation branch and the air accident investigation branch have the advantage of being carried out by experienced and expert investigators. A public inquiry is one option that Ministers will consider following a major transport accident but we do not believe that it would be appropriate or effective for this to be accepted as a regular procedure.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Autism

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what services are available for autistic people in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [23679]

Mr. Ancram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Clydebank and Milngavie (Mr. Worthington) on 16 May, Official Report column 194.

Youth Service

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money was allocated to the youth service in Northern Ireland in 1993–94 and 1994–95; how much was allocated to (a) uniformed organisations and (b) non-uniformed organisations; and what was the membership of (i) uniformed and (ii) non-uniformed organisations in each year. [23990]

Mr. Ancram: The total allocation was £15.822 million in 1993–94 and £16.010 million in 1994–95.

The information on allocations to uniformed and non-uniformed organisations and their respective memberships details is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Home Improvement Grants

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applications for each type of home improvement grant at each of the Housing Executive offices were refused because of the means-tested element since the introduction of the Housing (NI) Order 1992. [23706]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive but the chief executive has advised me that the Housing Executive does not refuse grant applications on the ground of a means test. The means test determines the contribution which an applicant must make towards the cost of remedial work. The amount of the applicant's contribution can range from nil to the full cost of the works and, depending on this assessment, applicants may decide not to proceed.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how long it takes to process each of the nine home improvement grant applications at each of the Housing Executive grants offices in Northern Ireland. [23704]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive but the chief executive has advised me that the information requested is not readily available. However, the average time to process applications at three key stages is as follows:

	Average time
1. From receipt of preliminary inquiry form to inspection of the dwelling	15 weeks
2. From inspection to issue of a schedule of work	9 weeks
3. From receipt of completed formal application to issue of approval	4 months

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applications have been made for each type of home improvement grant at each of the Housing Executive grants offices in Northern Ireland since the introduction of the Housing (NI) Order 1992; and of these how many were (a) approved (b) rejected and (c) withdrawn, giving the reasons for refusal. [23705]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive but the chief executive has advised me that the Executive does not maintain records in the format requested. However table 1 indicates the total number of preliminary inquiry forms received by each grant office, the numbers refused and the numbers not taken forward by the applicant. Table 2 shows the numbers approved by grant type.

The main reasons for refusals are:-

1. the property was considered to be fit for human habitation;
2. the property was less than 10 years old;
3. the applicant did not have the appropriate legal interest in the property.

Road Traffic Legislation

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress he is making in introducing new road traffic legislation in Northern Ireland. [24320]

Mr. Moss: The Department of the Environment (Northern Ireland) is carrying forward a programme of road traffic legislation aimed at updating the law in this field. Three Orders in Council are being progressed as follows:

A draft Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order which will update road safety and construction and use of vehicles provisions will be laid before Parliament in the near future.

A proposal for a draft Road Traffic Offenders (Northern Ireland) Order setting out the prosecution and punishment of offenders, including the introduction of a penalty points system, is currently being drafted and will be published for consultation purposes by the autumn.

The modification of the law in relation to the regulation of traffic, parking places and speed limits is to be the subject of a Road Traffic Regulation (Northern Ireland) Order. It is planned to publish a proposal for a draft Order in Council for consultation purposes in the autumn.

Ports Grants

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what grants are available from the European Union to Northern Ireland ports in the public sector that would not be available in the event of privatisation. [24316]

Mr. Moss: European Union structural funds grants which are currently available to public sector ports in Northern Ireland would continue to be available in the event of privatisation

Construction Industry

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he will adopt to ensure an upturn in the construction industry through investment in schools, hospitals, education, housing, roads and factories. [23702]

Mr. Moss: I have asked my officials to consider, as a matter of urgency, how the construction industry could best be assisted over the coming year. The possibility of increasing expenditure on infrastructure will be borne in mind.

Railways

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress in implementing the consultants' recommendations about Northern Ireland Railways. [24314]

Mr. Moss: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Colchester, North (Mr. Jenkin) on 11 January 1995, Official Report, column 146. Since then the Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company has commissioned a study to examine further opportunities for market testing and contracting out and to advise on the scope for sale of Northern Ireland Railways' non-core businesses.

Giant Hogweed

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures he plans to require the owners of land to which the public may have access to eradicate Heracleum Mantegazzianum; and if he will make a statement about the dangers associated with this plant. [24082]

Mr. Moss: No new measures are planned to require the owners of land to which the public may have access to eradicate Heracleum Mantegazzianum or giant hogweed. The Department of Agriculture and Department of Environment continue to promote a programme of voluntary control.

The existing provisions of the Public Health (Ireland) Act 1888 give district councils powers to deal with "nuisances" in premises, including lands, which are in such a state as to be "injurious to health".

The danger associated with giant hogweed is that the plants release sap when the stems are cut or leaf hairs are broken. On contact with the skin in sunlight, the sap can cause severe blistering.

Conservation Areas

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what towns and villages are currently being considered for the designation of conservation area status in the constituency of South Down; and when these designations will take place. [24761]

Mr. Moss: The towns of Saintfield and Ardglass are currently being considered for designation as conservation areas. There is also a proposal to extend the conservation area of the village of Rostrevor, originally designated in 1979. It is not possible at this stage to indicate when the designations will take place.

US Investment Conference

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to review his decision to provide partial funding for support of representatives of non-governmental organisations at President Clinton's investment conference, to be held in Washington DC from 24 to 26 May; and if he will make a statement. [24857]

Mr. Ancram: None.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on President Clinton's investment conference to be held in Washington DC in May; and how he intends to maximise the returns for all delegates from Ireland, north and south; and what plans he has for de-briefing, follow-up meetings and dissemination of the results of the aforesaid conference within Northern Ireland. [24861]

Mr. Ancram: The White House conference for trade and investment in Washington offers considerable potential for more investment in Northern Ireland and the six border counties of the Republic of Ireland through new inward investment, trade, business partnerships, technology transfer and tourism. This potential will be released through the various breakout or workshop sessions, individual meetings with key business people and networking at various functions.

Following the conference there will be full follow-up on all prospects for trade, inward investment or technology transfer.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make available the resources and facilities of Her Majesty's Government's Departments and agencies by way of access to briefings, meetings, and exhibitions organised by Her Majesty's Government's Departments and agencies to assist and facilitate the participation of the representatives of voluntary organisations and community groups, at

President Clinton's investment conference in Washington DC; and if he will make a statement. [24858]

Mr. Ancram: Officials in Northern Ireland Departments and agencies have already participated in briefings of community group representatives in preparation for their attendance at the White House trade and investment conference in Washington.

During the conference, officials will be available to provide information and advice for the purpose of facilitating the participation of all representatives.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has for the support of the participation of the community and voluntary sector representatives invited to attend President Clinton's investment conference in Washington DC. [24856]

Mr. Ancram: Some financial assistance will be available through the Northern Ireland voluntary trust to community and voluntary sector representatives to enable them to participate in the conference.

A break-out or workshop session has been offered by the conference organisers to provide an opportunity for bringing together the interests of those involved in community development activities in Northern Ireland with those of business leaders from both sides of the Atlantic. Support has also been provided by officials involved in briefing community sector participants.

Rowe Report

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he has yet received Mr. J. J. Rowe's report on the operation in 1994 of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1991. [25532]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have received Mr. Rowe's report and it is being published today and copies are being placed in the library. I am most grateful to him for his work.

As the ceasefires continue to hold the powers in the Act are being used less and less. But the Government believe that the Act itself remains necessary. This is also the view of Mr. Rowe. I am therefore laying before the House today an order continuing for a further year those provisions in the Act which are currently in force. We all look forward to the time when there will no longer be a need for them.

Rate Collection Agency

Mr. David Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Rate Collection Agency in 1995–96. [25533]

Mr. Moss: For 1995–96 the following performance targets have been set for the agency:

1. To collect 98.11 per cent. of the gross collectable rate, excluding late assessments, by 31 March 1996.
2. To achieve a reduction of 2 per cent. in the real value of the unit costs of rate collection per rate account issued.
3. To generate refunds to 97 per cent. of ratepayers so entitled within 14 days of credits being identified.
4. To process by 31 March 1996 90 per cent. of applications for the incoming year received before 15 March 1996 from existing housing benefit recipients.
5. To achieve a reduction of 2 per cent. in the real value of the unit costs of processing Housing Benefit applications.
6. To process 95 per cent. of Housing Benefit claims free of error.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Drug Abuse

14. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the problems of drug abuse. [23560]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Apart from several general inquiries from members of the public, we have had 52 letters forwarded by Members of Parliament this year.

The most common inquiry was concerned with the legal status of drugs, usually arguing for or against legalising cannabis, followed by issues such as drugs and crime, the scheduling of temazepam, drug logos on clothing and cuts in the numbers of customs officials at ports.

Metropolitan Police

16. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers there are on duty per 1,000 population in the Metropolitan police; and what is the national average. [23562]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary that there are 3.6 officers per 1,000 population in the Metropolitan police district. This compares with a national average of 2.2 officers per 1,000 population excluding the Met.

Identity Cards

17. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the cost effectiveness of introducing identity cards; and if he will make a statement. [23563]

Mr. Howard: The cost-effectiveness of any identity card scheme would depend upon the detailed arrangements for the scheme, the value of the card to the individual holder, the wider value to society, and the costs of the scheme. I intend publishing a consultation document on identity cards shortly.

Asylum Seekers

18. Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce the delays in making decisions on applications for asylum. [23564]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993 has reduced significantly the average time taken to decide applications made since the Act came into force. But delays persist as a result of a large and continuing increase in the number of asylum applications. Earlier this year, my right hon. and learned Friend announced substantial additional resources to speed up the asylum determination and appeal system. We hope to announce shortly proposals for further improvements.

25. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received on the number of asylum seekers held in custody. [23571]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Since 1 January 1995 we have received 97 letters on this subject from hon. Members writing on behalf of their constituents and 47 from members of the public writing direct. I have also received a letter, dated 2 May, from the Refugee Legal Centre.

26. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers in the last year have been detained for over six months. [23572]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The information is not available in the form requested. On 9 May 1995, a total of 118 persons who had at some time claimed asylum had been in detention for six months or more. Of these, 114 had their application refused.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of the current establishment of the third country unit within the Home Office's immigration and nationality department; and if he will make a statement on the function of this unit. [24826]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The third country unit is part of the asylum division. It consists of one higher executive officer, four executive officers and one administrative assistant. It is responsible for cases where an asylum applicant has arrived from a safe third country to which he may be returned without substantive consideration of his claim in accordance with paragraphs 337 and 345 of the immigration rules.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have been removed to Norway on safe third country grounds since 26 July 1993; and how many so removed have been returned to the United Kingdom by the Norwegian authorities. [24827]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Four persons who had been refused asylum in the United Kingdom on safe third country grounds have been removed to Norway since 16 July 1993. Of these, one has been returned to the United Kingdom.

Crime Statistics

19. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the trend in the recorded crime figures. [23565]

Mr. Maclean: Recorded crime in England and Wales fell by 5 per cent. in 1994. Together with the 1 per cent. fall in 1993, this represents the largest percentage fall over a two-year period for 40 years. This fall is a testament to the success of recent police initiatives which actively target crimes such as burglary.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were recorded by each police force in England and Wales within each category of crime in 1994; how many incidents of theft or unauthorised taking of a motor vehicle and of theft from a motor vehicle were recorded by each force; and how many of the burglaries recorded by each police force in England and Wales in 1994 were (a) in a dwelling and (b) in another building. [23876]

Mr. MacLean: The information requested is contained in the following table:

Closed Circuit Television

20. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are Her Majesty's Government's plans for (a) further funding for closed circuit television and (b) further funding for supplementary policing in urban areas. [23566]

Mr. MacLean: The recent CCTV challenge competition has injected £5 million into local CCTV schemes, generating up to £13.8 million in other funding. The possibility of further competitions in the future has not been ruled out, but it is too early to give a firm commitment.

General funding is allocated between police authorities on the basis of a formula which measures relative policing needs. That formula allows for extra demands in urban areas.

24. Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the outcome of the bid for Government funding for a closed circuit television scheme for the Boscombe shopping centre in Bournemouth. [23570]

Mr. MacLean: My right hon. and learned Friend was pleased to announce on Monday 27 March that this scheme was one of the 106 successful schemes to share the £5 million funding provided to spread CCTV technology more widely.

Female Prisoners

21. Mr. Enright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the latest figure for the number of women serving a prison sentence. [23567]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: On 9 May 1995, there were 1,470 sentenced female prisoners in Prison Service accommodation in England and Wales.

Drug Smuggling, Republic of Ireland

22. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assistance has been requested by the Republic of Ireland to combat drug smuggling into the United Kingdom and the Republic. [23568]

Mr. Maclean: There is close co-operation between police and customs in the United Kingdom and their counterparts in the Republic of Ireland and regular exchanges of information on operational matters. Irish customs has requested some training assistance which HM Customs and Excise is providing.

Police Salaries

23. Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on top salaries in the police force. [23569]

Mr. Maclean: On 22 March, I wrote to Professor Sir Laurie Hunter CBE informing him of the Government's response to the Police Negotiating Board's recommendations for chief officers' pay. The Government approved most of the Police Negotiating Board's proposals for restructuring chief officers' pay. The Association of Chief Police Officers has made representations about the timing of the implementation of part of the new pay arrangements, which the Government are currently considering.

Criminal Injuries Compensation

27. Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long victims of violent crime whose cases were assessed under the tariff scheme will have to wait for the reassessment of their awards. [23573]

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to her on 1 May, Official Report, column 92.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the total legal costs of defending the Government's tariff scheme for criminal injuries compensation in the courts up to and including the House of Lords: and if he will make a statement. [23632]

Mr. Maclean: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Ealing, Southall (Mr. Khabra) on 16 May, Official Report, column 190.

Prisoners (Drug-related Offences)

28. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his current estimate of the numbers in prison for drug-related offences. [23574]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The number of prisoners serving sentences for offences under misuse of drugs legislation in 1994 was around 10 per cent. of the prison population; but no reliable estimate is yet available of the number of prisoners serving sentences for offences committed under the influence of drugs or to pay for drugs.

"In the Line of Fire"

29. Mr Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his response to the Audit Commission report, "In the Line of Fire". [23575]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave earlier today in response to an identical question from the hon. Member for Nottingham, East (Mr. Heppell).

Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what effect the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 will have on the fight against crime; and if he will make a statement. [23548]

Mr. Howard: The Act will make a significant contribution to the fight against crime. As the Police Federation has said, it will > "enhance the stature and ability of the criminal justice system to reduce crime, bring criminals to justice and significantly reduce the fear of crime, thereby improving the quality of life for many members of our society".

Jersey

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he next expects to visit Jersey to meet members of the states to discuss the current constitutional position. [23561]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: My right hon. and learned Friend hopes to visit the Channel Islands, as it is customary for Home Secretaries to do, in the not—too—distant future. Meanwhile, my noble Friend Lady Blatch has recently completed a visit to the Channel Islands, including Jersey, where she held discussions with members of the states.

Police Station Inquiry Desks

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to improve civilian competence in dealing with the public at police station inquiry desks, with particular reference to the ability to communicate; and if he will make a statement. [23662]

Mr. Maclean: This is a matter primarily for each chief officer of police. I am not aware of any problems arising from civilian members of the police service dealing with members of the public, but I, or the relevant chief officer of police, as appropriate, would be happy to respond to any specific concerns.

Brian Douglas

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the death of Mr. Brian Douglas on 8 May; and what assessment has been made as to the cause of his injuries. [24692]

Mr. Maclean: I understand that the matter is being investigated by the Police Complaints Authority. It would not be appropriate for me to comment at this stage.

Derek Bentley

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to order a searching review of the case of Derek Bentley to deal with all outstanding issues of public concern and following the review, consider the appropriateness of recommending a posthumous free pardon. [24901]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I am aware of no present grounds for a further review of this case, which was very thoroughly reviewed in 1991 and 1992.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library full details of investigations carried out by the police at the request of the Home Office and other relevant documents relating to the case of Derek Bentley. [24903]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Police reports are confidential documents which do not fall to be disclosed. A memorandum was published on 1 October 1992, however, explaining in detail the decision then reached that there were no grounds for recommending the grant of a posthumous free pardon to Derek Bentley. This dealt among other things with the alleged inconsistencies in evidence. A copy of the memorandum was placed in the Library.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what terms of reference were set by his Department for the investigation of the Derek Bentley case by the Metropolitan police requested by his predecessor in 1991; and what reports were subsequently submitted to his Department. [24923]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The Home Office wrote to the Metropolitan police in August 1991 asking for inquiries to be carried out into certain matters which had been presented to the Home Office by Thames Television and others. The police submitted two reports in October and December 1991.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will arrange the release of full details of investigations by the police ordered by his predecessors into the case of Derek Bentley; [24902]

(2) if he will review his Department's papers relating to the Derek Bentley case with a view to fulfilling precisely the legal requirements for disclosure of papers and investigations undertaken by, or on behalf of, himself or his predecessors. [24900]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Following a request by solicitors for the family of the late Derek Bentley, we are examining our papers with a view to making appropriate disclosures in full compliance with the Hickey judgment as soon as possible. Such disclosure to affected parties and their legal representatives is not constrained by the provisions of the Public Records Acts which govern the opening of records to the public.

Detainees

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of the current establishment of the detention planning and policy unit within the Home Office immigration and nationality department; and if he will make a statement regarding the function of this unit. [24828]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The immigration service detention policy and planning unit employs a total of some 53 staff including those engaged in detention centres at Campsfield house, nine; Gatwick airport, four; and Harmondsworth, 25, where the staff also have national responsibility for co-ordination of the use of detention places.

The detention policy and planning unit is responsible for ensuring the provision of detention accommodation and escorting services including all commercial, financial and contractual matters and for co-ordinating policy, procedures and practice relating to all aspects of immigration detention management.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total cost in the financial year 1993–94 to his Department of detaining persons under the Immigration Act powers in (a) immigration detention centres, (b) Prison Service establishments and (c) police cells. [24855]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The total cost to the immigration service in running its detention accommodation in the financial year 1993–94 was £7,466,352. No separate figures for detaining persons under Immigration Act powers are kept by the Prison Service. The cost of detaining persons under the Act in police cells was £430,152.27.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current (a) weekly and (b) monthly cost of detaining persons under Immigration Act powers in (a) an immigration detention centre and (b) a Prison Service establishment. [24854]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The overall cost of detaining a person in accommodation for which the immigration service is responsible is currently estimated at £540 per week, including full immigration service staffing costs. This would equate to £2,340 per month. The current cost of detaining someone in a Prison Service establishment is not available. The latest available figures are for the year 1993–94, which show a cost of £411 a week or £1,780 per month, excluding headquarters costs. In many cases, the carrying company which brought the person to the United Kingdom is liable for all or some the expenses incurred. Therefore, the whole cost does not fall to the taxpayer.

Paul Malone

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to refer the case of Paul Malone to the Court of Appeal; and if he will make a statement; [24894]

(2) what action he proposes to take following the Metropolitan police investigation into the case of Paul Malone. [24892]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: This case was referred to the Court of Appeal by my right hon. and learned Friend under section 17(1)(a) of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 on 8 December 1994. As the case remains sub judice it is not appropriate for me to comment. As my hon. Friend stated in his reply to a question from the hon. Member on 27 April 1995, Official Report, column 679, the report of the investigation by the Metropolitan police has been referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions who will decide whether any criminal charges should be brought. Once a decision has been made, the chief constable of Cheshire and the Police Complaints Authority will consider whether disciplinary action should be taken against any officer.

Greater Manchester Fire Authority

Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Greater Manchester fire authority concerning the financing of the service. [23555]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: My right hon. and learned Friend has had no such discussions during the course of the past year.

Pornography

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981 applies to pornographic magazines normally displayed on the top shelf of newsagents. [24477]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981 applies to any matter, including pornographic magazines, displayed in a public place or where it can be seen from a public place, if such matter is indecent.

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been brought under the Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981 in the last five years; how many of these were successful; and at what sort of premises the material was displayed. [24480]

Mr. Maclean: Information of the number of prosecutions and convictions for 1989 and 1993 is given in the table. 1994 data will not be available until the autumn.

Information is not collected centrally regarding the type of premises where the offence took place.

Number of defendants prosecuted at magistrates courts and found guilty at all courts of offences under the Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981, 1989–1993

England and Wales

	1989	1990	1991	1992	1993
Prosecutions	30	27	9	10	7
Convictions	17	19	4	8	3

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the trends in pornographic publishing and distribution industry in respect of the explicit nature of the material, and what action he is taking to resist the slippage of standards and ensure that the Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981 is effectively enforced. [24479]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The Government share the widespread concern about the spread of pornography and keep the law in this area under review. Measures to ensure that the law keeps pace with advances in technology and is enforced more effectively were included in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994.

The recently established interdepartmental group on obscenity will monitor trends in the area of obscenity and pornography with the aim of identifying any actual or potential difficulties in enforcement or weaknesses in the law, including the Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981.

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whose responsibility it is to enforce the Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981; and what arrangements are in place to monitor its enforcement; [24482]

(2) to whom the public should complain in respect of concerns about a magazine cover which they believe is indecent and on display. [24476]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The enforcement of the Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981 itself is a matter for the police, to whom the public should complain if they are concerned that a magazine cover is indecent and on public display.

The interdepartmental group on obscenity keeps under review the operation of the law on obscenity and pornography, including indecent displays.

Panic Alarms

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding is available for panic alarms to be given to tenants in high crime areas. [24206]

Mr. Maclean: Since 1988, a number of vulnerable people have benefitted from personal alarms funded under phase 1 of the safer cities programme. Funding under this programme is restricted to areas in which safer cities projects have been established, and decisions on which schemes to support are taken by local steering committees based on their agreed priorities and action plans.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what studies have been carried out by his Department or by other bodies into the effectiveness of panic alarms in crime prevention; and what assessment he has made of these studies. [24208]

Mr. Maclean: As part of a programme of work on violent crime, the Home Office funded a project in Merseyside aimed at preventing domestic violence. Pendant alarms, linked via a cellular network to the police divisional control room, were loaned to "at risk" victims. At the same time, a database of police calls to domestic incidents was established so that officers responding to one of the alarm calls could be briefed quickly about the previous calls received from that address. Police officers were issued with aide-memoires on their powers for dealing with incidents of domestic violence; and victims were given information cards, and offered help from a domestic violence prevention officer in developing longer term safety plans. Detailed accounts taken from the victims indicate the relief both they and their children experienced as a result of this work. The report of this project was published as crime prevention unit paper 49. I have arranged for a copy of this report to be placed in the Library.

I am not aware of any other research in this area.

Security Companies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce a licensing scheme for security companies; and if he will make a statement. [24158]

Mr. Maclean: I am currently looking again at policies in this area and await with interest the report of the Home Affairs Select Committee inquiry into the private security industry which is expected shortly.

Female Prisoners

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many female prisoners currently share (a) two and (b) three to a cell. [24272]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 18 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of female prisoners currently sharing two and three to a cell.

At the end of April there were 54 female prisoners in England and Wales sharing two to a cell designed for one. There were no female prisoners sharing three to a cell designed for one.

Braille Ballot Papers

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those European Union countries which provide ballot papers in local, national and European elections in Braille; and if he will make a statement. [24113]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I am not aware that any of the member states provide ballot papers in Braille. As in this country, blind voters throughout the Community may choose someone to help them to vote.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce Braille ballot papers in local, national and European elections; and if he will make a statement. [24112]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: There are no plans to do so.

Polling Station Ramps

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his latest estimate of the amount expended in the 1995 local elections in England and Wales on the provision of temporary ramps for access to polling stations; what assessment was made of the comparative cost and cost benefit of providing permanent ramps instead; and if he will make a statement. [24111]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The provision of temporary ramps for use at local government elections is a matter for local authorities. No grants are made from central funds towards the cost of equipment purchased for local government elections, but returning officers may apply for grants towards the cost of temporary ramps to be used at polling places for parliamentary and European elections. Temporary ramps purchased for parliamentary and European elections under these arrangements can be made available for local government elections and for other purposes by arrangement with the returning officer.

Returning Officers

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was paid or payable to each returning officer in England and Wales at the 1995 local elections; what out-of-pocket expenses had to be met from these payments; what was the level of payment to each other grade involved in these elections; and if he will make a statement. [24107]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Returning officers' fees and expenses and other costs relating to the conduct of local government elections are met by local authorities. This information is not collected centrally.

Crack Cocaine

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy on cautioning of persons found in possession of crack cocaine. [24012]

Mr. Maclean: It is for the police to decide, on the basis of the guidance on the cautioning of offenders in Home Office circular 18/1994, whether a person found in possession of a controlled drug should be dealt with by means of a caution.

Rural White Paper

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the net annual financial saving, or cost, of his Department's submission for the proposed White Paper on the rural economy. [24333]

Mr. Maclean: Proposals for the rural White Paper remain subject to continuing collective consideration and discussion. The cost of measures contained in the White Paper will be taken into account in the public expenditure survey.

Safer Cities Scheme

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to extend the funding via the safer cities scheme for a secure room for the safety of witnesses at Salford magistrates' court to Coventry magistrates court and other magistrates courts. [24207]

Mr. Maclean: I have no such plans. The Coventry safer cities project closed in March 1994 and the bulk of the safer cities programme now forms part of the single regeneration budget at the Department of the Environment. It is for projects' local steering committees to decide on their funding priorities.

Witness Liaison Officers

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to discuss with Victim Support and other interested groups ways to introduce witness liaison officers (a) across the country and (b) in the Hillfields and Stoke Aldermoor areas of Coventry; [24209]

(2) what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for the Environment on funding for witness liaison officers (a) across the country and (b) in the Willenhall, Hillfields and Stoke Aldermoor areas of Coventry. [24205]

Mr. Maclean: The Government have accepted the recommendation made by the Royal Commission on criminal justice that witness support schemes should be established at all Crown court centres. There are already 40 schemes in operation, including one at Coventry Crown court, and additional Home Office funding, made available in 1994–95 and 1995–96, will enable Victim Support to establish schemes at all 78 Crown court centres by the end of 1995.

My Department has regular contact with Victim Support on a whole range of issues, including witness support. Since the Home Office accepts responsibility for funding the Crown court witness service this is not an issue which I have discussed with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Car Fires

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fires there were in cars; and how many deaths were caused by those fires in each year since 1993. [24435]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The available information is for 1993 and relates to car fires attended by local authority fire brigades. This is published in table 15 of Home Office "Statistical Bulletin" issue 29/94, "Summary Fire Statistics United Kingdom 1993", a copy of which is in the Library.

Foundation for Business Responsibilities

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to seek further information on how the Foundation for Business Responsibilities applied its funds; [24705]

(2) what investigations the Charity Commissioners have made into the Foundation for Business Responsibilities; what assessment he has made; if he will seek further investigations; and if he will make a statement. [24704]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The Charity Commissioners have recently concluded their second enquiry into the affairs of the Foundation for Business Responsibilities during which they interviewed a number of further witnesses and sought and obtained further documents. The two inquiries have established that some money was paid improperly to Marketforce Communications and that there were some shortcomings in the controls within the charity. The individual responsible for the payments has left the charity and has repaid the money. The administrative and financial systems of the charity will be closely monitored over the next two years. Responsibility for decisions in relation to individual cases are the responsibility of the Charity Commissioners.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Metropolitan police received a report of the thefts of documents from the offices of the Foundation for Business Responsibilities; what investigations were undertaken into these thefts; and what the conclusions and results were. [24703]

Mr. Maclean: The information is not readily available and I will write to the hon. Member.

Nicholas Hill

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will write to the hon. Member for Warwickshire, North giving the outcome of the application for parole of Nicholas Hill convicted in 1990 at Birmingham for robbery. [24560]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I will write to the hon. Member once Mr. Hill has been notified of the outcome of his current parole review, which should be known in about three months' time.

Young Offenders

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many youths under 18 years were held in Prison Service establishments in 1994. [23937]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Mike O'Brien, dated 18 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many youths under 18 years were held in Prison Service establishments in 1994.

The population of male and female youths aged under 18 at 30 June 1994 was 1,526.

Prisons (Drug Tests)

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the establishments piloting the first phase of mandatory drug tests in prisons together with the percentages in each prison of prisoners tested positive; and what forms of disciplinary penalty have been chosen by each governor in each case where prisoners have tested positive; [20313]

(2) what estimate he has made of the increase in prison population and average length of sentence, arising from disciplinary actions as a result of the first phase of mandatory drug testing in prisons; and if he will make a statement; [20312]

(3) if he will make a statement on the results to date of the first phase of mandatory drug tests in prisons; what is the percentage of randomly selected prisoners and targeted prisoners who have tested positive; what are the most common drugs identified; and what is the average increase in prison sentence for drug-positive results; [20314]

(4) if he will make a statement on (a) the cost to date and (b) the anticipated costs of the mandatory drug tests in prisons. [20315]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 24 April 1994]: Eight prison establishments were selected for the initial phase of the mandatory drug testing programme. These were Bristol, Holloway, Lindholme, Pentonville, Wakefield and Wayland prisons, and Her Majesty's young offenders institution/remand centre, Feltham and HMYOI Stoke Heath. Holloway has only recently begun its testing programme and no results are as yet available.

Random tests have been carried out at each of the other seven sites and, of the total samples taken and submitted for testing between February and the end of April 1995—871—36 per cent. have confirmed positive. The results for individual prisons are shown in the table.

In addition to the random tests, each prison undertakes tests targeted on prisoners who are suspected of misusing drugs and, of the total samples collected on these grounds and submitted for testing between February and April 1995, 62 per cent. have tested positive.

The most common drug identified through the random testing programme is cannabis, which was present in 32 per cent. of the random tests undertaken. Of the other drug types, only opiates—heroin—present in 2 per cent. of tests undertaken, and benzodiazepines—tranquillisers—present in 1 per cent. of tests, appear in any significant quantities.

All prisoners testing positive are informed of the options available for assistance in giving up their drug habits. Reducing the level of drug misuse within prison is one of the Prison Service's strategic priorities for 1995–98. To facilitate this, the Prison Service has recently launched a comprehensive drugs strategy containing a wide range of measures aimed at reducing the supply of drugs into prison, reducing the demand for drugs within prison together with measures to assist in rehabilitating drug misusers. Local drug strategies are being developed at each prison and will form part of each establishment's contract with their area manager.

The disciplinary penalties selected by governors have varied between prisons and in individual cases. A total of 290 prisoners have, up to the end of April, been found guilty of disciplinary charges arising from positive drug tests and penalties have generally included the imposition of added days for those serving determinate sentences. Details of individual punishments for those charges resulting from positive test results will be placed in the Library.

As the number of adjudications following positive tests has been relatively small, the impact of any awards of added days on prison population will have been negligible during the initial phase. Any impact on future prison population is being considered but with the limited information available to date, it is not possible as yet to make any reliable estimates of future trends.

The total costs, excluding staffing costs, incurred during 1994–95 in introducing mandatory drug testing in prisons was £95,000. One of the purposes of the initial phase of mandatory drug testing is to help identify the total costs likely to be involved in the drug testing programme. These costs will not be clear until the initial phase is over and the negotiations are completed with contractors who are bidding for a national contract to provide the Prison Service with drug testing facilities.

Establishment	Number of random tests carried out	Proportion of random tests confirmed for illicit drugs Per cent.
Bristol	145	33 (±8)
Feltham	143	40 (±8)
Lindholme	46	48 (±15)
Pentonville	166	46 (±8)
Stoke Heath	78	23 (±9)
Wakefield	115	29 (±8)
Wayland	178	35 (± 7)
Total	871	36 (±3)

Note:
The plus/minus (±) figures shown in the last column represents the confidence which can be placed in the accuracy of the proportions given the relatively small number of tests undertaken to date.

Crime Prevention

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money has been spent on crime prevention in each of the last 10 years; and what percentage this is of the criminal justice budget. [22837]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 10 May 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her yesterday in response to question No. 184.

WALES

Careers Service

Mr. Barry Jones: to ask the Secretary of State for Wales, if he will make a statement on the running of the careers service in Wales. [24197]

Mr. Redwood: My hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Mr. Richards), announced on 3 April 1995, details of the contracts agreed for the provision of the careers service from 1 April 1995. Arrangements for contract management were set out in the prospectus published on 8 June 1994.

Copies of the prospectus and the announcement are available in the Library of the House.

Early Retirement

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date his Department's second and enhanced early retirement and voluntary redundancy scheme was advertised; and how many applications have been received so far. [24928]

Mr. Redwood: On 20 December 1994. A total of 163 applications were received.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, on what date the request for volunteers for the Welsh Office redundancy scheme without enhancement was first posted; and how many staff applied in (a) the first and (b) the second month. [24927]

Mr. Redwood: On 4 November 1994. There were two applicants in November and one in December.

NHS Annual Accounts

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, if he will ensure that copies of trust annual reports are made available to the public via the public library service and via local authority offices. [24938]

Mr. Redwood: Copies of their annual report may be obtained on request from NHS trusts.

Trust Appointments

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, columns 103–4, if he will specify which trust had its non-executive board members announced after 1 April; on what date; and if he will specify which of the trusts which became operational on 1 April 1995 still have not had the non-executive board members' names announced. [24935]

Mr. Redwood: Morriston NHS trust became operational on 1 April 1994; its board was completed in February 1995. No announcement was made.

The following trusts became operational on 1 April 1995: Cardiff Community Healthcare NHS trust; University Hospital of Wales Healthcare NHS trust; University Dental Hospital NHS trust; West Wales Ambulance NHS trust; and Glan-y-Mor NHS trust—shadow running until 1 April 1996 I have not yet announced the names of the non-executive directors.

Countryside Council for Wales

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 103, on what date he initiated the consultations with local authorities or their associations on the implications for authorities of the action plan for the Countryside Council for Wales. [24933]

Mr. Redwood: I consulted both the Assembly of Welsh Counties and the Council of Welsh Districts on 4 May 1995.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 103, in which section of his Department the grade 7 officer was in charge of the financial management policy review of the Countryside Council for Wales immediately before being put in charge of the review. [24942]

Mr. Redwood: The officer had a wide range of policy experience before undertaking the review. It is not my Department's practice to give detailed information about the postings of individual officers.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 102, if the Financial Management Policy Review of the Countryside Council for Wales reached the stage of drawing conclusions before it was overtaken by the review referred to in his answer to the right hon. Member for Conwy (Sir W. Roberts) on 3 November 1994, Official Report, column 1329; and if he will give the cost to public funds separately for each of the two reviews. [24932]

Mr. Redwood: The financial management policy review of the Countryside Council for Wales was not completed, although some of the initial conclusions reached were carried forward into the review. Work on the review was carried out by the appropriate divisions in my Department as part of their normal duties and it is not possible to attribute separate costs to the work beyond the information provided in the answer to the hon. Member on 15 May.

Public Bodies

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 102, for how long the Countryside Council for Wales had been in existence before the financial management policy review was begun; and if he will list all other non-departmental public bodies which have had reviews initiated following a shorter period of existence. [24943]

Mr. Redwood: The Countryside Council for Wales was established on 5 November 1990 and assumed its full responsibilities on 1 April 1991. The financial management and policy review started on 5 April 1994. No other reviews of executive non-departmental bodies have been undertaken in a shorter timescale.

Cardiff East Sewage Works

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what consultation he has had with the National Rivers Authority and Welsh Water concerning the proposed Cardiff East sewage works; what further consideration he has given to the size and scope of the scheme and the date for completion of stage one and stage two; and if he will make a statement; [24929]

(2) what representations he has had concerning the proposed Cardiff East sewage works; and what consultations he has had with the Environment Directorate of the European Commission concerning derogations from the completion dates specified in the municipal waste water treatment directive. [24926]

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on Thursday 20 October 1994, at column 313.

GP and Hospital Records

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the principal aspects of the guidelines governing the conduct of appeal hearings under the health service complaints procedures as they applied in 1991–92, with respect to the safe keeping of original NHS general practitioner and hospital records in his Department's vaults during the adjournments of such hearings; what records are kept of retrievals of such records during any such adjournment of a hearing; what are the rules relating to the notification to appellants or their legal representatives on the resumption of the hearing of such retrieval of documents and records; and if he will make a statement; [24780]

(2) what departmental records exists of retrieval and replacement between 19 March and 7 September 1992 of files held in his departmental vaults containing the original general practitioner records and hospital records of Robert Powell (deceased), of 138 Brecon road, Ystradgynlais, pertaining to the adjournment appeal by Mr. William Powell of the same address and father of the deceased child under the NHS complaints procedure in relation to primary health care. [24784]

Mr. Redwood: The regulations governing the handling of complaints against GPs make no specific provision about the safe-keeping of such documents in the circumstances described. The security of all documents is of course subject to the Department's overall policy on record keeping. Only the hospital records of Robert Powell were held by the Department between March and September 1992.

The only record of retrieval during that period concerns the retrieval made in response to a request, made by a letter dated 13 August 1992, from Mr. Powell's solicitors for the hospital records to be subject to scientific testing. The other parties to the appeal were made aware of the request.

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his plans to cost proposals of Her Majesty's Opposition for a Welsh Assembly. [24931]

Mr. Redwood: When I get a clear idea of the Opposition's devolution proposals I will comment on costs.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, what guidelines he has agreed with his Department to maintain a proper distinction between party political activities and administrative duties in calculating the cost of proposals of Her Majesty's Opposition for a Welsh Assembly; and if he will make a statement. [24930]

Mr. Redwood: Once the Labour party has published its agreed proposals, I shall calculate the costs taking account of published data.

Local Pay

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 103, what guidelines he has given to trusts which became operational on 1 April but which have not yet had their non-executive board membership appointed, on the negotiations of local pay bargaining with nursing and auxiliary staff; and if he will make a statement. [24934]

Mr. Redwood: None. I hope to complete appointments shortly which will enable all trust boards to authorise settlement.

Trade (Taiwan)

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what he is doing to promote trade between Wales and Taiwan and whether he will make a statement. [25535]

Mr. Redwood: The Welsh Office actively supports trade and business contacts between Wales and Taiwan—including a successful trade mission to Taiwan last September; by support for inward investment, including the recent announcement of a 100 job project by Ringtel, the first major Taiwanese inward investment into Wales. The Welsh Development Agency has an active programme to develop further investment opportunities and maintains an office in Taipei. I am also aware of and appreciate my right hon. Friend's support for the WDA's efforts through his own forthcoming visit to Taiwan.

EMPLOYMENT

Volunteer Work

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to encourage unemployed people to seek relevant work experience through volunteering. [24448]

Miss Widdecombe: We recognise that volunteering can help unemployed people keep in touch with the labour market and contribute to improving their prospects of getting a job. The potential advantages of undertaking voluntary work while unemployed are set out in an Employment Department leaflet entitled "Voluntary Work When You're Unemployed", copies of which are available in the Library. There are special arrangements in the benefit rules for unemployed people undertaking voluntary work. They are allowed 48 hours' notice to be available for work; and voluntary work is taken into account in determining whether someone is actively seeking employment.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what trials or pilot schemes of anticipated jobseeker's allowance procedures have been undertaken by his Department; where they have been held; how long they lasted; what they covered; and what were the results. [25575]

Miss Widdecombe: The jobseeker's allowance implementation project team is setting up trials of the jobseeker's allowance process in 20 locations throughout England, Scotland and Wales. Three trials, in Newton Abbot, Barnstaple and Exeter, started during April. Other locations where trials are likely to start during June are Bathgate, Alnwick, Jarrow, Middlesbrough, Cheetham Hill, Goole, Porthmadog, Madeley, Halesowen, Norwich, Gabalfa and Victoria Park. Discussions are under way with the Employment Service and the Benefits Agency in other locations where trials might take place.

The trial offices will simulate the jobseeker's allowance process as closely as possible under existing legislation. Evaluation of the trials will inform development of operational procedures.

PRIME MINISTER

Nolan Committee

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister what has been the cost to public funds to date of the Nolan committee; what payments or emoluments have been made to each member of the committee; what are the anticipated on-going costs; and if he will make a statement. [25259]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the Nolan committee's first report, which was published last week and states that the committee's total estimated cost to the end of April 1995 was £317,200.

Lord Nolan, my right hon. Friend the Member for Bridgwater (Mr. King), the right hon. Member for Bethnal Green and Stepney (Mr. Shore) and Ms Diana Warwick do not receive emoluments for their Nolan committee work as they already receive a salary from other public funds. Other members of the committee were paid a salary of £1,000 per month from November 1994 to April 1995. They are now receiving an attendance fee of £155 per day. Members travel and subsistence expenses are met from public funds.

The on-going cost of the committee is estimated to be £500,000 a year.

Deregulation

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister what further action he proposes to take to advance the Government's deregulation initiative. [25801]

The Prime Minister: I have established a new ministerial committee to co-ordinate the Government's programme of deregulation and consider how the burden of deregulation on business, charities and individuals can be kept to a minimum. Copies of the terms of reference and membership are in the Library of the House.

MINISTERIAL COMMITTEE ON DEREGULATION (EDD)

Composition

President of the Board of Trade (Chairman)
Lord President of the Council
Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster
Secretary of State for Employment
Lord Privy Seal
Chief Secretary to the Treasury
Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Corporate Affairs, Department of Trade and Industry
Other Ministers will be invited to attend as necessary.

Terms of Reference

"To co-ordinate the Government's programme of deregulation and to consider how the burden of regulation on businesses, charities and individuals can be kept to a minimum."

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Resignations

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, as representing the Church Commissioners (1) if he will list the estimates the Commission has been given by the House of Bishops on the estimated number of resignations and claims which will be made to the Ordination of Women (Financial Provisions) Measure 1993 up until the expiry of the Measure;

(2) what estimates the Church Commission has made of the number of priests who will claim compensation under the Ordination of Women (Financial Provisions) Measure 1993 for each year until the expiry of the Measure.

Mr. Alison: The House of Bishops has not itself provided estimates, the Church Commissioners' estimates are their own, following consultation with the Church of England pensions board.

As at 30 April 1995, 265 clergy eligible for financial assistance under the Measure had resigned and so far have received £3.5 million in resettlement grants and periodic payments. A further 40 clergy have indicated their intention to resign. It is difficult to predict the final number of resignations. However, actual expenditure in 1994 and illustrative costings based on a possible total of 350 resignations are set out in the following table. These reflect the pattern of expenditure to date.

Illustration of costs for 350 resignations

Year	Gross Costs to be met from CC Income £	Housing Capital (funded by CC) £	Net Costs for Church £	Net Housing Capital (funded by (CC) £
1994	2,452,000	5,011,000	747,000	5,011,000
1995	3,439,000	4,770,000	1,872,000	4,770,000
1996	3,216,000	1,370,000	1,899,000	1,370,000
1997	2,434,000	355,000	1,226,000	54,000
1998	1,731,000	213,000	706,000	(100,000)
1999	1,250,000	111,000	433,000	(215,000)
2000	890,000	85,000	272,000	(254,000)
2001	851,000	88,000	412,000	(264,000)
2002	707,000	91,000	413,000	(274,000)
2003	625,000	95,000	437,000	(285,000)
2004	415,000	—	321,000	(396,000)
2005	289,000	—	244,000	(411,000)
2006	216,000	—	197,000	(428,000)
2007	211,000	—	204,000	(445,000)
2008	211,000	—	209,000	(463,000)
2009	217,000	—	216,000	(361,000)
2010	221,000	—	221,000	(375,000)
2011	226,000	—	226,000	(390,000)
2012	233,000	—	233,000	(406,000)
Total	19,834,000	12,189,000	10,488,000	6,138,000

Notes:

(a) The number of resignations shown, 350, is a broad estimate, and the final costs may vary substantially.

(b) Actual costs based on 232 resignations are shown in respect of 1994. A similar pattern of costs has been assumed for future years.

(c) The figures make allowance for future increases in house prices and stipends.

(d) It has been assumed that 50 per cent. of resigners will require housing assistance.

(e) The net figures take account of such variables as stipends savings—assuming at least a temporary reduction in the payroll—allowance for retirement housing provision which would otherwise have arisen on retirement, and the possibility of some people redeeming loans or leaving rented accommodation once they have obtained alternative employment.

Clergy (Resignations)

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, as representing the Church Commissioners what redundancy and other terms are being awarded to clergy who have left the Church of England to join the Roman Catholic Church.

Mr. Alison: Clergy who resign from ecclesiastical service and apply for assistance under the Ordination of Women (Financial Provisions) Measure 1993 are entitled to the various payments stipulated by the Measure, irrespective of whether they join another church. Provision is made for periodical payments and a resettlement grant. Additional discretionary payments may be made in cases of hardship, and access is also granted to the Church's housing assistance for the retired ministry scheme. Clergy in receipt of assistance under the Measure are obliged to disclose the income or other benefits derived from any new employment or office, and their periodical payments may be reduced or terminated to take account of this.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library (a) a copy of the paper on the United Kingdom's activities relating to the objectives of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, to which reference was made by Sir Michael Weston in his presentation to main committee I of the non-proliferation treaty conference on 19 April, (b) all other working papers submitted by the United Kingdom delegation to the main and sub-committees, (c) details of responses made by other delegations to United Kingdom submissions and (d) a copy of the final declaration from the conference; and if he will make a statement on the outcome of the non-proliferation treaty review and extension conference.

Mr. David Davis: Copies of the paper have been placed in the Library providing information on the activities and views of the United Kingdom on the principal objectives of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, and of our statements to main committees I, II, and III. Copies of the verbatim records of the open debates in the main committees will also be placed in the House Library. It is not our practice to disclose working papers. The conference did not adopt a final declaration. The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs made a statement to the House on 16 May, Official Report, columns 151–61.

China (Nuclear Tests)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to China about the nuclear weapons test conducted in China on 14 May. [24882]

Mr. David Davis: We have made no formal representations to the Chinese. We have noted their repeated commitment to abide by a comprehensive test ban treaty and look forward to their active participation in the negotiations on that treaty, which we hope will reach an early conclusion.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what indication the Chinese delegation at the recent nuclear non-proliferation treaty conference in New York gave to the United Kingdom diplomatic delegation of the intention of China to conduct a nuclear weapons test on 14 May. [24881]

Mr. David Davis: None.

Iran (Nuclear Weapons)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent information has been provided to Her Majesty's Government by the Government of the United States concerning the technical capability and aspirations of Iran to obtain nuclear weapons. [24883]

Mr. David Davis: We remain in close touch with the US Government on this issue. However, it is not our practice to reveal details of confidential exchanges with other Governments. We have grave concerns about the nuclear weapon aspirations of Iran, and we continue to work closely with the United States and our European partners to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Staff

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many posts were lost in (a) the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and (b) agencies for which the Foreign and Commonwealth Office is responsible, listing the total lost posts agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and how many posts are proposed to be lost in 1995–96. [25080]

Mr. Goodlad: Details of reductions in job slots resulting from efficiency measures taken in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Overseas Development Administration up to 1993–94 have been published annually in the citizens charter White Paper.

The number of job slots reduced in 1994–95 was: FCO, 1985; ODA, 32; and Natural Resources Institute, 49. The following reductions in 1995–96 have also been identified: FCO, 92; ODA, 50; and NRI, 140.

There have been no reductions in slots at Wilton Park, the FCO agency, nor are there plans for reductions in 1995–96.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes there have been in the numbers of staff employed by (a) the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and (b) agencies for which the Foreign and Commonwealth Office is responsible, listing the changes in the number of staff agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what changes are projected for 1995–96. [25062]

Mr. Goodlad: The members of permanent and casual staff employed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office diplomatic wing and its executive agency and the Overseas Development Administration in 1993–94, projected outturn for 1994–95, and plans for 1995–96 are published in this Department's annual report, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

The breakdown for the Overseas Development Administration and its agency, the Natural Resources Institute, is:

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
ODA
Civil Service full-time equivalents	1,190	1,137	1,120
Overtime	21	17	17
Casuals	56	63	70
	1,267	1,217	1,207
NRI
Civil Service full-time equivalents	428	341	341
Overtime	3	3	3
Casuals	25	25	25
	456	369	369

Immigration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when a decision is to be taken on the application made by Arshad Iqbal—ref: IMM/C8387—to the post in Islamabad to join his wife in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [25049]

Mr. Baldry: I have asked the high commission in Islamabad for details and will arrange for the hon. Member to receive a substantive reply from the migration and visa correspondence unit as soon as possible.

UN Conference on Women

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the size and membership of the International Planned Parenthood Federation and United Nations Family Planning Association delegations to the UN conference on women to be held in Beijing and of his Department's delegation. [25315]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have no information on the size or composition of the International Planned Parenthood Federation and the United Nations Family Planning Association delegations to the fourth world conference on women. On the British delegation, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Lidington) by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Department of Employment on 16 March, Official Report, column 648.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the human rights implications of choosing Beijing as the venue for the UN conference on women; what consideration was given to China's population programme in the choice of venue; what were the reasons for the choice; what representations Her Majesty's Government made to the conference organisers on the issue; and what provision is being made on the agenda to discuss the programme.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Peking was nominated as the venue for the fourth world conference on women in accordance with the United Nations principle of geographical rotation. Population will be discussed in one of the critical areas of concern in the global platform for action.

Indonesia

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to send a delegation of hon. Members and military experts to East Timor to assess whether British arms including Hawk aircraft are being used against the local civilian population by the Indonesian army. [25168]

Mr. Goodlad: None.

We have closely considered the latest allegations that Hawk aircraft have used to attack villages in East Timor and found no evidence from any source to support them.

Our embassy staff visit East Timor regularly, as do other western diplomats. The all-party Anglo-Indonesian parliamentary group visited East Timor from 17 to 19 September 1994.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what guarantees he has received that Scorpion tanks exported to Indonesia will not be used against either Indonesia or East Timorese civilians. [25169]

Mr. Goodlad: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade on 2 March, Official Report, column 716.

Romania

Sir John Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made by Her Majesty's Government to promote and sustain the reform process in Romania; and what results have been achieved by the establishment of the Romania information service. [25241]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We continue to support the reform process in Romania through a variety of means including the know-how fund. Romania is now a member of the Council of Europe and has an association agreement with the European Union. We also support financially the Romanian information centre which responds to the needs for advice and support for over 500 British charities and non-governmental organisations working in Romania.

Charar-e-Sharief Shrine

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the representatives of the Governments of India and Pakistan following the destruction of the holy shrine Charar-e-Sharief; and if he will make a statement. [25249]

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has not had any discussions with the representatives of the Government of India and Pakistan following the destruction of the holy shrine at Charar-e-Sharief.

Iraq

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent actions he has taken to ascertain the fate of Kuwaiti military personnel and civilians abducted by the Iraqis; and if he will make a statement. [25389]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We raise this issue at the United Nations at every opportunity and did so most recently when the Security Council reviewed sanctions against Iraq on 12 May. We have made it clear to the Iraqis that the lack of progress to date is unacceptable. We will continue to play a leading role in the tripartite commission and its technical sub-committee set up last December to speed up the review of case files on the detainees.

Uzbekistan

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports he has received of the harassment of Christians in Uzbekistan; and if he will make a statement. [25592]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have received reports of a meeting in Tashkent in April 1994 at which all religious organisations in Uzbekistan were warned against missionary activity, in particular the publishing and distribution of religious literature. We are not aware of any specific cases of harassment of Christians in Uzbekistan.

Instruments of Torture

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice has been given to his Department to (a) the Secretary of State for Defence and (b) the President of the Board of Trade on the transfer of weapons that can be used for torture overseas. [25674]

Mr. David Davis: A wide variety of weapons could conceivably be used for torture. If this Department judged that defence equipment, if transferred, would be likely to be so used, it would advise against the transfer.

ENVIRONMENT

Mortgage Arrears and Repossessions

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what are the main conclusions of his Department's report on mortgage arrears and repossessions; if he will identify, specifically, all the conclusions which refer to problems associated with the widespread promotion and uptake of private insurance to cover mortgage interest in the event of redundancy; and if he will make a statement; [24846]

(2) if he will list all the individuals, companies and organisations which were consulted by his officials in preparing their report on mortgage arrears and repossessions; [24845]

(3) what has been the cost of producing his Department's report on mortgage arrears and repossessions; and if he will be arranging a press conference to publish that report; [24847]

(4) when he intends to publish the full results of the report undertaken by his Department on mortgage arrears and repossessions; if he intends to circulate that report with an appropriate press release to the media; if he will make it his policy to make copies of that report immediately available through the Vote Office to all right hon. and hon. Members, and if he intends to make a statement in the House on the conclusions of that report; [24844]

(5) what plans he has to make available to the Secretary of State for Social Security copies of his Department's report on mortgage arrears and repossessions. [24848]

Mr. Curry: On 18 May 1995, my Department published the report of a £313,000 study commissioned from the university of Loughborough and the Policy Studies Institute into mortgage arrears, possessions and voluntary surrenders. Copies of the report, entitled "Mortgage arrears and possessions: perspectives from borrowers, lenders and the courts", have been placed in the Library. Copies have been sent to other Government Departments with an interest in the study, the Council of Mortgage Lenders, the Association of British Insurers, the Audit Commission, the Housing Corporation and the local authority associations. Further copies are available from HMSO outlets.

In the course of the study, the researchers carried out surveys and interviews with representative borrowers, lenders and district judges. The methods used and number of respondents of each type are described on pages 115 to 121 of the report. The main conclusions of the study are set out in pages 107 to 113 of the report, and those relating to mortgage protection insurance are on pages 60 to 62.

Radioactive Waste, Milton

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the dumping of low-level radioactive waste on the Milton landfill site; and how many of them were in favour of the proposal to dump low-level radioactive waste on the Milton landfill site. [24816]

Mr. Atkins: Low-level radioactive waste from "small users" such as hospitals and research laboratories has been disposed of by "controlled burial" at the Milton landfill site for a number of years. The Department's consultation document, "Review of Radioactive Waste Management Policy: Preliminary Conclusions", published in August 1994, suggested that greater use should be encouraged of controlled burial by radioactive waste producers including the nuclear industry. No proposals were made for specific sites. The conclusions of the radioactive waste review will be published in a White Paper in the summer.

The Department has received 220 letters opposing the disposal of low-level radioactive waste from the nuclear industry at the Milton site, together with two petitions—one with 766 signatures, the other with five. I also understand that the operators of the Milton site have said that they will not accept radioactive waste from the nuclear industry.

Water Quality

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance on appraisal, covering environmental, economic and financial costs to industry, he has given to the National Rivers Authority to assist it when it draws up its recommendations for statutory water quality objectives for the pilot rivers; and what arrangements he has made for the appraisals to be made available to the public. [24772]

Mr. Atkins: It is for the National Rivers Authority to support its recommendations for statutory water quality objectives with an assessment of the anticipated costs and benefits of achieving them. It is intended that this should form part of the public consultation document on the proposals.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provisional resources his Department makes available to assist low-income households improve the energy efficiency of their homes. [25145]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Our major energy efficiency programme for low-income households is the home energy efficiency scheme. More than 1 million households have benefited since 1991 from this scheme, which pays grants for basic home insulation measures and energy advice to householders who are over 60, receive an income-related benefit or disability living allowance. We have increased provision for the scheme substantially. During 1995–96, some £100 million will be made available for grants, and a similar sum has been set aside for each of the next two years. Over the next three years, I expect almost 2 million households to benefit from grants.

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the results of the funding by Midlands Electricity of neighbourhood energy action projects to benefit low-income consumers in the west midlands; and if he will commend the extension of private and voluntary sector partnership to other utilities. [25146]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: More than 20 different projects in the west midlands, ranging in scope from the provision of energy advice to non-English-speaking communities to home improvement programmes building on the energy efficiency measures available under our home energy efficiency scheme, have resulted from Midland Electricity's generous contribution to a partnership with the charity Neighbourhood Energy Action. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State visited one of these projects in the Sparkbrook area of Birmingham on 20 March this year, and was impressed with the energy efficiency improvements for the benefit of low-income households. This initiative is a good example of the kind of partnership between the private and voluntary sectors which many other energy companies have already adopted or are considering.

Landfill Sites

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment his Department has made of the safety of the United Kingdom's landfill sites. [24992]

Mr. Atkins: All landfill sites are required to be licensed by waste regulation authorities in accordance with part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. A waste regulation authority is required to reject an application for a licence unless it is satisfied that the landfill operation will not lead to pollution of the environment, harm to human health or serious detriment to the amenities of the locality. Conditions are attached to licences to ensure that operations do not lead to pollution or harm. Waste regulation authorities should regularly review licences to ensure that the conditions remain appropriate and effective. Authorities have powers to suspend or revoke licences if the licensed activities would cause pollution or harm.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his proposals for the allocation of standard spending assessments to the new unitary authorities created as a result of local government reorganisation in Cleveland. [25220]

Mr. Curry: The standard spending assessments for the new unitary authorities in Cleveland will be calculated on the basis of the services which these authorities provide, using the formulae which are applied to all relevant authorities.

Details of the formulae for 1995–96 are set out in the publication "Standard Spending Assessment Handbook, 1995–96", which is available from the Library. Following the review work which we undertake each year with the local authority associations, we will publish our proposals for 1996–97 in the usual way in December.

UN Conference on Environment and Development

Mr. Sheermen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment his Department has made of the progress of our European partners towards satisfying the recommendations of the United Nations conference on environment and development. [24986]

Mr. Atkins: The primary responsibility for carrying forward the commitments entered into at the Rio Earth summit lies with individual countries. At the request of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, EU colleagues adopted an action plan to implement the Rio commitments. Progress on meeting these commitments, and reviewing them as appropriate, is discussed at international fora such as the UN Commission on Sustainable Development, and the recent Berlin meeting of parties to the convention on climate change. The European Community's fifth environmental action programme, "Towards Sustainability", is linked closely to the principles and themes of Agenda 21. The UK is contributing fully to the present review of the programme by the European Commission.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure housing management services are exempt from compulsory competitive tendering during local government reorganisation and that those authorities with only boundary changes following the review are exempted in the same way as those with structural changes. [25560]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: On 12 December, the Government made regulations—the Local Government Changes for England (Direct Labour and Service Organisations) Regulations 1994—to exempt local authorities undergoing reorganisation from most of the requirements of compulsory competitive tendering. However, the regulations as drafted did not extend to housing management services or to authorities which will undergo functional changes but where the transferor authority has not been abolished. I have now made amendment regulations to rectify these omissions. These are being laid before the House today.

I have also taken the opportunity in these same amendment regulations to extend the exemption to local authority subject to boundary changes but not structural changes as a result of the implementation of the recommendations of the Local Government Commission made in pursuance of a direction given before the date these regulations were made. I think it only fair that such authorities are treated in a similar way as those that have been restructured. They also will face problems arising from the need to take decisions on appropriate new patterns of service delivery.

Abandoned Mine Workings

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what resources, capital and revenue have been allocated to the National Rivers Authority, in the current year and in the next three years' projections specifically for clean up operations of ferruginous discharges from abandoned mine workings. [24907]

Mr. Atkins: The National Rivers Authority receives an annual block allocation of resources to cover the gap between income and expenditure on its functions other than flood defence. Subject to ministerial guidance on priorities the amount used to cover clean-up of ferruginous discharges from abandoned mines is a matter for the NRA. The NRA's corporate plan has made provision for £2 million expenditure for clean-up of ferruginous discharges from abandoned mines in 1995–96 and envisages provision of a similar amount in the three following years.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the projects, both proposed and in operation, relating to discharges from abandoned mine workings, for which the National Rivers Authority has applied for resources. [24908]

Mr. Atkins: The National Rivers Authority receives an annual block allocation of resources to cover the gap between income and expenditure on its functions other than flood defence. Subject to ministerial guidance on priorities, the use of these resources is a matter for the NRA. Except in the case of Wheal Jane, the NRA has not applied for resources for individual mine-water projects.

Wading Birds, Cardiff Bay

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he has had with the European Union environment directorate concerning compliance with the undertaking given to create alternative bird reserves to mitigate the loss of wading birds' habitat in Cardiff bay. [25281]

Sir Paul Beresford: The European Commission was consulted about a review of the options for suitable sites for mitigating measures. The Commission is being kept informed of progress.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those companies in which the holder of his office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past five years. [25718]

Sir Paul Beresford: None.

National Parks

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State how he intends to respond to the concerns of those who live and work in the national parks that their views should be properly represented in the management of these special areas. [25745]

Mr. Atkins: I am well aware of the concerns expressed during the Bill's passage that local people should have greater involvement in the running of the parks and management of parks affairs. We have already made a number of amendments to the Bill to strengthen the part which local people should play in the parks' affairs. These have generally been welcomed, but we have been giving further thought to the membership of the NPAs, so as to ensure that the interests of park residents are properly represented on the new authorities.

Under the proposals, a third category of membership would be added to the current provisions of the Bill, which allow for two thirds of the members of the new authorities to be appointed by the local authorities—county, district and metropolitan district councils—with land in the parks and one third by the Secretary of State. The new category would be allocated to parishes which lie wholly or partly within the parks.

It is proposed that the new authorities would be constituted along the following lines:

i) one half of the members plus 1 to be appointed by local authorities with land in the parks; and

ii) the remainder to be appointed by the Secretary of State, of whom one half of his members minus 1 would be drawn from the relevant parishes.

Parish members would be drawn from parishes wholly or partly in the parks, and would be serving parish councillors or, where there is no parish council, chairmen of parish meetings.

Nominations to the Secretary of State for parish members would be sought from any or all of the following: the National Association of Local Councils, groupings of parishes within the parks or individual parishes. Nominations could also come from other sources, including individuals with an interest in park affairs.

Parish members would be appointed by the Secretary of State, after consulting the Countryside Commission, as is already the case for his direct appointments, and would be subject to the same provisions as set out in the Bill as regards, for example, attendance, disqualification from holding office, members' interests, allowances, as apply to local authority and other members appointed by the Secretary of State. I have placed a copy of the letter which I have sent to local authorities in the Libraries of the Houses.

These proposals apply to the English national parks. Because of commitments which have already been made in respect of the membership of the national park board being established under the Local Government (Wales) Act 1994, and the circular letters already issued for consultations about establishing Welsh NPAs, the Secretary of State for Wales is proposing to leave unchanged the provisions for membership of the NPAs as they apply in Wales.

Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the chairmanship of the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee. [25767]

Mr. Gummer: Together with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales, I have today appointed Sir Gordon Beveridge to succeed Sir John Knill as chairman of the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee, when his appointment ends on 31 May. Sir Gordon's appointment is for a three-year term ending on 31 May 1998.

I have written to Sir John Knill to thank him for the excellent work he has done for the Committee over a period of nearly 10 years, for more than seven of which he has been chairman.

Sewage Sludge

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made on the Government's response to the recommendations from the review on the current rules on sewage sludge use in agriculture; and if he will make a statement. [25746]

Mr. Atkins: Environment and Agriculture Ministers have considered the two reports from the review which examined the soil fertility aspects and the food safety and relevant animal health aspects. We are reassured by their general conclusions on the level of protection afforded by the current rules on sewage sludge use in agriculture. Following consultation with appropriate bodies, we have decided to reduce the advisory limit for zinc in the code of practice on sludge use in agriculture. We shall review the limit again when results from recently commissioned, long-term research become available.

We have also decided to reduce the advisory limit for cadmium where sewage sludge is applied to grass managed in rotation or grown for conservation. In addition, research will be undertaken to address the review's recommendation on dropping the pH banding for metal limits.

The water industry has been successful in effectively controlling direct and identifiable metal inputs to sewers, and achieving reductions in metal concentrations in sewage sludge. Trade effluent charges based on the polluter pays principle should lead to continuing improvements in sludge quality. In addition, we expect further reductions in cadmium and mercury concentrations in sewage sludge as we continue implementation of integrated pollution control.

As recommended, we are also considering the need for controls on heavy metals from other waste materials and products, including animal manures, to protect soil fertility. Results from a study investigating metal inputs to agricultural soils from all sources will shortly be available.

The decisions we have taken will enable sewage sludge to continue to beneficially recycled to agriculture land, while ensuring that soil microbial processes and human, animal plant health are not put at risk from potentially toxic elements which may be present in sludge.

British Gas Sites

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the sites formerly owned by British Gas where (a) discussions regarding grant aid have occurred, (b) grant aid has been formally applied for and (c) grant aid has been approved in order to redevelop the sites giving, in each case, the amount of aid involved and including grant aid from (i) his Department and (ii) urban development corporations and other publicly funded bodies. [24599]

Sir Paul Beresford: Information on the former ownership of sites which have been subject to applications for grant is not readily available. In many cases, the previous landowner is unknown. I will, however, write to the hon. Gentleman with such further information as we can gather.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Public Library Review

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he expects to publish the findings of the public library review and the study of the possibilities for contracting out in public libraries; what proposals he has to consult with local authorities and the Library Association; and if he will make a statement. [24407]

Mr. Sproat: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement about the public library review that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made on Tuesday 16 May, Official Report, columns 150-51. The separate contracting out study was completed and received by my Department after the Aslib report and we are looking carefully at its findings. We expect to make a further statement in due course.

DEFENCE

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his current policy in respect of the recognition of Gulf war syndrome; and if he will make a statement. [24125]

Mr. Soames: No evidence has emerged to support the existence of a medical condition peculiar to those who served in the Gulf which would justify recognition of the term Gulf war syndrome. We will, however, continue to investigate all those with Gulf-related health concerns and all allegations, both scientific and anecdotal, which bear on this issue.

Former Service Personnel

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last met representatives of the Royal British Legion to discuss the establishment of a Ministry for Veterans Affairs as a sub-department of MOD; and if he will make a statement. [24072]

Mr. Soames: Following a meeting last November between the Minister of State for Social Security, the Under-Secretary of State for Defence and representatives of the Royal British Legion, it was agreed that many matters relating to the welfare of former service personnel fall within the scope of the Department of Social Security. That Department is now taking the lead on these issues.

Plutonium

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will obtain a copy of the United States Department of Energy's plutonium working group report on environmental safety and health vulnerabilities associated with the department's plutonium storage published in November 1994; and if he will evaluate its relevance for the situation at sites and facilities operated by the Atomic Weapons Establishment and British Nuclear Fuels plc on behalf of his Department. [24294]

Mr. Soames: My Department's study of the report is currently in progress. The UK's position is, however, different from that of the US in that our holding of fissile materials is broadly in balance with national needs at any given time and is, in the main, embodied in manufactured warheads. The question of managing a substantial reserve stockpile does not, therefore, arise.

Western European Union

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals were put by the United Kingdom to the meeting of Western European Union Defence and Foreign Affairs Ministers in Lisbon on 15 May. [25292]

Mr. Soames: The WEU Ministerial Council met to consider a number of issues, including the contribution that we expect the WEU to make to the 1996 intergovernmental conference to review the provisions of the Maastricht treaty, and the internal development of the WEU itself to provide it with new decision-making and planning mechanisms and structures. The WEU Council also met associate partners to review progress on a study of the new security conditions in Europe. The UK has made a significant contribution to the debate on all these topics, both at the ministerial meeting and in the preceding months. In particular, we have made proposals for the development of the WEU as the defence arm of the European Union, which were set out in the "Memorandum on the UK's approach to the treatment of European defence issues at the 1996 Inter-Governmental Conference", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. WEU Ministers welcomed the UK's contribution in this regard, as noted in the Lisbon declaration, a copy of which will be placed in the Library of the House shortly. The UK has also worked with Italy to develop proposals for a WEU task force for humanitarian missions, which Ministers endorsed at Lisbon.

Russia

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the recent evaluation of the current military threat posed by Russia made by the Chief of the Defence Staff. [25264]

Mr. Soames: Although Russia currently poses no direct military threat to the United Kingdom, it retains immense military forces, both conventional and nuclear; the progress of reform, which we all hope will succeed, will remain an important determinant of our security and defence policies.

Crown Housing Trust

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 192, what amount of performance-related bonus was received by the chief executive of the Crown Housing Trust on the anniversary of his appointment. [25178]

Mr. Soames: The chief executive (designate) of the Crown Housing Trust received a total of £19,900 in performance bonus for his service, which was terminated on 31 March 1995.

Empty Dwellings

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action his Department has taken to reserve all empty MOD dwellings that have been standing empty for six months or more and negotiate their disposal by lease or sale to local authorities of housing associations. [25175]

Mr. Soames: The majority of my Department's empty dwellings are not surplus to requirements but are undergoing or awaiting major maintenance work, already allotted to service families due to move in shortly, or form part of the management margin needed to ensure that accommodation is available for entitled service families. Those properties which are surplus are, wherever possible, offered for sale to service personnel through the services' discount scheme to enable them to purchase a home of their own. Surplus properties not suitable for this scheme are normally offered in the first instance to housing associations or local authorities before being offered for sale on the open market. In addition, we are planning an enhanced programme of leasing to housing associations or local authorities of properties which are temporarily surplus to requirements but which will be needed again in the long term.

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many MOD homes in Cheshire are empty; and how many of these homes have been empty for more than six months. [25177]

Mr. Soames: As at 31 March, my Department owned 107 empty houses in Cheshire, of which 26 had been empty for more than six months. Many of the vacant properties were either undergoing or awaiting major maintenance work, already allotted to service families due to move in shortly or formed part of the management margin needed to ensure that accommodation is available for entitled service families. Twenty-eight of the 107 empty properties were in the process of being sold.

US Air Bases

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the UK American air base sites that have been declared surplus to requirement and sold between April 1991 and April 1995; and the total income generated. [25180]

Mr. Soames: The only American air base site that has been declared surplus to requirement and sold between April 1991 and April 1995 is RAF Chessington, Surrey. The income generated from this sale is commercial in-confidence between my Department and the purchaser.

Surplus RAF Sites

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the RAF sites that have been declared surplus to requirement and sold between April 1991 and April 1995; and the total income generated. [25179]

Mr. Soames: The RAF sites which were declared surplus to requirement and sold between April 1991 and April 1995 are:

RAF Chessington, Surrey, formerly UK American air base
RAF Barnwood, Gloucestershire
RAF Collaton Cross, Deveon
RAF Mountbatten, Devon
RAF Bawdsey, Suffolk
RAF Ely, Cambridgeshire
RAF Greatworth, Northamptonshire
RAF Northcoates, Lincolnshire
RAF Orfordness, Suffolk
RAF Jurby Head, Isle of Man
RAF Bishopscourt, Northern Ireland

The total income generated from these sales was £18,988,689.

Bovington

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are employed at Bovington and Lulworth broken down by types of employee; and whether they live on or off site. [25587]

Mr. Soames: There are at present 686 military personnel, about 400 civilian staff and 205 contractors employed at Bovington. Nearly all the military live on site; and nearly all the civilians live off site. This does not include trainees who come to Bovington for courses, who number around 3,500 a year.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost of building sufficient facilities for the 3rd Armoured Reconnaissance Regiment at Bovington on land abutting Stanley barracks, by comparison to splitting the regiment between Bovington and Lulworth; and what studies have been carried out to look at these two options. [25585]

Mr. Soames: The two options were both examined in the study of the comparative costs of future locations of the 3rd Armoured Reconnaissance Regiment. This work showed that the cost of building facilities at Bovington alone would be about £7 million higher than the costs of splitting the regiment. Moreover, building extra facilities on a green field site at Bovington would disrupt training activity.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give a breakdown of the living accommodation at Bovington and Lulworth including the number of vacancies; how much of the accommodation is occupied by people on courses; what other accommodation the MOD owns within a 20-mile radius; and what are the vacancies. [25588]

Mr. Soames: At Stanley barracks, Bovington there are 550 bed spaces, 336 of which are for trainees. At present, there are 150 vacancies, although these vary from week to week depending on course loading.

At Allenby barracks, Bovington there are 567 bed spaces, all of which are occupied.

At Lulworth, there are 465 bed spaces. There are currently 142 vacancies, but these also vary depending on course loading.

Within a 20-mile radius of Bovington and Lulworth my Department owns three sites; West Moors petroleum training school which has 30 spare bed spaces and Blandford school of signals which has 121 spare bed spaces. The number of spare bed spaces at both sites depends on course loading and will often reduce to nil. In addition to the above two sites there is a hutted and tented training camp at Wyke Regis. This camp does not possess permanent living accommodation.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what training activities are carried out at Bovington camp in areas designated on the Bovington and Lulworth Ordnance Survey map as (a) S1, (b) W1 and (c) W2; how many days per year these activities are carried out; and what is the area of each of these sites. [25584]

Mr. Soames: The activities are as follows:

(a) Recruit driver training, Territorial Army training, and infantry tactics; about 100 days a year; 180 acres.

(b) Engineer training—bridging and digging, driver training, infantry tactics; 280 days a year; 165 acres.

(c) Driving circuit used for low level infantry training and the armoured trials and development unit; about 100 days a year; 140 acres.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will name the consultants who were employed to advise on the location of the 3rd Armoured Reconnaissance Regiment; what were their terms of reference; if these included calculating the cost of locating the whole of the regiment at Bovington; and if he will publish their report. [25586]

Mr. Soames: The consultants were Sawyer Architects of Winchester. Their terms of reference which are set out, required them to consider and comment on the option of locating the 3rd Armoured Reconnaissance Regiment in the Bovington area, taking into account a number of factors.

Terms of Reference

(1) All the land and buildings associated with Stanley barracks, Bovington and areas available for development at Lulworth camp for satisfying the statement of requirement. The married quarters are not to be considered as part of the study. Any shortfall in existing buildings is to be costed as a new build, and any shortfall of land is to be addressed with a statement on how this shortfall can be overcome.

(2) The study is to comment on the adequacy of existing, and future requirements for land, buildings and facilities for single living, eating, sleeping, recreation, administration offices, training and working accommodation and the storage, servicing, maintenance and operation of vehicles and equipment.

(3) Identify in conjunction with the Defence Land Agent any known or anticipated environmental constraints, planning constraints including any historical listings.

(4) As a desk study examine information available on ground conditions, ground water table which may have a bearing on the options.

(5) Any proposed new builds, modernisations, extensions of maintenance projects in planning/design or construction.

(6) For each option give estimated costs of the annual maintenance for the option as a whole as well as any anticipated major maintenance items, and the year in which you estimated they will occur, over a 60-year period.

(7) Identify with the client representative the security needs for both the active and passive ie fences, lighting, perimeter intruder defence systems, close circuit television and security of buildings.

(8) The report should identify, consider and make a brief statement on the implications of the feasibility, planning, costing, phasing and execution of the works with the current or proposed occupants in occupation during the construction of any works identified within the options.

A number of options were investigated including the cost of locating the whole regiment at Bovington. The consultants' report contains much information that is commercial in-confidence, and will not therefore be published. The conclusions of their report, along with other relevant factors, will, however, be made clear by the Ministry of Defence when a final decision on the future location of the 3rd Armoured Reconnaissance Regiment is made.

Nuclear-powered Submarines

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 17 May to the hon. Member for Cornwall, South-East (Mr. Hicks), Official Report, column 229, what new nuclear safety practices have been introduced; what improvements need to be made to the Devonport facilities; how much these changes will cost and when they will be completed; how many nuclear-powered submarines will be refitted at Rosyth; when a final decision will be announced; and if he will make a statement. [25694]

Mr. Freeman: It is Government policy that naval nuclear reactors are operated with at least as high a regard for safety standards as any other nuclear facility in the UK. Civil practice now requires a wide variety of both manmade and naturally occurring environmental hazards to be considered in the safety assessment of nuclear plant including earthquakes, extremes of wind and temperature on the environmental side, and aircraft crash, blast and dropped loads on the manmade side. In line with the developments in civil practice, additional assessment techniques have been used in this process including probabilistic risk and statistical analysis techniques.

We are at present assessing the extent of the improvements required to existing nuclear docking facilities at Devonport. Until the assessment is complete, it would be premature to speculate on cost or time scale. We expect that the assessment will complete during this summer. Decisions will be announced shortly thereafter.

Regarding docking facilities for nuclear-powered submarines, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to hon. Member for Cornwall, South-East on 17 May, Official Report, column 229.

Devonport Dockyard

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what geological surveys have been carried out at the Devonport dockyard; when these surveys were carried out; what were the problems identified by the surveys; and how much money it will cost to rectify these problems. [25695]

Mr. Freeman: Site investigations, including borehole surveys, and desk studies have been carried out to verify that the nature of the underlying geology is suitable to support the development of nuclear submarine refitting facilities at Devonport dockyard. The site surveys were carried out in 1993, with laboratory testing and desk study work completed predominantly during 1994. The surveys confirmed that the site is underlain by competent rock which will form a suitable foundation for the proposed nuclear installations.

No significant geological problems have been encountered on site to date.

Accidental Shootings

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State of Defence how many accidental shootings have occurred in the armed forces in each of the last 10 years; how many of these have resulted in compensation payments to those involved; what was the total amount of these payments; and how many of those accidentally shot in the last 10 years left the armed forces as a result of the shooting. [25566]

Mr. Soames: In the time available about 20 cases have been identified, in which compensation has been paid to Army personnel following injuries, in some cases minor injuries, resulting from accidental shooting. The total compensation paid in these cases so far is about £250,000; this includes interim payments. Since 1987, service personnel have had the same legal rights as civilians to seek compensation for injuries at work: any dispute over my Department's liability to pay compensation, or on the amount payable, can be taken to the civil courts.

Old Sarum Airfield

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who was the successful bidder for the freehold of Old Sarum airfield. [25677]

Mr. Soames: The successful bidder for the freehold of Old Sarum airfield was Megastream Ltd., trading as the Old Sarum flying club.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Job Creation

41. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of British jobs in the United Kingdom and abroad, which have been secured as a result of ODA-funded projects in the most recent period for which figures are available. [23925]

Mr. Baldry: An indirect benefit of aid and the economic development promotes, but there is no ready means of assessing how many or at what cost.

South Africa

42. Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid provision he has made for sport in South African townships. [23927]

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 24 April, Official Report, column 328.

Poverty Reduction

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures he has taken to ensure that structural adjustment programmes alleviate poverty. [23923]

Mr. Baldry: Poverty reduction is at the heart of structural adjustment, which restores the economic growth essential for reducing poverty. Our measures alleviate poverty by promoting a framework which protects the poor and by directing our financial support for these programmes to their specific needs whenever possible.

Aid (Overseas Jobs)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many overseas jobs in how many countries and at what cost are dependent upon United Kingdom overseas aid; and if he will make a statement. [24301]

Mr. Baldry: The primary purpose of UK aid is to improve the welfare of those who live in poorer countries than ourselves. An indirect benefit of aid is that jobs can be created in developing countries. But we have no means of assessing how many or at what cost. Any attempt to produce such figures would be complex, and not particularly meaningful.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Law Reform

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what consideration he is giving to examine the Law Commission's proposals to clarify legislation. [23909]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Careful consideration is given to all such proposals. Recommendations for reform in five Law Commission reports were implemented in the last Session of Parliament, and it is anticipated that at least eight further reports will be implemented this Session, together with seven consolidation and statute law repeal Bills produced by the Law Commission.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the number of remand prisoners in England and Wales who had waited more than six months for the commencement of their trial; and what was the number of these who (a) received custodial sentence, (b) received non-custodial sentence and (c) were acquitted or not proceeded with, for the latest date for which information is available. [24374]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Gerald Bermingham, dated 22 May 1995:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your Question about remand prisoners in England and Wales.

In reply to the first part of your Question, I can tell you that in the year ending 31 March 1995, 3042 remand prisoners waited over 6 months from the date of committal to the Crown Court to the commencement of their trial.

Information on the sentences of those defendants is not available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However, you may like to know that in the year ending 31 March 1995, a total of 24812 defendants on remand were committed to the Crown Court for trial. Of these 73.7 per cent received custodial sentences, 18.9 per cent. received non-custodial sentences and 7.4 per cent were acquitted on all counts.

Legal Aid

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much money has been dispersed by the legal aid fund under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1989; and what is the maximum hourly rate paid to experts with particular reference to animal psychiatrists. [24730]

Mr. John M. Taylor: No separate records are kept on the specific cost of legal aid for cases relating to the Dangerous Dogs Act. There is no prescribed rate for the use of expert witnesses, but all bills are subject to taxation based on the merits of the case.

Sukhwinder Kaur

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, further to the letter of the Parliamentary Secretary to the hon. Member for Walsall, North dated 16 May concerning the appeal of Sukhwinder Kaur, for what reason the registration number TH/21452/95 was given to this case by the immigration appellate authority. [25603]

Mr. John M. Taylor: In accordance with information provided by the immigration appellate authorities, my letter of 16 May explained that Sukhwinder Kaur's appeal had not been received. Subsequent inquiries show that the appeal had been received on 13 April and allocated a reference number on 25 April. I apologise for this error. The computer system used by the appellate authorities is being upgraded and difficulties have been experienced in recent weeks. It is therefore possible that the inaccurate information given in my letter was the result of a manual, but less reliable, search being made for Mrs. Kaur's appeal.

The progress of the appeal has not been hampered by this error and a hearing date will be offered as soon as Mrs. Kaur's representatives indicate that they are ready.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list those companies in which the holder of his office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the last five years. [25713]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I am not the majority shareholder in any company, nor have I been the majority shareholder in any company wound up in the last five years.

TRANSPORT

Manchester Metrolink

12. Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects Manchester Metrolink to be extended to Oldham. [23889]

Mr. Norris: The timing of the extension will depend on progress with development of the scheme, the priority attached to it by the Greater Manchester local authorities and the availability of resources.

Lorry Safety

13. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will next be meeting BRAKE to discuss lorry safety. [23890]

Mr. Norris: I told representatives of the Brake Lorry Safety campaign at my meeting with them on 6 March that I would be prepared to meet them again in approximately six months.

East London Line

14. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much of the total planned repair and maintenance work has been carried out to date on the east London line; and what is the latest expected completion date of the works. [23891]

Mr. Norris: Good progress has been made on the foundations for the new Jubilee line station at Canada Water, and on upgrading the existing track, signalling, stations, and pumps and drains.

The final completion date will depend on the outcome of London Underground's application for listed building consent to strengthen and waterproof the Thames tunnel.

Fare Increases

15. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the average fare increase between 1985 and 1995. [23892]

Dr. Mawhinney: The answer depends on the mode of transport being considered. Between March 1985 and March 1995, the average increase above inflation in rail fares, as measured by the retail prices index, was 2.3 per cent. Bus and coach fares increased by an annual average of 1.9 per cent.

South Yorkshire Supertram

16. Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will reconsider the method of funding the south Yorkshire supertram so that the expenditure is not caught by the capping rules for local authorities. [23893]

Mr. Norris: I have no plans to reconsider the method of funding the south Yorkshire supertram.

Railway Station Staff

17. Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement regarding the destaffing of British Rail stations in London. [23894]

Mr. Norris: Staffing levels are a management matter for the railway industry. Like the Government, it wants passengers to have a good service in a safe and secure environment.

Disabled People

18. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the needs of disabled people in all modes of transport. [23895]

Mr. Norris: We are committed to the development of accessible public transport systems which can provide effective and sustainable transport services for all passengers, including those with disabilities.

Ferry Safety

20. Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which organisations he intends to consult regarding the report of the International Maritime Organisation's panel of experts inquiring into roll-on roll-off ferry safety. [23898]

Dr. Mawhinney: We are already consulting interested parties, and have been since the IMO's panel of experts was set up, through a shadow panel organised by the Marine Safety Agency. The shadow panel includes representatives from the Chamber of Shipping, major UK ferry operators, the Consumers Association and trade unions.

Further consultation will be carried out once we have fully considered the reaction of the IMO's maritime safety committee to the work of the panel of experts.

Crossrail

21. Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the projected timetable for the completion of the crossrail project; and if he will make a statement. [23899]

Mr. Norris: The promoters of crossrail continue to prepare their application for powers under the Transport and Works Act 1992 to build crossrail. This is being done in parallel with the study which the promoters are undertaking at my request, with my Department.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the implications of studies other than the Montagu committee of public transport in London for the timetable for the deposit of a draft order application in respect of crossrail. [24820]

Mr. Norris: The impact of studies other than the crossrail study, which the promoters are undertaking at my request, with my Department, is marginal. In parallel with this study, the promoters of crossrail continue to prepare their application for powers under the Transport and Works Act 1992 to build crossrail.

Sleeper and Motorail Services

22. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the withdrawal of sleeper services and motorail services. [23900]

Mr. Watts: I have received a number of representations concerning British Rail's plans to withdraw motorail and certain sleeper services.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the passenger loading figures for the Night Scot for stations between Plymouth and Glasgow inclusive, and for the Night West Countryman in the reverse direction, for each quarter in 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994 and to the latest available date. [25243]

Mr. Watts: In 1993–94, 32,000 passengers travelled on the sleeper service between Plymouth and Glasgow and Edinburgh. Figures are not available for each direction, intermediate stations, by quarter or for other years.

Local Rail Services

24. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the future funding of local rail services. [23903]

Mr. Watts: The Government will continue to provide funding, through the franchising director, to support local rail services. With regard to revenue support for railway passenger services funded by English passenger transport executives, my right hon. Friend intends to replace the current temporary arrangements with an enhancement of the standard spending assessment "bolt on" grant, with effect from 1996–97.

Road and Rail Building Blight

25. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress is being made to reduce blight stemming from road and rail building. [23904]

Mr. Watts: The 1994 trunk roads programme review which prioritised schemes has reduced blight by removing some schemes from the programme. A review of safeguarding on all schemes in the trunk roads programme will be continued with the aim of reducing blight. Safeguarding directions for the channel tunnel rail link project were issued in December 1994, which effectively reduced blight by removing uncertainty about which land will be required. Considerable effort will be made to minimise the physical impact from construction and operation of the CTRL.

Rail Freight

27. Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department is taking to encourage heavy loads to be transported by rail rather than road. [23906]

Mr. Watts: We have already opened up access to the rail network for private sector rail hauliers. In conjunction with the BR board, we are currently progressing plans for the privatisation of the British Rail freight businesses. We also make available capital grants for rail freight facilities and revenue grants to assist in defraying track access charges levied by Railtrack. For example, a recent freight facilities grant award of £2.6 million to a company based in Derbyshire will secure traffic to rail which would have otherwise gone by road, thereby avoiding an estimated 45,000 lorry journeys per year.

Vehicle Emissions

28. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to reduce exhaust emissions from cars and other vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [23907]

Dr. Mawhinney: A range of measures has been introduced to reduce vehicle pollution substantially both for new vehicles and by controlling emissions in service. Stringent standards for all new vehicle types which substantially reduce levels of carbon dioxide, hydrocarbon, nitrous oxide and particulates from cars, lorries and buses were introduced from 1993. These promoted the widespread use of catalysts on petrol cars which typically reduce emissions of the main pollutants by 75 to 80 per cent. Diesel cars have to meet the same standards and, additionally, have to comply with a stringent particulate limit. Legislation is already in place for a further tightening which will, in particular, more than halve particulate standards for diesels in 1996. The Government are also playing a leading role in the European Union to secure a further reduction in levels for new vehicles from 2000. These measures will be reinforced by tighter in-service standards for diesel and conventional petrol-engined vehicles from 1 September this year and for catalyst-equipped petrol-engined vehicles from 1 January 1996, together with a continuing intensified roadside enforcement programme to remove the worst offenders from the road.

Traffic Pollution

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the impact of transport pollution. [23880]

Dr. Mawhinney: Vehicle emissions can contribute to global warming and poor local air quality. The Government are pursuing a range of measures to reduce such pollution.

Road Building, North-east England

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received about the road building programme in the north-east of England. [23897]

Mr. Watts: Recent representations include a petition in respect of the A1 Gateshead western bypass proposal. I met a delegation led by Sir Ralph Carr-Ellison on 30 March following which I invited Gateshead metropolitan borough council to work with the Highways Agency in considering a trial of junction closures and the development of a local traffic management scheme.

London-Tilbury-Southend Rail Services

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the timetable for privatising the London-Tilbury-Southend rail service. [23902]

Mr. Watts: The franchising director issued invitations to tender for LTS rail on 17 May. Indicative bids must be submitted by 28 July. Formal tenderers will be selected in September. The franchising director intends to let the franchise by the end of the year.

Cambridge-St. Ives Railway Line

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he expects that the Cambridge-St. Ives railway line will become fully operational for passenger transport. [23905]

Mr. Norris: The Cambridge to St. Ives railway line is currently the subject of a feasibility study by Cambridgeshire county council into the likely use of the line should it be reopened for passenger traffic. It is too early to say whether a viable scheme is likely to emerge, but I have suggested that the county council continue the study work and prepare cost estimates.

Tolls

Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will announce plans to deregulate the tolls of the 10 bridges and ferries that are still subject to statutory controls. [25474]

Mr. Watts: I have today published a consultation paper, "Regulation of Tolls at Statutory Undertakings". The paper examines options for replacing the current procedures governing toll revisions of crossing such as private ferry undertakings and private and local authority-owned bridges and tunnels.

The three main options outlined are continued regulation, but with improvements in the criteria and procedures; partial deregulation, with tolls rising annually up to a prescribed limit; and full deregulation, with undertakings setting their own charges.

Current procedures are cumbersome and protracted for the 16 private and local authority river crossings that were promoted by statute, and the criteria by which toll revisions have to be judged are unclear and difficult to apply. We are inviting users and operators of the relevant crossings to comment on alternatives to the present system. If some measure of deregulation is the outcome, I envisage consulting further on measures under the Deregulations and Contracting Out Act 1994.

I have placed a copy of the consultation paper in the Library.

Bull Bars

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the numbers of vehicles now fitted with front bull bars; what the numbers will be over the next five years if present trends continue; and what affect he expects this increase to have on accident figures in each of the next five years. [25268]

Mr. Norris: My reply to the hon. Gentleman on the 30 March, Official Report, columns 786-87, gave the Transport Research Laboratory's estimate of the extra deaths and injuries to vulnerable road users that could result from collisions with vehicles fitted with bull bars. It is estimated that in 1993, on the latest figures available, 3 per cent. of the vehicle fleet were off-road vehicles and 9 per cent. were delivery vans. The TRL's injury projections were based on 20 per cent. of these vehicles having bull bars.

Information on trends is not recorded. We cannot therefore estimate the effects of bull bars on future accident figures.

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will instigate an investigation into the effect of bull bars in traffic accidents in the Metropolitan police district and publish a report. [25261]

Mr. Norris: The Metropolitan police, on their own initiative, are collecting details of traffic accidents involving vehicles fitted with bull bars. We will be analysing the results of this work in due course as part of our wider analysis of the effects of bull bars in accidents.

Rail Fares

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how much additional grant his Department will provide to London Transport to compensate for loss of revenue as a result of the franchising director's decision to cap British Rail fares; [25088]

(2) what is the effect on London Transport revenue forecasts of the franchising director's decision to cap British Rail fares in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999 and (e) 2000. [25087]

Mr. Norris: The effect will depend on the future relationship between London Transport and rail fares, and the fares which LT would have charged in the absence of the franchising director's decision. All relevant factors will be taken into account when LT's future funding requirements are considered.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of his recent statements on rail fares upon the (a) Crewe to Holyhead rail line and (b) Wrexham to Birkenhead rail line; and if he will make a statement. [24838]

Mr. Watts: The regulation of fares is a matter for the franchising director. Except in passenger transport executive areas, the franchising director will regulate all Saver tickets, unrestricted standard returns where there are no Savers, and all standard weekly season tickets. Prices for these tickets will be capped by the increase in the retail prices index for the next three years, and 1 per cent. per annum below the RPI for the following four years. Regulation will apply to British rail as well as franchised services. PTEs will continue to be able to control fares in their areas.

Rail Franchises

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 4 May, Official Report, column 255, what plans he has to impose restrictions on (a) the Rahahane Djjomhouriye Eslami Iran, (b) the Socialist People's Libyan Araya Jamihiriya Department of Road Transport and (c) the Iraqi Republic Railways Organisation from bidding to operate rail franchises in Great Britain. [25410]

Mr. Watts: The choice of bidders for passenger rail franchises is a matter for the franchising director, but I understand that none of these organisations has expressed any interest in pre-qualification.

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the additional subsidy required for private franchise operators if rail fares are to be raised in line with the retail prices index; and if he make a statement. [23896]

Mr. Watts: Level of subsidy will be determined by the tendering process for each franchise. The Government have stated their commitment to continuing to pay subsidy needed to support passenger services, including the effect of the new fares policy.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress towards rail privatisation. [23901]

Dr. Mawhinney: Restructuring in preparation for privatisation is mostly complete and invitations to tender have issued for the first three franchises and the three rolling stock leasing companies. Sales of BR's support businesses have commenced and sales of the domestic freight businesses are planned this year. Railtrack will be floated in the life of this Parliament.

Hayes-London Rail Service

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1994, Official Report, column 1091, if all rail services on the Hayes (Kent) to London line are operated by Networker trains; and what is the average age of the rolling stock used on this line at peak times. [25147]

Mr. Watts: Yes. Two years or less.

Railtrack (Contaminated Land)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list every contaminated site owned by Railtrack, together with the total area; and what is his estimate of the cost of cleaning it up. [24770]

Mr. Watts: This is a matter for Railtrack. Railtrack will be considering the environmental condition of its property as part of the preparations for privatisation.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what survey his Department has carried out of contaminated land owned by Railtrack. [24771]

Mr. Watts: My Department has not carried out any surveys, but Railtrack will be considering the environmental condition of its property as part of the preparations for privatisation.

Shipping Collisions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the number of collisions between vessels in (a) the North sea, (b) the English channel and (c) St. George's channel in each of the last 10 years. [25574]

Mr. Norris: The figures in the table relate to collisions involving one or more UK registered vessels where the location of the accident has been established.

The figures are given only for the years shown, as information relating to a particular sea area and type of accident can readily be obtained only from the marine accident investigation branch computerised accident database. The database contains data from 1991 onwards only.

HEALTH

Sir Duncan Nichol

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons Sir Duncan Nichol was made redundant. [24440]

Mr. Sackville: Sir Duncan Nichol had been seconded to the national health service executive by Mersey regional health authority. At the termination of the secondment arrangement, he was unable to return to his contracted post in Mersey RHA because, through restructuring, it was no longer available. Since there was no alternative employment available to Sir Duncan, the health authority declared him redundant.

Care for the Elderly

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average cost of keeping an elderly infirm person (a) in hospital and (b) in a residential care home. [24402]

Mr. Bowis: The cost per patient week for the geriatric specialty is provisionally estimated at £791.42 in 1993–94, the latest year for which figures are available. This amount does not include expenditure on people over 65 who use acute hospital services or community health services, as such expenditure is not apportioned according to age. In the same year, the average expenditure by local authorities for each supported resident in residential care homes for elderly people was approximately £260 per week. Comparisons of costs between types of care should be treated with caution as dependency levels and other characteristics will vary considerably.

Immunisation

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been conducted by or on behalf of her Department into damage to the body's immune system caused by immunisation; and what conclusions have been reached. [24562]

Mr. Sackville: The Department of Health is not aware of evidence that immunisation causes damage to the immune system.

The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Tobacco Advertising

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the extent to which the Benson and Hedges "Gratis" campaign breaches the voluntary agreement on tobacco advertising in respect of (a) the encouragement of smoking in general, (b) the offering of incentives to smoke more than the average, (c) the linkage of smoking with a healthy life style and (d) the linkage of smoking with children's gifts; what action she intends to take in respect of the campaign; and if she will make a statement. [24662]

Mr. Sackville: The content of advertisements is governed by the cigarette code, which forms part of the voluntary agreement. It is for the Advertising Standards Authority to arbitrate on whether the cigarette code has been breached. I understand that a formal complaint about the "Gratis" campaign has been made to the ASA, and it will be conducting an investigation.

Residential Homes

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which local authorities do not directly manage (a) residential homes for the elderly, (b) residential homes for the mentally ill, (c) residential homes for the physically disabled, (d) residential homes for people with learning disabilities and (e) residential homes for expectant mothers. [24893]

Mr. Bowis: Homes are categorised on the basis of their primary function. Homes classified in one client group may also contain residents from other client groups. The absence of a directly managed home does not therefore mean that the authority provides no places for that client group within its own homes.

The information available at 31 March 1994 shows:

Local authorities not directly managing residential homes for the elderly are:

Tameside, Knowsley, City of London, Somerset.

Local authorities not directly managing residential homes for the mentally ill are:

Durham, North Tyneside, Barnsley, Bolton, Bury, Manchester, Knowsley, Warwickshire, Dudley, Sandwell, Buckinghamshire, Essex, Oxfordshire, Southwark, Tower Hamlets, City of London, Barking, Barnet, Bexley, Bromley, Harrow, Havering, Kingston Upon Thames, Merton, Newham, Waltham Forest, Hampshire, Isle of Wight, Kent, East Sussex, West Sussex, Cornwall, Devon, Gloucestershire, Isles of Scilly.

Local authorities not directly managing residential homes for the physically disabled are:

Newcastle Upon Tyne, North Tyneside, South Tyneside, Sunderland, Humberside, North Yorkshire, Barnsley, Rotherham, Calderdale, Wakefield, Bolton, Bury, Oldham, Rochdale, Stockport, Trafford, Knowsley, Sefton, Shropshire, Warwickshire, Sandwell, Solihull, Wolverhampton, Derbyshire, Lincolnshire, Buckinghamshire, Oxfordshire, Suffolk, Greenwich, Hackney, Kensington, Lambeth, Lewisham, Wandsworth, Westminster, City of London, Barnet, Bexley, Brent, Bromley, Enfield, Haringey, Harrow, Hillingdon, Kingston Upon Thames, Merton, Newham, Redbridge, Richmond Upon Thames, Sutton, Waltham Forest, Dorset, Isle of Wight, Kent, Wiltshire, Isles of Scilly.

Local authorities not directly managing residential homes for people with learning disabilities are:

Manchester, Warwickshire, City of London, Bexley, Redbridge, Isles of Scilly.

Centrally available information does not separately identify residential homes for expectant mothers.

Nurseries

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action she has taken in conjunction with the Department for Education regarding the situation where a deregistered nursery can reopen as an independent school; and if she will make a statement; [25137]

(2) what are her plans to deal with those who escape the provisions of the Children Act 1989 on registration of nurseries, by registering as an independent school. [25609]

Mr. Bowis: If a private nursery school provides full-time education for five or more children of compulsory school age, it must register with the Department for Education, which will monitor the quality of the service being provided.

My Department works closely with the Department for Education and other relevant organisations to ensure that facilities offering services to young children are of an acceptable standard. We shall continue to keep these arrangements under review.

Weighted Capitation

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer about weighted capitation of 20 December 1994, Official Report, column 1152, if she will specify the 1995–96 (a) cash allocation, (b) weighted capitation target in cash terms calculated on the basis used for table 8.3 in the Health Committee's first special report of Session 1993–94 on public expenditure, HC617, and (c) weighted capitation target in cash terms on the basis of the modified formula described in annexe 1 of the NHS executive's hospital and community health services revenue resource allocation: weighted capitation formula of October 1994; and if she will list (b) and (c) as percentage of (a). [25002]

Mr. Sackville: The table shows:

(i) 1995–96 hospital and community health services revenue allocations to regional health authorities for resident population.

(ii) 1995–96 weighted capitation targets for regional health authorities in cash terms using the modified formula.

(iii) 1995–96 weighted capitation targets as a percentage of revenue allocations.

1995–96 regional health authority weighted capitation targets on the same basis as used for table 8.3 are not available as there are no operational reasons for these to be calculated.

General Practitioner Fundholding

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement about the payment of management allowances to general practitioner fundholders. [25321]

Mr. Malone: Payments from management allowances are made to fundholding practices to reimburse the additional costs incurred in directly managing national health service resources on behalf of their patients. Section 15 of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 enables fundholders to receive a sum determined in such manner and by reference to such factors as the Secretary of State may direct. However, our legal advice is that payments by fundholders for the sole purpose of management expenses need to be specified within regulations. This has now been provided for under the National Health Service (Fund-holding Practices) Amendment Regulations 1995. The regulations are in line with guidance previously issued by the NHS executive on this matter, copies of which are routinely placed in the Library. Extra-statutory management allowance payments of this kind, made between 1990–91 and 1994–95, estimated at around £165 million, have now been authorised.

NHS Accounts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State if she will list those instances in each of the last three financial years for which accounts have been finalised when a qualified opinion was issued against the final accounts of any NHS body, with the name of the body concerned and the reason for the qualified opinion. [24911]

Mr. Sackville: This information will be placed in the Library.

World Health Organisation

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations she has had over Government liaison with the World Health Organisation. [23926]

Mr. Malone: The Department of Health has lead responsibility for World Health Organisation matters. Departmental officials are in regular and frequent contact with officials at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Overseas Development Administration throughout the year and particularly in the build-up to meetings of the WHO executive board and the World Health Assembly. These contacts cover the whole range of issues relating to the United Kingdom's input to WHO, including budgetary and programme matters.

London Ambulance Service

Sir John Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much extra money will be given to the London ambulance service to be used specifically in the catchment area of Edgware general hospital. [25242]

Mr. Sackville: Barnet health authority will fund two additional ambulance crews at a cost of £320,000 a year before the Edgware hospital accident and emergency department closes.

Edgware General Hospital

Sir John Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans exist to extend the opening hours of the planned minor accident treatment service unit at Edgware general hospital, once it is in operation, beyond those normally operated. [25240]

Mr. Sackville: Such decisions are for the Wellhouse national health service trust and will depend on local circumstances. My hon. Friend may wish to contact the chairman, David Phillips, for details.

Primary Health Care

Sir John Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her oral statement of 10 May, Official Report, column 785, (1) what discussions she has had with the chairmen of the relevant health authorities in connection with the extra £2 million provision to improve primary health care in West Barnet; how these funds are to be administered; and what plans there are for minister to monitor the utilisation of these funds. [25244]

(2) how much of the extra £2 million to improve primary care in West Barnet will be allocated to fund improvements in the Hendon, North constituency; and how the remainder will be allocated accordingly to neighbouring parliamentary constituencies. [25245]

Mr. Malone: It is the responsibility of local health authorities, working in conjunction with others, to assess the needs of their populations and to balance service and spending requirements both in the medium term and on a year to year basis. Following discussion with the chairman and regional director of North Thames regional health authority, criteria have been set by which effective implementation of the changes in north London will be judged and on the importance of maintaining high-quality standards for patients. The chairman of the regional health authority will take this forward with chairmen of the relevant health authorities. Arrangements are in place for regular progress meetings with the regional chairman. The chief executive of the NHS executive will also continue to work closely with the regional director.

Special Transitional Grants

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those authorities which have not yet submitted audited returns of expenditure of the 1993–94 special transitional grant. [25322]

Mr. Bowis: Local authorities are required to submit returns to district auditors who, in turn, submit them to the Department. We could not therefore know whether returns that have not yet been submitted to the Department have or have not been submitted by local authorities to their respective district auditors.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those companies in which the holder of her office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past five years. [25717]

Mr. Sackville: None.

Breastfeeding

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what information she has on commencement levels of breastfeeding in each member state of the European Union; and if she will publish the most recent sets of data available; [25607]

(2) if she will publish league tables for the different regional health authorities for percentage breastfeeding commencement levels. [25723]

Mr. Sackville: Information is not available in the form requested. The five-yearly surveys of infant feeding undertaken by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys on behalf of the United Kingdom Health Departments provide information, on a national basis, on breastfeeding levels in the UK. A copy of the 1990 infant feeding survey is available in the Library. Field work for the 1995 study will start later this year. We do not have information on breastfeeding levels in other member states of the European Union.

EDUCATION

Conductive Education

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what funding has been provided by her Department to the Foundation for Conductive Education in the past; and what are her future plans for funding in the United Kingdom; [24818]

(2) what representations she has received regarding funding for the Foundation for Conductive Education in the United Kingdom. [24817]

Mr. Forth: The Department has not received any bids for funding from the Foundation for Conductive Education in the United Kingdom, and has not financed the foundation in the past.

The Department would consider any such representations, with other Government Departments, on their merits. But the statutory responsibility for special educational provision rests in the first instance with local education authorities, to be decided in the light of local needs and resources.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for education what funding has been provided from her Department to the Peto Institute in Budapest; and how much funding has been provided over the last three years. [24819]

Mr. Forth: The Department for Education provided £600,000 in 1991, as part of an initial Government package totalling £1.75 million. No funding has been provided over the last three years.

Teacher Numbers

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list the number of licensed teachers in each local authority and funding agency area.

Mr. Robin Squire: Centrally held information about the number of licensed teachers in post in England on 31 March 1995 is given in the table. On 1 April 1995 responsibility for issuing new licences became the responsibility of the Teacher Training Agency.

Jean Monnet Programme

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will publish a list of Jean Monnet projects in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Boswell: The Department has no direct involvement with or responsibility for the Jean Monnet programme, which is wholly administered by the European Commission. However, I understand that the following UK universities have applied successfully to the Commission for funding in 1995:[1]

University	Project
Bath	European integration and international business
	European integration and the multinationalisation of European business

GCSE Study Leave

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will discuss with as many head teachers as possible the practice of releasing GCSE candidates from attendance at school for about three weeks prior to their exams; and if she will make a statement. [24815]

Mr. Forth: Following consultation with the head teacher associations and other interested parties, the Department issued guidance on the categorisation of absence to all schools in May 1994. The guidance included advice on study leave. It recommended that it should be normally available for year 11 pupils only, that it should be granted sparingly and that it should not normally exceed a maximum of two weeks.

Education Authority Reorganisation, Teesside

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will make a statement on the expected provision, quality and accountability of education services in the former Teesside county borough area when services in that area are provided by three education authorities as a result of local government reorganisation. [25217]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Government's aim in reorganising local government is to improve cost-effectiveness and the quality and co-ordination of local services. The role of local education authorities will not change specifically as a result of the reorganisation of local government. It will be for the new LEAs to play their part in ensuring that the education service is run at least as effectively as now.

University Staff-Student Ratios

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list the average student/lecturer ratio in United Kingdom universities (a) currently, (b) in 1979, (c) in old universities and (d) in the new universities. [25019]

Mr. Boswell: Information on the student: staff ratios in former English Universities Funding Council and Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council funded institutions was presented in table of the Department's annual report, Cm 2810, published in March this year, a copy of which is in the Library. This table provides information for both sectors for the academic years 1990–91 to 1992–93. Information on the same basis for earlier years is not available.

Nursery Education

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what action she has taken in conjunction with the Department of Health regarding deregistered nurseries reopening as independent schools. [25003]

Mr. Forth: Private nursery establishments providing full-time education for five or more pupils of compulsory school age must by law register with the Department as independent schools. The Department works closely with the Department of Health and other relevant agencies to ensure that such establishments meet the statutory requirements for registration and make appropriate provision for pre-school age pupils. If they fail to do so, those establishments may be removed from the register and may not then lawfully operate as independent schools. We continue to keep these arrangements under review.

Biotechnology Research

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps she is taking to encourage co-operation between United Kingdom industries and universities in biotechnology research. [24993]

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. Friend provides grant to the Higher Education Funding Council for England to support research in universities. The council is allocating some £10 million in 1994–95 and £20 million in 1995–96 to reward co-operation between universities and industry on generic research that may lead to a range of applications. This includes biotechnology research.

School Transport

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what consultation took place between her Department and the Welsh Office before the issue of her Department's letter of 21 June 1994 and Welsh Office circular 19/95 about home-to-school transport. [25135]

Mr. Forth: The Department consulted the Welsh Office about the text of our letter of guidance which issued on 21 January 1994. Circular 19/95, which is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales, is based closely on the text of that letter. These documents do not provide an authoritative interpretation of the law; that is a matter for the courts.

Student Employment

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what estimate her Department has made of the number of (a) undergraduates and (b) postgraduates undertaking paid employment during their studies due to financial hardship. [25024]

Mr. Boswell: Information on student employment is not collected by the Department. However, the latest student income and expenditure survey, which looked at full-time undergraduate students, found that 22 per cent. of younger students and 23 per cent. of mature students received some income from paid employment during term time.

Chief Education Officers, Cleveland

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many chief education officers are currently employed in Cleveland; and how many she expects will be employed when the reorganisation of local government in that county has taken place. [25216]

Mr. Robin Squire: Under section 88 of the Education Act 1944 each local education authority has to have a chief education officer. Cleveland has one. Following reorganisation, each of the four new LEAs in the Cleveland area will have one.

Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the total number of teachers for each year over the last 10 years taking early retirement; how many of these retirements were on medical or breakdown grounds; and what was the total annual cost of these retirements. [24937]

Mr. Robin Squire: The total number of teachers granted early retirement and, of these, the number granted infirmity and premature retirement in each of the years

1984–85 to 1993–94 is given in table 1. The first year cost to the teachers superannuation scheme of these retirements and the total expenditure by LEAs on pension enhancements and Crombie compensation for each year from 1989–90 to 1993–94 is given in table 2. Figures for the first year cost to the TSS of early retirements for the years 1984–85 to 1988–89 and for the total annual cost to the TSS of all early retirements could be produced only at disproportionate cost. Figures for LEA expenditure on pension enhancements and Crombie compensation for the years 1984–85 to 1988–89 are not available.

Table 1: Numbers of teachers granted early retirement (England and Wales)

Year	Total	Infirmity	Premature
1984–85	13,166	2,449	10,717

Drug Education Programmes

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment she has made of which drug education programmes in the United Kingdom or elsewhere have resulted in a reduction in drug use. [25174]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend took into account available research evidence when planning the Department's initiatives to support drug education in schools. The innovative drug education and prevention projects supported under the Department's grants for education support and training programme in 1995–96 will be evaluated. At my right hon. Friend's request, the Office for Standards in Education will undertake a specific study of provision for drug education in schools during the academic year 1995–96 in the light of existing research findings on effective drug education.

Higher Education Funding Council

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will require the Higher Education Funding Council to reply to Mr. Anthony Murray of Wakefield, following his letter to it of 6 March. [25363]

Mr. Boswell: This is a matter for the Higher Education Funding Council for England. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list those companies in which the holder of her office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past five years. [25720]

Mr. Boswell: There are no companies, either currently in existence or which have been wound up in the past five years, in which the Secretary of State is or was a majority shareholder. The Student Loans Company Ltd., established in 1989, is owned jointly—50 per cent. each—by the Secretaries of State for Education and for Scotland.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Radiocommunications Agency

Mr. Lester: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what targets he has set his Department's Radiocommunications Agency for 1995–96. [25864]

Mr. Heseltine: I have set my Department's Radiocommunications Agency the following quality of service targets for 1995–96 covering its licensing work and enforcement activities. These are in addition to the target of an overall efficiency improvement of 5 per cent.

Licensing

99 per cent. of new aeronautical and aircraft applications and amendments to be processed within three working days of receipt in the agency;

98 per cent of maritime business radio cases to be processed within one month;

99 per cent. of new on-site paging applications and amendments to be processed and dispatched within three working days;

90 per cent. of new private mobile radio applications and amendments that require no international co-ordination to be processed and dispatched within 15 and 20 working days respectively.

Enforcement

100 per cent. of safety of life services complaints to be investigated within 24 hours;

98 per cent of business complaints to be investigated within five working days; and

98 per cent. of domestic interference complaints to be investigated within one month.

In addition, I expect the agency's enquiry point to continue to answer 90 per cent. of all calls within 30 seconds and the chief executive to reply within 10 working days to all letters from Members of Parliament delegated to him for reply.

Gas Licences

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date his Department was made aware that the Office of Gas Supply intended to show draft licences under the Gas Bill to independent gas suppliers. [25696]

Mr. Eggar: Following a major consultation last year on the introduction of competition into the domestic gas market, the Department and Ofgas followed up the responses received by meeting a number of organisations—both in the industry and consumer groups. In the later stages, DTI and Ofgas discussed draft licence conditions with British Gas and, where appropriate, other parties in the industry. This was necessary to ensure that DTI had a sufficient grasp of the technical issues to publish worthwhile draft licences on 20 and 27 March as the basis for parliamentary consideration and wider consultation.

In addition to the comments made in Committee on the Bill by hon. Members, a variety of parties including the industry, consumer groups and other affected organisations have made detailed comments on the Bill and draft licences to DTI. These will be carefully considered in preparing any Government amendments to the Bill and revising the draft licences.

Local Government Reorganisation, Cleveland

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the implications for the business community in the Teesside area of the division of Cleveland into four unitary authorities; and what guidance he has issued as to the maintenance of important business support services, such as the Cleveland European advice team. [25223]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Local Government Commission for England, in its report on the future local government of Cleveland and Durham, recommended that the four new unitary authorities, plus Darlington, should work together in the setting up of a strategic alliance—Tees Valley Development Company—in relation to economic development and other activities. This will include private sector members and has been warmly welcomed by bodies such as the Northern Development Company and the business community on Teesside.

The future of business support services now lies with the newly created Business Link Teesside and its partners, which began operations on 10 April 1995. Partners include all the local authorities, the TEC, the chamber, NDC, Teesside Small Business Club, university of Teesside, and local development and enterprise agencies.

VSEL

Mr Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden (Mr. Dewar) of 27 March, Official Report, column 408, when he proposes to announce his decision on the bids for VSEL; and what was the advice of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on those bids. [25364]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade will publish the MMC reports on the proposed acquisitions of VSEL, together with the announcement of any decision which it falls to him to take, as soon as is reasonably practicable. Until then, the advice of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission remains confidential.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Fisher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has yet received the draft report of Lord Justice Scott. [23913]

Mr. Heseltine: No.

Sir Richard Scott has not yet finished his report. As the report is written, draft extracts are being circulated by the inquiry to a range of persons referred to in the report for comment.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he has taken to ensure that Whitehall Departments co-operate fully with Lord Justice Scott to ensure the earliest possible publication of his inquiry report. [23911]

Mr. Heseltine: Officials are under instruction to co-operate fully with Sir Richard Scott's inquiry. As I told my hon. Friend the Member for Hazel Grove (Sir T. Arnold) on 11 July 1994, Official Report, column 387, the timing of the report is a matter for Sir Richard Scott.

Pergau Dam

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his latest estimate of the United Kingdom contribution to the Pergau dam project. [23918]

Mr. Needham: The cost is presently estimated at £233 million, as compared to £255.31 million previously quoted in my answer of 18 April 1994, Official Report, column 360. Some £10 million of the £22 million reduction will be offset by increased costs against other items in Export Credits Guarantee Department's fixed interest support programme.

Staff

Ms Hodge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, (1) how many posts were lost in (a) the Department of Trade and Industry and (b) agencies for which the Department of Trade and Industry is responsible, listing the total lost posts agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and how many posts are proposed to be lost in 1995–96; [25084]

(2) what changes there have been in the numbers of staff employed by (a) the Department of Trade and Industry and (b) agencies for which the Department of Trade and Industry is responsible, listing the changes in the number of staff agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what changes are proposed for 1995–96; [25058]

(3) what changes there have been in the number of staff in employment by grade in (a) his Department and (b) each agency for which his Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96; [25627]

(4) how many staff of (a) the Department of Trade and Industry and (b) agencies for which the DTI is responsible, were employed on a casual or short-term basis in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25415]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The numbers of permanent and casual staff employed by my Department and each of its executive agencies in 1993–94, projected outturn for 1994–95; and plans for 1995–96 are published in my Department's annual report, Cm 2804, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. No projections broken down by grade are available. Separate numbers are not shown in the report for the Insolvency Service and the National Weights and Measures Laboratory executive agencies. These are included in the report in the numbers for the gross control area. The numbers of permanent and casual staff for these agencies are as follows:

Man years

	1993–94	1994–95	[1]1995–96
Permanent staff
Insolvency Service	1,592.5	1,548.2	1,566
National Weights and Measures Laboratory	46	44.5	46
Casual Staff
Insolvency Service	227	285	120
National Weights and Measures Laboratory	0.5	0	0.5

[1]In 1995–96 plans are provisional subject to the final outcome of the MINIS scrutiny.

Private Payphones

Mr. Janner: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will consider ensuring the Office of Telecommunications takes action against owners of private payphones who charge unreasonably high multiples of the standard rate of a telephone call and fail to display a statement of pricing at the phones; [24970]

(2) if he will ask Oftel to ensure that offenders who have operated payphones with illegally high charges either return their illegal earnings of pay or offer them to local charities; [24969]

(3) if he will investigate the level of monitoring by Oftel of the pricing practices of operators of private payphones in public houses, garages, clubs, supermarkets and shops. [24971]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Provision of private payphones has been liberalised so as to encourage their installation, and with great success—an estimated 500,000 payphones are now in place, giving wider access to public telephony than would otherwise be the case. Tariffs of private payphones have never been regulated, but they are required to be displayed. The question of whether Oftel should investigate "illegally high" charges, or pricing practices generally, therefore does not arise. Enforcement of the requirement to display tariffs is a matter for Oftel, which pursues those cases brought to its attention. Oftel is also discussing with representatives of trading standards officers how compliance with this requirement might be improved.

Companies House

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what checks Companies House carries out of its records before the awarding of government contracts and to the existence of an Inland Revenue interest in the affairs of those companies. [25669]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Companies House carries out checks, relating to compliance with the Companies Act, when requested to do so by Government Departments.

Any Inland Revenue interest in a company would be confidential to the tax authorities, and such checks by my Department would be precluded on taxpayer privacy grounds.

Coal Prices

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the change in real terms of the price of coal used in electricity generation over the period 1989 to 1994. [25189]

Mr. Page: Between 1989 and 1994 the price of coal used in electricity generation by major power producers fell by 29 per cent. in real terms.

Gas Prices

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the change in real terms of the price of materials and fuel purchased by the gas supply industry between 1986 and 1994. [25192]

Mr. Page: Between 1986 and 1994 the price of gas purchased by the gas supply industry fell by 23 per cent. in real terms.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Pike: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the maximum and minimum price of electricity on the pool basis on a monthly basis since privatisation. [25234]

Mr. Eggar: The information, expressed in money of the day, is as follows:

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the average cost of generation of electricity in 1994 for the United Kingdom's (a) coal power stations, (b) oil power stations, (c) gas power stations, (d) Magnox reactors and (e) advanced gas-cooled reactors. [25274]

Mr. Eggar: These are commercial matters for the companies concerned.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans the electricity regulator has to review the pool price paid for base load electricity generation. [25283]

Mr. Eggar: This is a matter for Professor Littlechild.

Electricity Users

Mr. Pike: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to collate data on the number of large industrial and commercial electricity users committed to buying electricity at pool prices; and if he will make a statement. [25235]

Mr. Eggar: All consumers with premises which take more than 100 kW of electricity are now free to contract with the supplier of their choice. The terms that they negotiate, including whether the price to be paid is related to short-term variations in the pool price, are commercial matters between the parties concerned.

Recycling

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to encourage British industries to develop end products for recycled materials. [25023]

Mr. Page: Identifying end markets for recycled materials has been an important feature in the Government's "producer responsibility" dialogue with a range of industrial sectors. Industry recognises the crucial need for demand to be developed ahead of collection. The Government, for their part, have taken a number of steps to stimulate demand, providing support for R and D projects investigating new uses for recovered materials, including glass, rubber and plastics, and arranging for UK standards to be examined with a view to removing unnecessary discrimination against the use of recycled materials.

Trade Statistics

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the trend of Britain's share of world trade over the last 30 years, per (a) invisibles, (b) visibles and (c) invisibles and visibles combined. [24569]

Mr. Needham: The available information is given in the table.

Sound Recordings

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the Government's position with regard to EU directive 92/100 on guaranteeing performers 50 per cent. of the receipts of a recording company when the record is broadcast or used in public; and what reasons underlie the difference in approach between the UK and other member states. [25007]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Directive 92/100/EEC requires member states to ensure that a single equitable remuneration is paid by users for broadcasting or other communication to the public of sound recordings, and that the remuneration is shared between performers and record producers. It does not specify that performers are to receive a 50 per cent. share of the remuneration. The proposals we have made in the recent consultative draft of regulations to implement the directive aim at flexibility as technical developments increase the ways in which sound recording are communicated to the public, and are intended to ensure that performers receive an equitable share, while leaving the precise amount to be agreed between the parties and determined by the Copyright Tribunal in default of agreement. We are aware that performers are dissatisfied with this approach, and will look carefully at the matter again before submitting the legislation to Parliament. Clearly, however, given the various options open to us under the directive, we will also have to consider the views of users and producers on how the legislation should be framed in the UK.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the load factor at each of Britain's nuclear power stations in the last year for which figures are available. [25272]

Mr. Eggar: These are commercial matters for the companies concerned.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many staff were employed at each of Britain's advanced gas-cooled reactor power stations (a) in 1989 and (b) in 1994. [25273]

Mr. Eggar: These are matters for Nuclear Electric and Scottish Nuclear.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the licence for the operation of the Sizewell pressurised water reactor and each of Britain's advanced gas-cooled reactors was last issued by the nuclear installations inspectorate; what is the period of the licence; what are the consent conditions; how often inspections are carried out; and what modifications there have been in each licence since first issued. [25287]

Mr. Eggar: The table gives the dates on which the current nuclear site licences were granted for the sites listed and the number of times the licences have been varied.

Site name	Date licence last granted	Number of variations since last licence was granted
Sizewell	1 March 1990	4
Dungeness	1 March 1990	5
Hinkley Point	30 July 1993	5
Hartlepool	1 March 1990	3
Heysham 1 and 2	1 March 1990	5
Hunterston	1 March 1990	5
Torness	1 March 1990	3

Nuclear site licences are granted to nuclear operators for the sites on which installations are situated and not for the individual facilities such as reactors. For example, the Sizewell B pressurised water reactor is situated on the Sizewell site, for which the last licence was issued on 1 March 1990, as indicated in the table.

Nuclear site licences may be varied for a number of reasons—for example, the commissioning of full power. A complete list of the variations that have been made to each of the site licences listed is not readily available and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

The Health and Safety Executive grants a nuclear site licence for an indefinite period. The licence can be revoked by the HSE and can also be surrendered by the licensee, who is responsible for the safety of activities on the site. HSE's publication, "Nuclear Site Licences under the Nuclear Installations Act 1965 (As Amended), Notes for Applicants", sets out the current conditions attached to a licence. A copy of this is in the Library of the House.

In 1994, on average, HSE's nuclear installations inspectorate inspected each nuclear power station every 2.5 weeks. The operation of each reactor is constrained by HSE using controls, including consents, derived from the conditions attached to the licence.

Electricity Demand

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the United Kingdom's (a) base load and (b) peak electricity demands during 1994. [27276]

Mr. Eggar: The simultaneous maximum demand for electricity in the United Kingdom met during the winter 1993–94 was 54.8 GW and during the winter of 1994–95 was 52.4 GW. The lowest demand met in the UK during the year 1994 was 20.2 GW. Base load varies according to season, with the minimum load on the day of maximum winter demand almost twice the minimum load in mid-summer. There is thus no single measurement for base load.

Nuclear Decommissioning

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the latest projections for the total cost of decommissioning (a) Berkeley and (b) Trawsfyndd nuclear power stations at 1995 prices, and what are the anticipated dates when these costs will accrue. [25280]

Mr. Eggar: These are matters for Nuclear Electric plc.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the total amount of money set aside to date by Nuclear Electric and Scottish Nuclear for decommissioning (a) Magnox reactors and (b) advanced gas-cooled reactor power stations. [25275]

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the annual reports and accounts of Nuclear Electric and Scottish Nuclear, available in the Library of the House.

Sizewell

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the total insurance cover for an accident at the Sizewell pressurised water reactor; and how such risks are insured against. [25290]

Mr. Eggar: The insurance of Nuclear Electric's own property and other commercial risks is a matter for the company.

With regard to insurance cover for third party liability claims resulting from a nuclear occurrence, Nuclear Electric is insured in accordance with the requirements of the Nuclear Installations Act 1965, which reflected international agreements. This requires the operator to take out insurance for £140 million.

Fossil Fuel Levy

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much has been raised by the non-fossil fuel obligation in each financial year since 1989; and how the total levy proceeds have been distributed. [25286]

Mr. Eggar: The fossil fuel levy was introduced on 1 April 1990. The information requested is:

£ million

	Amount raised	Payments to:
		Nuclear Electric	Renewable generators
1990–91	1,175	1,135	6
1991–92	1,324	1,281	12
1992–93	1,348	1,291	29
1993–94	1,233	1,139	68
1994–95[1]	1,204	1,081	96

The balance of levy receipts is used to finance payments to British Nuclear Fuels plc in respect of nuclear electricity generated by its plant, and to cover certain other costs such as administration costs.

Electricity Supplies

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what determines which power stations provide base load electricity supply within the pool pricing arrangements. [25278]

Mr. Eggar: The order of priority for calling stations to run is determined by the England and Wales grid code and by the pool rules.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if purchases from the French interconnector are to provide base load electricity supply; and if prices are discounted on the basis of the guarantee to run continuously. [25285]

Mr. Eggar: The interconnector was built for mutual system support and to trade electricity when one country could supply it more cheaply than the other. Because of low avoidable generation costs at its nuclear plants, Electricité de France has been able to bid into the pool to supply electricity at prices lower than the marginal cost of indigenous fossil-based supplies. As a consequence of the level of EdF's bids, the interconnector has normally supplied base load electricity from France to England.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what percentage of Britain's electricity is provided by companies other than National Power, PowerGen and the nuclear industry; and if he will list the main contributors; [25270]

(2) what percentage of Britain's electricity supply in 1994 were provided by (a) National Power, (b) PowerGen and (c) advanced gas-cooled reactors. [25271]

Mr. Eggar: In the United Kingdom in 1994, provisional data show that 62 per cent. of electricity generated was by the former nationalised industries in Britain—National Power, PowerGen, Scottish Power and Hydro-Electric—26 per cent. by Nuclear Electric and Scottish Nuclear, 7 per cent. by new entrants to generation and 5 per cent. by other generators, including those generating electricity for their own use. Information about individual generators cannot be provided. Advanced gas-cooled reactors generated 19 per cent. of UK electricity in 1994.

The new entrants to electricity generation are: Barking Power Ltd., Corby Power Ltd., Elm Energy and Recycling Ltd., Fellside Heat and Power Ltd., Fibropower Ltd., Fibrogen Ltd., Keadby Generation Ltd., Lakeland Power Ltd., Peterborough Power Ltd., Regional Power Ltd., South East London Combined Heat and Power Ltd. and Teesside Power Ltd.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the average price paid by the distribution companies to the generating companies during 1994 (a) for base load electricity supply and (b) for electricity supply at peak demand. [25279]

Mr. Eggar: Supply companies, rather than distribution companies, purchase electricity from generating companies. The price paid is dependent upon commercially confidential contracts between the parties.

Nestles-Rowntree Factory, Norwich

Ms Harman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he plans to meet representatives of the management of Rowntree, trade unions representing employees at Rowntree and other interested parties in relation to the proposed closure of the Nestles-Rowntree factor in Norwich; [24756]

(2) what discussions his Department has had with the Department of Employment and other Government Departments concerning the proposed closure of the Nestles-Rowntree factory in Norwich and the effect of the closure on the local economy; [24758]

(3) if he will make a statement on the proposed closure of the Nestles-Rowntree factory in Norwich; [24759]

(4) how many jobs in total will be lost in Norwich and the surrounding areas as a result of the proposed closure of the Nestles-Rowntree factory in Norwich; [24755]

(5) what representations he has received regarding the proposed closure of the Nestles-Rowntree factory in Norwich. [24757]

Mr. Jonathan Evans [holding answers 17 May 1995]: Neither my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade nor my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment has had representations about the proposed closure of the factory. Nor do we have any immediate plans to make a statement on the proposed closure of the factory. The closure decision was taken on purely commercial grounds and is expected to involve the loss of some 900 jobs. We have no plans to meet with the management of Nestle or with the trade unions at the plant. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade hopes, however, to visit Norwich in the autumn and in the course of his visit expects to hear at first hand more about the impact of the closure and the immediate and longer-term response of the business and other communities in the town. Since the closure announcement was made, the Government office for eastern region, which embraces the Departments of Trade and Industry, of Employment, of the Environment and of Transport, has kept closely in touch with business, local government and the training and enterprise council in Norwich and is providing help and advice to the emerging partnership which is addressing economic development and competitiveness in the area.

Public Bodies

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which non-departmental public bodies within the responsibility of his Department are subject to scrutiny by (a) the ombudsmen, (b) the National Audit Office, (c) the Audit Commission and (d) other monitoring officers; which are covered by citizens charters; in which performance indicators apply; and in which members are liable to surcharge. [23956]

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 15 May 1995]: The information in relation to DTI's executive NDPBs is as follows:

(a) The Coal Authority

(b) The NAO's access to DTI's NDPBs is detailed in "Public Bodies 1994" which is available in the Library of the House. The newly created Coal Authority is not listed but is audited by the NAO.

(c) None.

(d) (i) All DTI's NDPBs are appropriately monitored by the relevant divisions of the Department.

(ii) All DTI's NDPBs are encouraged to follow citizens charter principals where they are appropriate.

(iii) DTI's NDPBs are encouraged to introduce performance indicators where they are appropriate. So far, the following bodies have adopted or are soon to adopt indicators:

Coal Authority—precise indicators to be agreed in 1995–96

Simpler Trade Procedures Board

United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority

National Consumer Council—precise indicators to be agreed in 1995–96

Gas Consumers Council

(iv) Although board members of DTI's NDPBs may in certain circumstances be liable for wrongful or negligent actions, individual members are not subject to surcharge of a statutory nature.

Trading Standards Service

Mr. Berry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the applicability of the views attributed to his Department on pages 42 and 43 of "Renewing Local Government" in the English shires to the future of the trading standards service after the proposed division of Berkshire into six unitary authorities. [24547]

Mr. Jonathan Evans [holding answer 17 May 1995]: The Government remain committed to the continued provision of an effective and efficient trading standards service following the reorganisation of local government. However, responsibility for particular organisational arrangements, including, allocation of resources to provide the necessary services, such as trading standards services, which will best service the needs of their respective communities, is a matter for individual authorities.

Where they are unable to provide a satisfactory service from their own resources, it is opened to new unitary authorities to enter into voluntary co-operative arrangements with neighbouring authorities. Smaller authorities in particular may wish to consider entering into such arrangements. In areas where reorganisation leaves in place a previous provider of the service, new authorities may wish to consider the scope for sharing an existing capability.

Nigeria

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his reply of 20 January, Official Report, column 759, what is the total amount paid to date by the Export Credits Guarantee Department in respect of defaults on credits to Nigeria; and what sum relates to contracts for defence equipment. [24686]

Mr. Needham: [holding answer 17 May 1995]: From the period 1 April 1980 to 31 March 1994, ECGD paid claims of £1,449 million in respect of capital goods and project business in Nigeria.

It is not practicable to extract the amounts that relate to contracts for defence equipment in Nigeria.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Social Fund

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the annual social fund allocated to each local office of his Department when the fund was introduced in April 1988. [24463]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is in the Library.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of income support claimants were repaying a social fund loan in (a) Scotland and (b) Britain as a whole at the end of each financial year between 1988–89 and 1994–95. [24464]

Mr. Roger Evans: The available information is set out in the table. Information on the percentage of income support recipients who are repaying a social fund loan is available only at the end of May of each year. Data are unavailable for May 1993.

Per cent.

Year	Scotland	Great Britain
31 May 1989	14.6	8.5
31 May 1990	15.7	9.2
31 May 1991	17.2	9.9
31 May 1992	18.1	11.5
31 May 1994	17.2	11.7

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the criteria by which the social fund budget allocations were made to local offices in his Department when the fund was introduced in April 1988. [24465]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is in annexe 3 of the Secretary of State's annual report on the social fund 1988–89, Cm 748, a copy of which is in the Library.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list those companies in which the holder of his office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past five years. [25708]

Mr. Hague: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State does not, in his official capacity, hold shares in any company.

Access Committee for England

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has for the future funding of the Access Committee for England. [23589]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 16 May, Official Report, column 165, by the Under-Secretary of State for Health, my hon. Friend the Member for Battersea (Mr. Bowis).

Child Support Agency

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many of the parents with care in the case load of the Child Support Agency are caring for (a) one, (b) two or (c) three or more children; [24830]

(2) what is the average maintenance requirement assessed by the Child Support Agency in cases where the parent with care is not in receipt of benefit; [24832]

(3) what proportion of maintenance collected through the Child Support Agency is retained by parents with care; [24834]

(4) what is the average maintenance assessment made by the Child Support Agency in cases where there is (a) one child, (b) two children and (c) three or more children. [24829]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Tony Ward to Mr. Stephen Timms, dated 18 May 1995:

In the absence of Miss Chant, the Chief Executive, I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about parents with care (PWC) who have had child maintenance arranged by the Child Support Agency.

Information relating to the number of PWCs caring for up to three or more children and the average maintenance payable in such cases is only available in relation to the total number of children in the PWCs household. There will be instances where some of the children in the PWCs household do not qualify for a child maintenance assessment to be carried out by the Agency.

As at 11 March 1995, 190,700 PWCs cared for one child; 166,500 cared for two children and 97,400 cared for three or more children. The average maintenance assessed for households with one, two, three or more children was £41.62, £45.88 and £42.79 respectively. The average weekly maintenance assessed in cases where the PWCs household was not in receipt of benefit was £61.48. These figures are all estimates taken from a one per cent sample of Agency cases.

From launch to the end of March 1995, a total of £86.81 million was received and allocated by the Agency. Of this, 36% (£30.88 million) has been paid to PWCs.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of absent parents in the case load of the Child Support Agency has second families. [24833]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Tony Ward to Mr. Stephen Timms, dated 18 May 1995:

In the absence of Miss Chant, the Chief Executive, I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the number of absent parents with second families.

As at 11 March 1995, it is estimated that the absent parents who had returned a maintenance enquiry form, 6.5 percent had second families.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what benefit savings he estimates to have been achieved through the Child Support Agency in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95. [24835]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Tony Ward to Mr. Stephen Timms, dated 18 May 1995:

In the absence of Miss chant, the Chief Executive, I am replying to your recent parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the benefit savings achieved by the Agency.

During 1993/94 the Agency achieved £418 million in benefit savings. The estimated figure for 1994/95 is £479.05 million.

Income-related Benefits

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the total of households in the United Kingdom; and what proportion there are on means-tested benefits; [24607]

(2) how many pensioner households there are in the United Kingdom; and what proportion there are on means-tested benefits. [24606]

Mr. Burt [holding answer 16 May 1995]: The information requested is not available for households and has therefore been provided for benefit units. A benefit unit is defined as a single person or a couple, with or without children. There may be more than one benefit unit within a household. Information is available only for Great Britain.

The available information is in the table.

Benefit units (Great Britain)—totals and proportion receiving an income-related benefit

	Total	Pensioners
Benefit units (millions)	29.5	8.6
Proportion of benefit units receiving an income-related benefit	29 per cent.	40 per cent.

Notes:

1. People may be in receipt of more than one income-related benefit. Overlap between benefits has been taken into account.
2. Pensioners have been defined as those eligible for the income support pensioner premiums, that is, where the claimant and/or partner are aged 60 or over.
3. Information is for May 1993, the latest date for which figures are available for all benefits.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received from voluntary organisations regarding the potential effects of the Jobseekers Bill on voluntary work. [24449]

Miss Widdecombe: I have been asked to reply.

Ministers in the Employment Department and the Department of Social Security have received a number of representations from voluntary organisations. As my noble Friend Lord Inglewood indicated during discussion on the Jobseekers Bill in Committee, we will consider the view of the representatives of the voluntary sector before jobseeker's allowance regulations are drafted.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the effect of the Jobseekers Bill on the numbers of people gaining work experience through long-term voluntary work. [24447]

Miss Widdecombe: I have been asked to reply.

People who undertake voluntary work must still be available for employment and must actively seek employment in order to receive unemployment benefit or income support for the unemployed. Current provision in regulations however, allow unemployed people who undertake voluntary work 48 hours' notice to be available to take up an offer of employment. Current provisions also enable a person's voluntary work to be taken into account when considering whether he has met the actively seeking employment condition for receipt of benefit. As my noble Friend Lord Inglewood indicated during discussion of the Jobseekers Bill, we will be following this approach in jobseeker's allowance.

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what trials or pilot schemes of anticipated jobseeker's allowance procedures have been undertaken by his Department; where they were held; how long they lasted; what they covered; and what were their results. [25575]

Mr. Roger Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Employment.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Hospital Study

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library a copy of the complementarity study undertaken in respect of hospitals within the Eastern health and social services board's area. [23051]

Mr. Moss: I will write to the hon. Gentleman about this matter.

Hospital Agency Staff

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the cost of employing agency staff in hospitals covered by the Eastern health and social services board in each of the last four years. [24446]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is only available from 1992–93 and is as follows:

Year	Total cost (£)
1992–93	21,325
1993–94	[1]45,048
1994–95	[2]Nil

Notes:

[1] In 1993–94 two units of management increased their use of agency staff.

[2] By 1994–95 all directly managed units within the Eastern health and social services board were established as health and social services trusts. The board's accounts for 1994–95 remain subject to audit.

Public Service Offices

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all the public service offices, other than local government offices, and the number of persons employed in such offices, in Armagh district council in (a) January 1992, (b) January 1993, (c) January 1994 and (d) January 1995. Road Safety

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has for improving road safety in Northern Ireland. [24318]

Mr. Moss: The Government will publish Northern Ireland's first road safety plan later this year, which is intended to increase the effectiveness of their road casualty reduction measures by providing a more strategic approach to the planning, co-ordination and delivery of road safety activities. Strong emphasis will continue to be placed on road safety education and publicity and on enforcement of traffic law. Increased resources have been provided and further increases planned, for accident remedial measures and traffic calming schemes at locations where accidents are known to occur.

Northern Ireland's road traffic legislation is being strengthened and brought more closely in line with the rest of the United Kingdom; legislative proposals include the introduction of a penalty points scheme for traffic offences.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what comparison he has made between road safety standards in Northern Ireland and those in the rest of the United Kingdom. [24321]

Mr. Moss: Road safety standards, when measured in terms of accident, death and casualty rates, are published annually in "Northern Ireland Transport Statistics". This publication is available from the House of Commons Library. These statistics permit comparisons between Northern Ireland and the rest of the United Kingdom and are summarised in the tables.

Play Areas (Safety Surfacing)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidelines he has issued to local authorities to encourage the provision of safety surfacing on play areas; what special financial provision he has made available to local authorities to encourage and enable them to meet this need; and if he will make a statement. [24088]

Mr. Ancram: A handbook, "Playground Safety Guidelines", prepared by the national Children's Play and Recreation Unit, was issued in 1992 to the Association of Local Authorities of Northern Ireland for distribution to local district councils. These guidelines include a section on safety surfacing of play areas.

No special financial provision has been made available to local authorities for improvement works in this area.

Foxes

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many fox destruction clubs or societies are registered in Northern Ireland; what is the level of assistance they currently receive; what guidelines he issues on how these clubs and societies destroy foxes; what guidelines he issues on the numbers of foxes to be destroyed; how the fox population is assessed; and if he will make a statement. [24128]

Mr. Moss: There are no fox destruction clubs or societies registered in Northern Ireland, nor is there any mechanism for registering them.

No scientific monitoring of the fox population in Northern Ireland is carried out.

Belfast Harbour Commissioners

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what development land is possessed by the port of Belfast. [24319]

Mr. Moss: The Belfast Harbour Commissioners currently own 226 acres of commercial development land, the majority of which is on the County Down side of the harbour estate.

Occupational Therapists

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many occupational therapists are employed in each health and social services trust; and what were the figures five years ago. [24015]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is set out in the table.

Ports (European Grant Aid)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what grant ports in Northern Ireland have received or are receiving from the European Union; and whether these would have to be repaid in the event of privatisation. [24317]

Mr. Moss: Details of grant paid prior to 1986 are incomplete.

Details of grant paid to Northern Ireland ports from 1986 to date are as follows:

Ports	£
Belfast Port	70,388,570
Londonderry Port	18,071,419
Warrenpoint Harbour	6,841,407
Larne Harbour	7,164,729
Coleraine Harbour	403,467
Total	102,869,592

In the event of the privatisation of a trust port, the question of repayment of grant aid would be a matter for discussion between the Commission and the Government.

Northern Ireland Railways

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the involvement of private sector finance in Northern Ireland Railways. [24315]

Mr. Moss: The Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company, which is the parent company of Northern Ireland Railways, has commissioned a study which will consider the scope for attracting private finance into Northern Ireland Railways's capital programme.

Housing Associations

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what purposes he requires (a) names of children, (b) names of spouse and (c) details of member's hobbies from all members and senior staff of the housing associations in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement about the relevance of these personal details to the performance of all the housing association members and staff involved. [24501]

Mr. Moss: The information was sought in order to obtain up-to-date and accurate pen pictures of members and senior staff of housing associations. Such information is already sought routinely by the Department from associations on an ad hoc basis. There is no link whatever between the personal details and performance. The provision of the information is entirely voluntary and will be treated as confidential.

Craigakulliar Quarry

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will now visit Craigakulliar quarry. [24584]

Mr. Moss: I have no plans to do so at present.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the commissioner who heard the inquiry into the planning application to use the Craigakulliar quarry as a dump completed his report; when the other commissioners finished their consideration of that report; when they decided to overturn the recommendations of the commissioner who held the inquiry; and when their decision was (a) first communicated to the officers and town clerk of Coleraine borough council and (b) published. [24588]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Planning Appeals Commission. I have asked the chief commissioner to write to the hon. Gentleman.

National Insurance Numbers

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many national insurance numbers existing on 31 March were being held as a record following the death of the owner; [24595]

(2) how many national insurance numbers existing on 31 March 1995 (a) referred to owners living abroad and (b) were cancelled between 1 April 1994 and 31 March 1995; [24596]

(3) how many national insurance numbers existed in Northern Ireland on 31 March 1995. [24594]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange a reply to be given.

Letter from Alec Wylie to Mr. Clifford Forsythe, dated 18 May 1995:

I have been asked to reply to your three recent Parliamentary Questions relating to National Insurance numbers.

I should first explain that all National Insurance records for the United Kingdom are held centrally in Newcastle-upon-Tyne and Northern Ireland National Insurance numbers are not held separately from the rest of the United Kingdom. The information you require is not readily available and to disaggregate the National Insurance numbers for Northern Ireland would incur disproportionate costs.

I can, however, tell you that at July 1994, for the United Kingdom as a whole, there was 8.8 million National Insurance numbers being held as a record following the death of the owner. This can be for a number of reasons including to support payment of a Widow's Pension. At July 1994, again for the United Kingdom as a whole, there were 6.1 million National Insurance numbers which referred to owners living abroad.

Finally, from 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995, there were 10,421 National Insurance Numbers cancelled in the United Kingdom.

I am sorry that I cannot provide the information in the format you require but I hope that the information I have given you will be helpful.

Roman Catholic Council for Maintained Schools

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 9 May, Official Report, column 433, if he will make a statement on the role of the Roman Catholic Council for Maintained Schools. [24667]

Mr. Ancram: The functions of the Roman Catholic Council for Maintained Schools are set out in part IX of the Education Reform (Northern Ireland) Order 1989, a copy of which is available in the Library.

National Lottery Grants

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what occasions he as used his powers under the National Lottery etc. Act 1993 to direct the administrators of lottery grants to withhold grants to groups; and what proposals he has to use these powers in future. [24601]

Mr. Ancram: The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has not to date used his powers under the National Lottery etc. Act 1993 to prohibit the distribution of money to any group and has at present no proposals to do so.

Suicides

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the most recent available percentage suicide rate for employed 18 to 65-year-olds in Northern Ireland. [24555]

Sir John Wheeler: Information on the number of employed people who have committed suicide is not available. At death registration, informants are asked for the last occupation rather than the employment status of the deceased.

Education and Library Boards

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for how many pupils in each education and library board area in Northern Ireland the area board has a responsibility to provide services. [24666]

Mr. Ancram: Details of the services provided for pupils by the education and library boards are contained in their annual reports, copies of which are available in the Library.

Pupil Numbers

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total number of children enrolled in (a) maintained, (b) voluntary, (c) integrated and (d) independent schools in each area board in Northern Ireland. [24668]

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is as follows:

	Belfast	Western	North-Eastern	South-Eastern	Southern	Total
Maintained	28,149	37,149	20,348	17,105	38,789	141,540

Public Health Notices

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many public health notices have been issued by each district council in respect of properties between 1 April 1993 to 31 March 1995; and what were the reasons for such notices. [24745]

Mr. Moss: The service of public health notices is a statutory duty of district councils. The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many home improvement grant applications were approved as a result of public health notices issued by each district council in Northern Ireland since 1 April 1993 to 31 March 1995; what were the budgetary amounts allocated; and if each application fulfilled the criteria for unfitness as laid down in the Housing (NI) Order 1992. [24750]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. However, the chief executive has provided in the table, for each district council area, the numbers of repairs grants approved on foot of the service of public health notices and the amount of grant paid for the period April 1993 to March 1995. Applications for grant aid resulting from the service of public health notices do not have to fulfil the criteria for unfitness as laid down in the Housing (NI) Order 1992.

Downpatrick Regeneration Project

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will fill the vacant project officer position in the Downpatrick regeneration project. [24746]

Mr. Moss: The Department is actively seeking to fill the vacant post and it is hoped that an appointment will be made shortly.

Conservation Area Grants

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultations have taken place about increasing the level of conservation area grants. [24747]

Mr. Moss: Consultations about increasing the level of conservation area grants have taken place with the Historic Buildings Council. In the light of these, it was decided that grants should remain unaltered.

Housing Executive

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to sell off the Housing Executive's stock to the private sector, and if he will make a statement. [24748]

Mr. Moss: There are no plans to sell off the Housing Executive's stock to the private sector. The executive, however, does have powers to sell houses to the private sector to complement its own developments or to tenants under its house sales scheme.

Planning Applications

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultations took place about the recent price increase in respect of certain planning applications. [24751]

Mr. Moss: It is Government policy to achieve full recovery of the costs of processing applications and current planning fees do not meet these costs. The recent increase was designed to close this gap and external consultations were not considered appropriate.

Disclosure in Criminal Cases

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the consultation paper on disclosure in criminal cases in Northern Ireland; and if the consultation period will conclude after 31 July. [25176]

Sir John Wheeler: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State published such a paper on 19 May, seeking comments by 31 July.

Miss Markievicz Gorman

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the shot which wounded Markievicz Gorman was fired before the stolen car in which she was a passenger had passed the Army patrol. [22917]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 9 May 1995]: It has not been established at what stage Miss Gorman received her wound.

Miss Gorman herself did not appear to have realised at what stage she received her injury and in fact became aware that she was injured only after the shooting had stopped and she was removed from the car by Army personnel.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Inquests

32. Ms Hoey: To ask the Attorney-General what criteria he uses when deciding to exercise his discretion under section 13 of the Coroners Act 1988 to grant a fresh inquest. [23914]

The Solicitor-General: The Attorney-General considers whether an application to the High Court would have a reasonable prospect of establishing that it is necessary or desirable in the interests of justice for a fresh inquest to be held.

Private Lee Clegg

33. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his oral answer of 6 February, Official Report, column 13, what further representations he has received on the case of Private Clegg. [23915]

The Attorney-General: The Law Officers have received 42 individual representations since 6 February and two petitions, one bearing 18 names and the other 45.

Stefan Kiszko Case

34. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General what plans he has to appeal against the decision of Rochdale's stipendiary magistrate to drop charges of perverting the course of justice in the Stefan Kiszko case against former Superintendent Richard Holland and Mr. Ronald Outteridge; and if he will make a statement. [23916]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service is carefully considering and taking counsel's advice on the possibility of an appeal.

War Crimes Act 1991

35. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Attorney-General what recent representations he has received about the workings of the War Crimes Act 1991. [23917]

The Attorney-General: With regard to second world war crimes, following initial advice from Treasury counsel, further inquiries are in hand in relation to certain potential defendants. Decisions as to possible prosecutions will be taken as soon as all the relevant evidence has been fully considered and analysed.

Treasury Counsel

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General how many barristers on the panel of Treasury counsel received more than £200,000 in fees from public funds for the latest year for which information is available. [25055]

The Attorney-General: There are two Treasury counsel retained for Government civil work. A supplementary panel of counsel is also maintained and used in suitable cases. Both Treasury counsel received more than £200,000 in fees from public funds in the financial year 1994–95.

There were 14 Treasury counsel based at the central criminal court to represent the Crown in serious criminal cases until Easter 1995, when three resigned having accepted appointments as Her Majesty's counsel. On the information currently available, seven of those received in excess of £200,000 from the Crown Prosecution Service over the same period. However, criminal Treasury counsel are not exclusively retained by the Crown Prosecution Service and may work for other Government Departments and undertake legal aid defence work. Information on fees from those sources can be determined only at disproportionate cost.

The information referred to is based on payments made inclusive of value added tax.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General how many barristers are presently on the panel of the Treasury counsel. [25056]

The Attorney-General: There are two Treasury counsel retained for government civil work. A supplementary panel of counsel is also maintained and used in suitable cases.

There are at present 11 Treasury counsel based at the central criminal court to represent the Crown in serious criminal cases.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list those companies in which the holder of his office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past five years. [25714]

The Attorney-General: There are no companies in which the Attorney-General is a majority shareholder and no such companies have been wound up in the past five years.

Electro-shock Batons

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement about the outcome of the investigation by the Crown Prosecution Service relating to British Aerospace and the export of electro-shock batons. [25567]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service does not itself conduct investigations. The relevant police investigation is not yet concluded.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those companies in which the holder of his office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past five years. [25710]

Mr. David Hunt: None.

Parliamentary Council

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the role of the Office of Parliamentary Counsel in relation to (a) public Bills, (b) private Bills and (c) private Members' Bills; how this has changed over the past 20 years, with specific instances; and if he will make a statement. [24132]

Mr. David Hunt: Parliamentary counsel are responsible for drafting Government Bills, except common form ones and those relating exclusively to Scotland. Parliamentary counsel advise on all aspects of parliamentary procedure in connection with these Bills. On the instructions of sponsoring Departments, they are responsible for drafting Government amendments and a procedural and other motions.

The Office is not involved in the production of private Bills. It may, however, provide drafting assistance on private Members' Bills on the instructions of Departments acting with the authority of Ministers.

There has been no change in the role of the Office of Parliamentary Counsel over the past 20 years.

Science Budget

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will place in the Library the Director General of the Research Councils' review of the science budget published at the press briefing on Tuesday 16 May, together with accompanying press releases and press pack; and if he will make a statement. [25688]

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Erewash (Mrs. Knight) on 16 May, Official Report, column 123.

I have today deposited in the Libraries of the House the press pack issued at the press briefing on 16 May. The text of the director general's review is also available on the Internet through http://www.open.gov.uk/ost/osthome.htm.

Civil Servants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the grade on entry to the civil service of all current permanent secretaries, including those officials nominally graded at permanent secretary level. [25067]

Mr. Horam: The following list gives details of all current permanent secretaries, including those nominally graded, within the home civil service and their grade on entry to the civil service:

Name	Entry grade
Adye Sir J. A.	Executive Officer
Battishill Sir A. M. W.	Assistant Principal

Turnbull A.	Assistant Principal
Vereker J. M. M.	Assistant Principal
Wicks Sir N. L	Assistant Principal
Wilson R. T. J.	Assistant Principal

In July, Professor Tim Holt will take up the post of director at the Central Statistical Office. This appointment was made following an open competition. He will join the civil service directly as a grade 1A.

"Forward Look" 1995

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to publish the "1995 Forward Look of Government Funded Science, Engineering and Technology" and the report of the technology foresight steering group. [25769]

Mr. David Hunt: I am today publishing the report of the technology foresight steering group and the "1995 Forward Look of Government Funded Science, Engineering and Technology". Copies of both reports are being placed in the Library and summaries are available from the Vote Office.

The report on technology foresight is from an independent steering group chaired by the Government's chief scientific adviser, Sir William Stewart. I am grateful to Sir William and his colleagues for their report. This builds on those of the 15 technology foresight sector panels, all of which have already been published by my Department. They have been widely welcomed. The steering group report provides an overarching assessment of the broad areas of science, engineering and technology that will help the UK capture national and global markets over the next 10 to 20 years. The report also makes recommendations concerning basic research, skills, finance and regulation.

The Government will respond vigorously to the steering group and panel reports. Their recommendations will inform policy and priorities in Government, the research councils and universities. My Department, in partnership with the DTI, will also be undertaking a major campaign to spread awareness of foresight findings throughout industry.

The key to success will be to get industry and the science and engineering base working in partnership to address the opportunities which foresight has identified. To stimulate this, I am announcing today a foresight challenge. This will be financed through an extra £40 million of public money which I will make available over the next three years, for collaborative initiatives which address foresight priorities. The challenge will be based on existing mechanisms for industry/science base collaboration, in particular the successful LINK scheme. It will attract matching funds from industry—making £80 million of new resources. I intend to consult the scientific and business communities about the detailed arrangements for the challenge.

Further details of the Government's plans for the next stage of the foresight exercise are set out in the 1995 "Forward Look". This report provides an up-to-date statement on the ways in which public funds for science, engineering and technology are being spent throughout Government and the challenges and opportunities that lie ahead. Particular emphasis is given to the ways in which Government Departments and the research councils are refocusing their programmes in support of wealth creation and quality of life in line with the policy objectives of the 1993 White Paper "Realising our Potential".

Taking account of technology foresight, the Government will continue to work towards a much closer coupling between publicly funded research and development and the wealth-creating private sector, to help deliver the goals of enhanced national prosperity and quality of life.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Labelling

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further measures he plans to introduce to ensure that food labelling is truthful and accurate about its impact on animal welfare and the environment; and if he will make a statement. [24065]

Mrs. Browning: The Food Safety Act 1990 already requires that food labelling shall neither falsely describe the food nor mislead as to the nature or substance or quality of the food concerned. Statements on food labels concerned with animal welfare must therefore comply with those requirements. I have no plans to introduce any more specific requirements; advice I received from the Independent Food Advisory Committee indicated that it would not be appropriate so to do and there are no proposals at European Community level to introduce any such requirement.

Foxes

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many fox destruction clubs or societies are registered in England; what is the level of assistance they currently receive; what guidelines he issues on how these clubs and societies destroy foxes; what guidelines he issues on the numbers of foxes to be destroyed; how the fox population is assessed; and if he will make a statement. [24129]

Mrs. Browning: Fox destruction clubs or societies are neither required to be registered with nor are they financially assisted by the Ministry and information is not collected on the number of such organisations.

Responsibility for the control of foxes rests with those who most benefit from such control, that is, individual landowners and occupiers. The actual method of control is also at the discretion of individual landowners and occupiers, provided that the method does not contravene current legislation, such as the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 and the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986.

Plant Labelling

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures are in place to ensure that containerised and container-grown decorative house plants destined for sale in supermarkets which also sell food are clearly labelled with any potential dangers associated with their natural features or pesticide treatments by growers or suppliers; what further measure he plans to introduce; and if he will make a statement. [24160]

Mrs. Browning: The risks associated with the sale of potentially hazardous plants by supermarkets and other outlets is a matter which has been considered in a horticultural industry initiative. A voluntary code of practice on handling, retailing and labelling of poisonous plants has been drawn up for adoption. This is a good example of self-regulation. The risk of contamination of food by pesticides used on ornamental plants sold in the same store is extremely small. We have no plans to require growers or suppliers to label plants with the treatments applied.

Fish Imports

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the economic impact of cheap fish imported from non-EEC countries on the livelihoods of east coast fishermen. [24153]

Mr. Jack: No specific assessment has been made in relation to the situation on the east coast of England, but last year's broad-based analysis by the European Commission indicated that underlying structural problems rather than non-EU imports were responsible for the generally depressed state of the fish market within the European Union. The EU market depends increasingly on imports for its supplies and fish processors in particular depend heavily on imported raw material because their needs cannot be met from EU resources.

Live Animal Exports

Sir Terence Higgins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 18 April, Official Report, columns 103-104, regarding the conformity of the vessel Northern Star to the provisions of the Welfare of Animals during Transport Order 1994, by what authority his Department takes the view that point 18 of schedule 3 to the order, which implements EC directive 91/628, does not apply to roll-on roll-off ferries. [24441]

Mrs. Browning: My previous answer to which my right hon. Friend refers gave the view which the Department takes when assessing roll-on roll-off ferries for compliance with the law.

Mr. Olner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 11 May, Official Report, column 581, when he expects his Department's consideration of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals' latest legal advice on the export of live animals to be completed. [24779]

Mr. Waldegrave: I have now received advice from lawyers on the opinion from Mr. Gerald Barling QC entitled "Welfare of Calves: Lawfulness of Export Restrictions".

My legal advice in the light of that opinion remains: namely, that a ban on calf exports—whether a blanket ban or a selective ban on exports to certain countries or to rearing units using veal crates—would be at serious risk of successful challenge under European law.

There are also policy considerations. By far the best outcome, which I believe is achievable, would be EU measures to prohibit the use of the veal crate across Europe. That, I am sure all would agree, would be the best way of achieving a real increase in the sum of animal welfare. A unilateral restriction on exports from the UK—if it could be made to stick—would be only a gesture in terms of animal welfare: continental rearers would carry on using veal crates, and would obtain calves from alternative, more distant, sources from which they would probably be transported in conditions less humane than those we impose on our own exports. There would be no net gain across Europe in animal welfare terms.

In addition, to attempt to introduce a unilateral ban would be counter-productive in relation not only to the chances of getting a Euro-wide ban, but to the very delicate negotiations on welfare in transit in general. We would have antagonised other member states, some of them at present our allies, and might indeed give them a pretext for declining to take matters further, pending resolution of the legal issues. These are strong reasons for not introducing a ban, even if I thought—as I do not—that I had discretion to do so in legal terms. The fact is that I am still being advised that I do not have that discretion.

Mr. Barling's opinion does, however, raise an interesting new point in highlighting the fact that the provisions of Community directive 91/629 on the welfare of calves fail to reflect those of appendix C to the recommendation on cattle which the Council of Europe adopted under the European convention for the protection of animals kept for farming purposes. As I have said, this does not alter the legal position in respect of a unilateral ban on calf exports. However, I am, as the House will know, already pressing the Council of Ministers to revise directive 91/629 so as to prohibit the use of the veal crate throughout the Community. In support of this aim, I intend drawing Mr. Barling's argumentation over the Council of Europe texts to the Commission's attention. I hope it will see this as a powerful reason for it to make proposals to the Council for the Community's own rules to be brought into line with the rules to which the Community has subscribed in the Council of Europe.

I believe that the RSPCA—and other animal welfare organisations—can play an important role in our efforts to achieve changes in the Community rules. I am today conveying to it my views in the light of Mr. Barling's opinion, and inviting it to meet me to discuss how matters can now be taken forward.

Head of EC Tobacco Sector

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the result of the Belgian police investigation into the circumstances surrounding the suicide of the former head of the tobacco sector of the EC. [24867]

Mr. Jack: The Belgian police investigated the immediate circumstances surrounding the death of the former head of the tobacco sector of the EC, with the assistance of the Commission, and concluded that he took his own life. They did not carry out a further investigation into the alleged case of fraud. The Commission, from its own internal investigation, passed dossiers of information to the Italian and Greek authorities, and the state prosecutors in Rome and Athens are now pursuing their own inquiries with the full assistance of the Commission's anti-fraud squad.

Public Bodies

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which non-departmental public bodies within the responsibility of his Department are subject to scrutiny by (a) the ombudsmen, (b) the National Audit Office, (c) the Audit Commission and (d) other monitoring officers, which are covered by citizens charters, in which performance indicators apply, and in which members are liable to surcharge. [23965]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 15 May 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Cannock and Burntwood (Mr. Wright) on 16 May 1995, Official Report, columns 203–204, as regards the role of the ombudsmen and the NAO in relation to the Ministry's executive NDPBs and the applicability of the citizens charter and performance indicators. The ombudsmen and NAO may also scrutinise funding and secretariat support for other NDPBs. The Audit Commission has no role in relation to MAFF's NDPBs, but NDPBs are subject to internal and external audit. The normal legal rules on liability to surcharge apply to board members of NDPBs, whose liability is not limited.

WALES

Nurses' Pay

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning nurses' pay in Wales. [24336]

Mr. Richards: The independent pay review body has recommended a 1 per cent. increase in national salaries to be supplemented by local negotiations on pay which are expected to lead to improvements in total of between 1.5 and 3 per cent. These recommendations have been accepted in full by the Government.

Some 13 trusts and units in Wales have made offers known—all at the 3 per cent. mark. The remainder are expected to make offers soon.

Negotiations are still continuing between the management and staff sides of the Nursing and Midwifery Staffs Council to translate the pay review body recommendations into an agreement for promulgation to the service.

Community Care Charters

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he intends to issue his consultation paper on community care charters for Wales. [24017]

Mr. Richards: We intend to issue our draft framework for community care charters in Wales for consultation within the next few weeks. The new health and local authorities will be asked to have their charters in place by April 1997.

Unitary Authorities (School Pupils)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for how many school pupils each of the proposed unitary authorities in Wales will be responsible. [24582]

Mr. Richards: The following table shows at January 1994 the number of pupils attending LEA-maintained schools in each unitary authority area. These pupils may not be residents of the unitary authority in which their school is located.

Number of pupils on roll at January 1994[1]

Unitary Authority	Part-time	Full-time	Total
Anglesey	219	10,703	10,922
Caernarfonshire and Merionethshire	221	17,078	17,299
Aberconwy and Colwyn	774	11,051	11,825
Denbighshire	1,063	14,201	15,264
Flintshire	1,745	22,979	24,724
Wrexham	1,694	18,160	19,854
Powys	32	18,844	18,876
Cardiganshire	163	10,445	10,608
Pembrokeshire	549	18,451	19,000
Carmarthenshire	524	27,011	27,535
Swansea	3,350	34,261	37,611
Neath and Port Talbot	2,256	21,418	23,674
Bridgend	537	21,917	22,454
Vale of Glamorgan	890	17,087	17,977
Rhondda, Cynon, Taff	214	43,027	43,241
Merthyr Tydfil	701	10,931	11,632
Caerphilly	1,174	29,224	30,398

Monmouthshire	408	11,554	11,962
Newport	1,588	22,870	24,458
Cardiff	2,759	47,616	50,375
Wales	22,604	455,197	477,801

[1] Includes pupils on roll at all LEA-maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools.

Suicides

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the most recent available percentage suicide rate for employed 18 to 65-year-olds in Wales. [24556]

Mr. Richards: Information on the number of employed people who have been recorded as having committed suicide is not available. At death registration, it is the last occupation rather than employment status of the deceased that is recorded.

Live Sheep Exports

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many sheep were exported live from Wales in 1980, 1985, 1990 and 1994. [24557]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The number of sheep exported live from Wales in recent years are as follows:

1990: 128,500
1994: 242,000

Abattoirs

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the number of abattoirs in Wales in 1980, 1985, 1990 and 1994. [24559]

Mr Gwilym Jones: Since the beginning of 1993, agriculture departments have been responsible for licensing fresh meat premises including abattoirs; prior to that local authorities had this responsibility. Figures for the numbers of abattoirs before 1993 are derived from records of state veterinary service visits made at the end of each year as set out in the chief veterinary officer's reports for those years. The number of abattoirs operating in Wales was 62 in 1980, 72 in 1985, and 60 in 1990. At the end of 1994, the number of abattoirs licensed by the Welsh office was 40—not 39 as previously advised to the hon. Members for North Cornwall (Mr. Tyler) and for Glanford and Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley).

Education Funding

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he has taken to ensure increased funding for school budgets in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [24850]

Mr. Richards: When making its public expenditure decisions for 1996–97, the Government will give careful consideration to the spending needs of unitary authorities, taking account of the views of the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance.

Smoking

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what advances his anti-smoking campaigns have achieved; and if he will make a statement on specific results achieved. [25160]

Mr. Richards: In Wales there has been an encouraging decrease in the level of smoking prevalence in recent years. Studies carried out by the Health Promotion Authority for Wales show that the percentage of men aged 18 to 64 smoking daily has fallen from 35 per cent. in 1985 to 27 per cent. in 1993. The equivalent change for women of the same age group was from 30 to 25 per cent.

Countryside Council for Wales

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he held with (a) the Campaign for the Protection of Rural Wales and (b) local government in Wales, concerning his proposals for the future of the Countryside Council for Wales; and if he will make a statement. [25005]

Mr. Redwood: Copies of the Countryside Council for Wales action plan were sent to the local authority associations and to the Campaign for Rural Wales.

GP Fundholders

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the payment of GP fundholder management allowances.

Mr. Redwood: Management allowances are paid to GP fundholders to reimburse the additional costs incurred in directly managing NHS resources on behalf of their patients. Section 15 of the NHS and Community Care Act 1990 enables fundholders to receive a sum determined in such manner and by reference to such factors as the Secretary of State may direct. However, legal advice is that payments by fundolders for the sole purpose of management expenses need to be specified within regulations. This has now been provided for under the NHS (Fundholding Practices) Amendment Regulations 1995, which came into force on 1 April 1995. Extra-statutory management allowance payments of this kind, made between 1990–91 and 1994–95—which are estimated at around £9 million—have now been authorised.

Nuclear Waste

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy that nuclear industrial waste will not be disposed of within (a) the boundaries of the Cynon Valley and (b) the boundaries of Mid Glamorgan. [25025]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There are no sites in the Cynon Valley or in Mid Glamorgan which are authorised by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution for the disposal of radioactive waste from nuclear licensed sites. The Government's overall policy in this area will be set out this summer when the conclusions to their review of radioactive waste management are published.

Welsh Office Accommodation

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 101, if he will list all the accommodation rented by the Welsh Office in Cardiff and elsewhere, indicating the percentage of use in each case and the remaining length of the lease and annual rental. [25167]

Mr. Redwood: For reasons of commercial confidentiality, it is Government policy not to disclose information about rent levels for individual properties. The total amount of rent paid in 1994–95 was £4,131,761. Other information requested is given in the following table.

Cardiff Bay

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from the World Wide Fund for Nature concerning breaches of faith in relation to the Government's creation of alternative bird reserves to mitigate the loss of wading birds' habitat in Cardiff bay. [25282]

Mr. Redwood: The director of the World Wide Fund for Nature (UK) wrote to me on 22 February 1994 seeking a meeting to discuss the progress made on the Cardiff bay barrage scheme and associated bird compensation measures. A meeting involving officials from my Department, Cardiff Bay development corporation and the WWF about the Government's commitment to the undertakings given to Parliament was held on 27 June 1994.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what further progress he has to report on the proposal to spend £5.8 million on the Gwent levels to create bird reserves to mitigate the loss of wading birds from Cardiff bay. [25269]

Mr. Redwood: Cardiff Bay development corporation has completed a site options study. This has been considered by a working group comprising representatives from the Countryside Council for Wales, the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds and the Land Authority for Wales. More detailed investigations are being undertaken to determine which sites present the best options. These should be completed by September.

Drug Strategy

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress has been made in the drug strategy for Wales. [25171]

Mr. Richards: I hope to publish the Welsh drug and alcohol strategy for consultation in the next few weeks.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those companies in which the holder of his office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past years. [25704]

Mr. Redwood: There are no such companies in either category.

Deprivation Payments Scheme

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the amended basis for calculating the deprivation index for awarding supplementary payments to GPs in Wales; how many (a) GP practices and (b) individual GPs in each family health services authorty area qualified for supplementary payment under the deprivation payment scheme in 1994–95; and what estimate he has made of the figures for the present year. [25606]

Mr. Redwood: The Review Body on Doctors and Dentists Remuneration has recommended that payments under the deprivation payments scheme should be based on the 1991 census Jarman scores. The Government have accepted its recommendation, which will take effect in 1995–96 and is likely to lead to a further £1.2 million being paid to doctors in Wales, an increase of 66 per cent. This excludes the increase due to the upgrading of the payment levels per patient in each of the deprivation bands following the review body's award for 1995–96.

The number of GP practices and individual GPs with patients in deprived wards at 1 April 1994 is given in the following table:

FHSA	GP practices	GPs
Clwyd	19	45
Dyfed	1	1
Gwent	64	134
Gwynedd	28	70
Mid Glamorgan	95	224
Powys	6	22
South Glamorgan	49	131
West Glamorgan	43	111
Wales	305	738

As a result of the revision of the scheme, it is not yet possible to make a reliable estimate in respect of the present year.

Building Process Work

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for each piece of work subject to a building process under the auspices of (a) his Department and (b) agencies for which his Department is responsible (i) who the successful bidders were where work was contracted out and (ii) which contracts were won by in-house bidders in (1) 1993–94, (2) 1994–95 and (3) 1995-96. [25546]

Mr. Redwood: This information is not held centrally.

TREASURY

Medals and Decorations

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost of producing the conspicuous gallantry cross medal awarded to Corporal Wayne Mills; and what will be the unit cost of future medals. [25170]

Mr. Nelson: The Royal Mint supplied the medal under contract to the Ministry of Defence. The terms on which the Royal Mint supplyies medals to its customers are not disclosed for commercial reasons.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to bring the intrinsic financial value of medals in line with the valour honoured by their award. [25173]

Mr. Nelson: None.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 24 April, Official Report, columns 266–67, what are the reasons for the costs of those medals whose cost exceeds £3,000. [25181]

Mr. Nelson: The cost of insignia is dictated by the complexity of the design, the materials used and the labour costs.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to continue recycling the insignia of the Order of the Garter; what is the cost of recycling; and what plans he has to recycle other insignia. [25172]

Mr. Nelson: Current practice will continue. The insignia of the Order of the Garter is always returned on the death of a holder, renovated and reissued when another knight is appointed. Renovation costs depend upon its condition on return, but represent a significant saving over replacement by new insignia. All other insignia that are returned—for example, on promotion within the same order—are already also renovated and reissued.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those companies in which the holder of his office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past five years. [25705]

Mr. Nelson: There are no companies in either category.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the yield from 2.5 percentage points on value added tax in each year since 1991–92, showing separately the estimated yields in respect of the United Kingdom and England. [25409]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The estimated revenue yield from an increase of 2.5 percentage points on the standard rate of VAT—£ million—is as follows:

	UK	England
1991–92	5,200	4,400
1992–93	5,800	4,900
1993–94	6,200	5,200
1994–95	5,900	5,000
1995–96	6,300	5,300

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimate for VAT receipts in 1995–96; and what it would be if the 1978–79 VAT regime still applied. [25194]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The estimate for VAT receipts in 1995–96 was published in the revised 1995–96 "Financial Statement and Budget Report". Any attempt to estimate under the 1978–79 VAT regime would require the revisiting not only of the legislation as it then stood, but the reinterpretation of many changes in practice since that time. I do not think this would be a meaningful exercise.

Biodiesel Fuels (Excise Duty)

Mr. Soley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to implement section 11 of the Finance Act 1993 dealing with excise duty on biodiesel fuels. [23713]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Section 11 of the Finance Act 1993 provides for excise duty to be charged on fuel substitutes, including biofuels. The necessary commencement order is currently being drafted. The intention is that the order will be made and laid before Parliament in accordance with negative procedures, and be subject to the scrutiny of the Statutory Instruments Committee. It is expected to take effect later this year.

Tax Fraud

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the estimated amount of tax fraud in each year since 1979. [23673]

Sir George Young: No official estimates have been made, but the annual yield from the Inland Revenue's counter-evasion and anti-avoidance work rose from £137.9 million in 1979–80 to £1,609.6 million in 1993–94.

A significant part of this arises from improved targeting of cases and more effective working methods.

Charitable Donations

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what investigations the Inland Revenue have made into the charitable donations made by (a) the Porter Foundation, (b) G G M Newton Charitable Trust, (c) Robert McAlpine Ltd., (d) the liquidators of London and Paris Property Group plc., (e) Wimpey Group Services Ltd., (f) Regalian Properties plc and (g) Hammerson Group Management Ltd. to the Foundation for Business Responsibilities; what conclusions these have drawn; and what further investigations are planned. [24701]

Sir George Young: The tax affairs of all charities, companies and trusts, like those of all taxpayers, are protected by strict rules of confidentiality. The Inland Revenue is unable to provide any information which might breach these rules.

Privatisation

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total of the sums paid or which are due to be paid to financial institutions or companies in respect of their services or advice in regard to those privatisations which have been completed or partially completed since 1979 or which are in preparation or under consideration at this time; and what payments have been or are expected to be paid to the seven businesses or institutions which have received the largest share of these payments. [24200]

Sir George Young: For the sale costs of privatisations that have been completed, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave at 27 April 1995, Official Report, column 646. Details of disaggregated costs can be found in my replies of 23 March 1995, Official Report, column 287, and 16 May 1995, Official Report, column 108. Sale costs for those privatisations that have yet to be completed will be announced in the normal manner following the completion of each sale. Details of the firms which have been the seven largest recipients of privatisation sale fees are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the cumulative total for privatisation receipts from 1979–80 to 1995–96 in 1995–96 prices. [25196]

Sir George Young: Privatisation proceeds from 1979–80 to 1995–96 are expected to total £82.4 billion in 1995–96 prices.

Forged Currency

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the fact value of forged currency in currency in circulation in the form of (a) notes and (b) coinage. [24715]

Mr Nelson: The Bank of England is not in a position to provide a meaningful estimate of the number of counterfeit notes in circulation. A record is maintained of the number which are received from circulation but the Bank, in common with most note-issuing authorities, does not publish details of the counterfeits it receives. However, despite an increase in counterfeiting over the last few years, counterfeit notes detected still represent only a fraction of 1 per cent. of the total notes in circulation.

The Royal Mint is not in a position to provide an estimate of the number of counterfeit coins in circulation.

Improper Financial Advice (Compensation)

Sir David Steel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will make a statement on the implications for compensation of investors who have been improperly advised by a firm of its takeover by another; [24752]

(2) what plans he has for compensation to be paid to investors who have been wrongly advised by financial advisers before the coming into force of the Financial Services Act 1986. [24731]

Mr. Nelson: Investors who were given advice which breaches the rules of a regulator under the Financial Services Act 1986 once the relevant provisions of the Act came into force and who suffer loss as a result may be entitled to compensation. This compensation comes either from the firm concerned, or from the investors compensation scheme if the firm defaults. In either case, compensation payments are not affected by any takeover.

Compensation for wrong advice given before the Financial Services Act came into force is a private matter between the investor and the firm concerned. The Government do not intend to provide for compensation to be paid in respect of loss suffered as a result of bad advice given before the relevant provision of the Act came into force.

Long-term Investment

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with the Governor of the Bank of England regarding long-term investment in British industry. [25021]

Mr. Nelson: My right hon. and learned Friend and I meet regularly with the Governor to discuss the prospects for inflation and the current state of the economy, including long-term investment in British industry. Recent figures for investment show some very encouraging signs. For example, in the fourth quarter of 1994, manufacturing investment in plant and machinery was over 10 per cent. up on a year earlier.

Retail Prices Index

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide forecasts of the percentage change on the previous financial year for the retail prices index excluding and including mortgage interest payments for 1994–95 and 1995–96. [25198]

Mr. Nelson: The November "Financial Statement and Budget Report" forecast that underlying inflation would be 2¼ per cent. in the second quarter of 1995 and 2½ per cent. both in the fourth quarter of 1995 and in the second quarter of 1996. These forecasts will be updated in the summer economic forecast.

Oil and Gas Revenues

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the cumulative total for Government revenues from oil and gas production from 1979–80 to 1995–96 expressed in 1995–96 prices. [25195]

Sir George Young: Total revenues to the Exchequer from North sea oil and gas production from 1979–80 to 1995–96, at 1995–96 prices, are expected to be £128 billion.

Currency Values

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the tests which he applies in considering whether a currency is overvalued. [25476]

Mr. Nelson: The values of currencies are determined in foreign exchange markets. The Government do not have a target for sterling's exchange rate.

Procurement Strategy

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a statement on the Government's procurement strategy. [25927]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I am today presenting to Parliament a White Paper entitled "Setting New Standards: A Strategy for Government Procurement", Cm 2840. Copies of the White Paper are being placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

With the development of the Government's policies for private finance, market testing, contracting out and internal markets, Departments are doing more of their business than ever before through procurement as against in-house provision. The annual spend is now about £40 billion a year and, in addition, purchasing authorities in the national health service internal market spend more than £20 billion. These policies have brought immense benefits to the country. Their full potential has still to be realised. The more procurement there is, the more important it becomes that Government Departments should make a first-class job of it. The Government owe nothing less to citizens, taxpayers and suppliers. Ten years have passed since the Government's first major statement on procurement strategy, in 1984. That statement, which came to be known as the Government's purchasing initiative, was an excellent beginning but much has happened since then. The Government now need a new strategy to carry it forward for the next 10 years and beyond. "Setting New Standards" provides this strategy. Key points from the strategy include:

A clear objective throughout Government, and at all levels of management, to achieve world-class standards in procurement.

A broader interpretation of procurement to cover all non-pay, non-transfer expenditure.

A continuing emphasis on fair competition, as being the cornerstone of good procurement, coupled with constructive co-operation between customers and suppliers.

Emphasis on integrated procurement processes focused on whole-life costs and benefits, non-short-term lowest price, and on intelligent management of risks.

A step change in professionalism and skill development among officials with procurement responsibilities.

A clear pinning of responsibility on contract managers and project sponsors, supported by multi-disciplinary teams.

An agenda for benchmarking of processes and performance to world standards.

A new statement of good practice designed to promote fair competition, constructive co-operation between customers and suppliers, and world-class suppliers.

The objectives of Government procurement are to achieve best value for taxpayers' money and to increase the competitiveness of their suppliers. The strategy set out in "Setting New Standards" is therefore an essential part of the Government's commitment to improved competitiveness, described in "Competitiveness: Forging Ahead", Cm 2867, which my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade is publishing today.

Civil Service Appointments

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil service appointments were made to administrative assistant and administrative officer posts in his Department and the agencies for which he is accountable in each quarter from September 1993 until April 1995. [21777]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 1 May 1995]: The information for the Treasury and the Chancellor of the Exchequer's four agencies is as follows:

Income Tax

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish estimates of the revenue cost of (i) allowances set against income tax and (ii) reliefs set against income tax for (a) the top 1 per cent. of taxpayers, (b) the top 5 per cent., (c) the top 10 per cent., (d) the top 25 per cent., (e) the top 50 per cent., (f) the top 70 per cent. and (g) all taxpayers. [23348]

Sir George Young [holding answer 9 May 1995]: Estimated full-year revenue costs at 1995–96 income levels are in the table. Separate costings have been produced for allowances and reliefs. The combined cost of both allowances and reliefs would be greater than the sum of the individual figures. Since 1979, income tax rates have been lowered and real incomes have increased by 40 per cent.

	Cost of Allowances and Reliefs
Group of taxpayers	Allowances £ billion	Reliefs £ billion
Top 1 per cent.	0.4	0.7
Top 5 per cent.	2.1	1.9
Top 10 per cent.	4.1	2.9
Top 25 per cent.	8.3	4.6
Top 50 per cent.	15.0	6.5
Top 70 per cent.	20.3	7.3
All taxpayers	27.8	7.7

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the increase in income tax in 1995–96 compared with the 1992–93 indexed regime broken down into the top 1 per cent., top 5 per cent., top 10 per cent., top 50 per cent. and bottom 50 per cent., showing the total increase and the average loss. [23351]

Sir George Young [holding answer 9 May 1995]: Provisional estimates are given in the table. These figures reflect a larger working population and the fact that more people are better off—real incomes have grown by 40 per cent. since 1979—both largely due to economic growth.

Total increase and average increase in 1995–96 compared with 1992–93 indexed regime.

Group of taxpayers	Total increase in income tax £ million	Average increase in income tax £
Top 1 per cent.	190	740
Top 5 per cent.	910	710
Top 10 per cent.	1,540	600
Top 50 per cent.	3,390	260
Bottom 50 per cent.	1,120	90

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update his answer to the hon. Member for Hartlepool (Mr. Mandelson), of 1 July 1993, Official Report, columns 598-600, providing estimates for 1995–96 and 1996–97 of the revenue yield of introducing upper limits for tax allowances and reliefs, and the number of individuals affected. [23522]

Sir George Young [holding answer 9 May 1995]: Since the married couple's allowance and mortgage interest relief are now given at a rate of 15 per cent., the terms of the original question are no longer meaningful.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate, on the same basis as in his answer to the hon. Member for Hartlepool (Mr. Mandelson) of 30 November 1993, Official Report, columns 385-86, (a) the total income, earned and unearned, (b) the total national insurance contributions and (c) the total income tax paid by (i) the top 1 per cent., (ii) the top 5 per cent., (iii) the top 10 per cent., (iv) the bottom 50 per cent. and (v) all taxpayers in 1983–84, 1985–86, 1987–88, 1988–89 and 1995–96. [24370]

Sir George Young [holding answer 16 May 1995]: Final estimates for 1992–93 and provisional estimates for 1993–94 to 1995–96 based on a projection of the 1992–93 survey of personal incomes are given in the table. The estimates of total income relate to income subject to tax and exclude non-taxable income such as certain social security benefits. These figures reflect a larger working population and the fact that more people are better off—real incomes have grown by 40 per cent. since 1979—both largely due to economic growth.

Analyses for the earlier years are not available, but extensive analyses of the distribution of income and income tax are published as follows:

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has of the total gross domestic product for 2000–01. [25676]

Mr. Aitken: For projections of growth in total gross domestic product up to 1999–2000, I refer the hon. Member to the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1995–96", table 3A.2, a copy of which can be found in the House Library.

PA Consulting Group

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidelines he has issued to other Government Departments in relation to the use of PA Consulting Group, pending the outcome of the tax compliance inquiries by the special compliance office of the Inland Revenue; and if he will make a statement. [23869]

Sir George Young [holding answer 15 May 1995]: The tax affairs of this company are, like those of all taxpayers, protected by strict rules of confidentiality.

SCOTLAND

Agricultural Colleges

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the development, funding and future of the Scottish agricultural colleges. [24085]

Sir Hector Monro: The three former Scottish agricultural colleges at Aberdeen, Edinburgh and Auchincruive were merged into a single Scottish Agricultural College in 1990. The administrative and financial relationship between the college and the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department is set out in a memorandum of understanding, which recognises that the board of the college is solely responsible for the conduct of its business. It also places a requirement on the college, in line with the Government's policy, to find an increasing proportion of its funding from sources other than SOAFD, and I have no plans to change the present policy. In 1995–96 the grant in aid from SOAFD to the college will be £19.7 million.

Drug Dealers

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what powers are available to local authorities, housing associations, housing co-operatives and the private rented sector to evict people convicted of drug dealing and drug-related offences; what plans has he to introduce further measures; and if he will make a statement. [24093]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 8 March 1995, Official Report, column 227.

I have no plans to introduce further measures specifically in relation to people convicted of drug dealing and drug-related offences, but I am issuing a consultation paper to local authorities and other bodies seeking their views on the introduction of probationary tenancies to help to deal with anti-social behaviour more generally.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what measures he plans to introduce to support the chief constable and officers of Strathclyde police in their efforts to bring drug dealers, money lenders and professional intimidators to justice; and if he will make a statement; [24133]

(2) what further measures he plans to deal with drug dealing and illegal money lending; what plans he has to introduce any pilot measures in the Paisley area; and if he will make a statement. [24058]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Decisions about tackling drug dealing and illegal money lending and about bringing professional intimidators to justice are operational matters for the police. My right hon. Friend will continue to seek to ensure that the police have adequate resources and equipment to tackle the full range of policing requirements for which they have responsibility.

Braille Ballot Papers

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce Braille ballot papers for local elections in Scotland. [24109]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no plans to do so.

Buses

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce measures to ensure that deregulated bus companies are required to provide local services until at least 10 pm; and if he will make a statement. [24057]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no plans to introduce measures to regulate service provision. It is for bus operators to decide, on the basis of commercial viability, which services will be provided. Local authorities may, however, subsidise routes which they consider are socially necessary, including off-peak and late-night services.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the impact of deregulated bus services in Scotland, particularly in relation to evening and late-night services; and if he will make a statement. [24056]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: An independent study of the effect of privatisation and deregulation on the former Scottish Bus Group companies was commissioned by the Scottish Office from the transport operations research group at Newcastle university. The TORG report was published in 1993 and concluded that deregulation of the bus industry in Scotland has stimulated competition, increased efficiency and made more cost-effective the provision of socially necessary services, including off-peak and late-night services.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest assessment of the impact that the provisions of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1994 will have on the occupation of office buildings in each Scottish region post-1996; what assessment he has made of the effect on property prices in each region; and if he will make a statement. [24061]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend will be issuing shortly for comment a draft property transfer order which will set down broad guidelines for the transfer of property to the new councils. Only when the councils work through that process will it be possible for them to assess the extent of surplus property and possible ramifications for the property market.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of compulsory redundancies during the transition from the current local government structure in Scotland to the new unitary authorities; and if he will make a statement. [24094]

Mr. Kynoch: The Government have not made forecasts about the number of compulsory redundancies arising from the move to single-tier councils. Decisions on management of the local authority work force and new staffing structures will be the responsibility of the new councils, but the Government hope that most, if not all, changes can be managed by means of early retirements, voluntary severance and the retraining of existing employees.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) local authority, (b) Scottish Homes, (c) housing association, (d) housing co-operative, (e) private sector rented and (f) owner-occupied homes, are contained within the boundaries of (i) Renfrew district and (ii) Eastwood district; and how many will be contained within the boundaries of the new unitary authorities of (1) Renfrewshire and (2) East Renfrewshire, based upon current figures. [24095]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The available information is set out in the table:

	Local Authority[1]	Scottish Homes[2]	Housing Associations[3]	Housing Co-operative[3]	Private Rented[4]	Owner Occupied[4]
(i) Renfrew	27,524	4,391	2,262	0	2,088	42,221
(ii) Eastwood	1,602	10	95	0	654	20,475

	Local Authority[1]	Scottish Homes[2]	Housing Associations[3]	Housing Co-operative[3]	Private Rented[4]	Owner Occupied[4]
(1) Renfrewshire	24,410	3,339	2,020	0	1,967	36,920
(2) East Renfrewshire	4,716	1,062	337	0	775	25,776

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest estimate of the number of job losses created by the provisions of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1994; and if he will make a statement. [24098]

Mr. Kynoch: The Government have estimated that the move to single-tier local authorities will result in a reduction in posts in a range between 220 and 1,800. The eventual number of jobs in the unitary councils will, however, depend on decisions taken by them in the light of the services to be provided.

Railway Stations (Disabled Access)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet representatives of ScotRail, Railtrack and Strathclyde regional council to discuss the provision of disabled access to (a) Johnstone High station, (b) Gilmour Street station in Paisley and (c) Milliken Park station in Johnstone; and if he will make a statement. [24121]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no plans to meet representatives of the organisations listed to discuss the specific issue of disabled access to stations in Paisley and Johnstone. I understand however that plans have been advanced to provide disabled access to Gilmour Street station and further improvements at Milliken Park. Johnstone High station already has disabled access facilities.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance he has issued to health boards in Scotland relating to the diagnosis, recognition and treatment of myalgic encephalomyelitis; and if he will make a statement. [24075]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As a matter of principle, the Government do not issue clinical guidance, since that is the responsibility of the medical profession.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will support the campaign to make the people of Scotland more aware of myalgic encephalomyelitis, if he will increase official recognition of the disease; and if he will make a statement. [24099]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We recognise myalgic encephalomyelitis as a potentially debilitating and distressing complex, and would support informed efforts to raise awareness of the condition, which is increasingly being referred to as chronic fatigue syndrome.

We have awarded the ME Association a three-year core grant under the National Health Service (Scotland) Act 1978. One of the association's main aims is to increase public awareness of the condition.

Paisley Pattern Design

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet the chairman of Scottish Enterprise to discuss the potential of the Paisley pattern design in the economic regeneration of Renfrewshire; and if he will make a statement. [24135]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend meets the chairman of Scottish Enterprise regularly to discuss a range of issues.

Local economic initiatives generally fall to be pursued by the local enterprise companies. While my right hon. Friend is aware of the planned initiative by Renfrewshire Enterprise and Renfrew district council to promote for economic development purposes the link between the Paisley pattern design and the town of Paisley, he has no plans at present to discuss these with the chairman of Scottish Enterprise.

Construction Industry

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what policy his Department has put to the working groups on the Latham report as to the desirability of a single exclusive register for public sector work. [24357]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office Environment Department has expressed no policy view to the working groups as to the desirability of an exclusive register. It is participating in the Capita Management Consultancy Ltd. study and will consider the results before reaching conclusions.

Flood Prevention

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will introduce a flood prevention Bill for Scotland. [24067]

Sir Hector Monro: There are no plans to introduce such a Bill. The powers available to local authorities under the Flood Prevention (Scotland) Act 1961 are already sufficient to enable authorities to act in the public interest.

Johnstone

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will visit Johnstone to assess the success of the multi-agency investment in Houston square in the town's main shopping centre; if he will also visit derelict buildings in high street, Johnstone, to assess how this multi-agency approach to investment could be extended; and if he will make a statement. [24071]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has no immediate plans to visit Johnstone. He is aware, however, of the Houston square project in Johnstone which is due to be completed shortly and has been financed by Renfrewshire Enterprise, Renfrew district council and the European Commission. The need for further investment in Johnstone is, in the first instance, a matter for the local agencies concerned.

Law Reform

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will introduce a bill which brings forward further measures to outlaw and punish (a) illegal intimidation and harassing of potential witnesses, (b) illegal possession of shotguns, (c) illicit drugs dealing and (d) illegal money lending. [24131]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no plans to introduce such a Bill.

A combination of Scots common law offences and a wide range of statutory measures ensures that all these activities are already illegal. The maximum penalties available for these common law and statutory offences enable the courts to punish severely those who are convicted of serious offences.

Illegal Money Lending

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, what are the maximum penalties for those convicted of illegal money lending; what plans he has to stiffen the maximum sentences; and if he will make a statement. [24091]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The penalties would depend upon the specific charges brought and proved and whether the case was prosecuted summarily or on indictment. These are matters for my right hon. and learned Friend the Lord Advocate.

Solicitor-General for Scotland

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what parliamentary facilities are available to a Solicitor-General for Scotland who is not a member of either House of Parliament; if a holder of this position in such circumstances benefits from the use of a ministerial car; what is his annual salary; how it relates to ministerial salaries, how it is voted by each House; and if he will make a statement. [24115]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The privileges accorded to the Solicitor-General for Scotland, when not a member of the House of Commons, are as follows:

(a) Access to the Members' Lobby

(b) Admission to a seat under the Gallery

(c) Access to:

(i) The Strangers Dining Room

(ii) The Churchill Room

(iii) The Strangers' Bar;

A holder of this position has the use of a ministerial car shared with the Lord Advocate.

The salary of the Solicitor-General for Scotland with effect from 1 January 1995 is £47,697. It is a ministerial salary which is voted as part of the total expenditure of the Crown Office, Procurator Fiscal Service and Lord Advocate's Department.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the (a) name and (b) period of office of Solicitors-General for Scotland since 1965 who have been members of neither House of Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [24114]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is as follows:

Name	Period for which Solicitor-General not a member of either House
Henry Stephen Wilson	1965–67
Ewan George Francis Stewart	1967–70
David William Robert Brand	1970–72
William Ian Stewart	1972–74
John Herbert McCluskey	1974–76
Peter Lovat Fraser	1987–89
Alan Ferguson Rodger	1989–92
Thomas Cordner Dawson	1992–95
Donald Sage Mackay	1995–

Ombudsman

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how hon. Members and individual members of the public should refer cases involving Scottish Homes and housing associations for consideration by the appropriate ombudsman. [24078]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Details of how hon. Members and individual members of the public refer cases to the parliamentary ombudsman, the local government ombudsman and the housing association ombudsman are set out in information leaflets which give guidance on the procedure to be followed when lodging complaints, including those against Scottish Homes and housing associations. Copies of these leaflets are available in the House of Commons Library.

Windyhill Farm, Elderslie

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current position on the proposal by Scottish Aggregates to turn Windyhill farm, Elderslie into a quarry; and if he will make a statement. [24086]

Mr. Kynoch: The Reporter is presently considering comments received from parties in regard to part 1 of her report containing the summary of evidence and her findings of fact. The revised part 1 will shortly be re-circulated to parties. Thereafter, the Reporter will complete her report with recommendations and submit it to my right hon. Friend. A decision on this application is expected in late summer.

Polling Station Ramps

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest estimate of the amount expended in the 1995 local elections in Scotland on the provision of temporary ramps for access to polling stations; what assessment was made of the comparative cost and cost benefit of providing permanent ramps instead; and if he will make a statement. [24110]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Grants are not made towards the cost of temporary ramps for use at local government elections. However, grants are available towards the cost of temporary ramps to be used at parliamentary and European parliamentary elections. A total of £11,914 has been paid in the last three financial years. Temporary ramps purchased for parliamentary and European parliamentary elections can be made available for local government elections and for other purposes by arrangement with the returning officer. Grants are not available towards the cost of building permanent ramps.

Foxes

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many fox destruction clubs or societies are registered in Scotland; what is the level of assistance they currently receive; what guidelines he issues on how these societies destroy foxes; what guidelines he has issued on the number of foxes to be destroyed; how the fox population is assessed; and if he will make a statement. [24126]

Sir Hector Monro: Grants are paid to 29 societies or clubs throughout Scotland to meet 50 per cent. of the approved cost of carrying out systematic fox control within a clearly defined area of adequate size. Grants amounting to £68,000 were paid in 1994–95. Records are not kept of clubs not in receipt of grant.

Foxes may be killed legally by shooting, snaring or cage trapping followed by humane dispatch. The Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department does not advise on the number of foxes to be destroyed. The fox is not an endangered species and there is no reason to engage in regular surveys.

Scottish Council for Spastics Centre

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will visit the residential centre operated by the Scottish Council for Spastics at Wallace court in Elderslie to assess the value of such initiatives. [24134]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no plans to visit the centre. However, the Government fully recognise the contribution made by the council in meeting the care needs of people with cerebral palsy and other disabled people with similar needs.

Argyll and Clyde Health Board

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many complaints were received by Argyll and Clyde health board in each year since 1980 until the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [24159]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not available for the full period requested. Information about complaints has been collected centrally since January 1993. The number of complaints received by Argyll and Clyde health board for the period 1 January 1993 to 31 March 1994 and the nine months to 31 December 1994 is as follows:

1 January 1993—31 March 1994: 263
1 April 1994—31 December 1994: 75

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which facilities, units and buildings within the area of Argyll and Clyde health board have not been transferred to NHS trusts; which of these are seeking, or are likely to seek, trust status within the next year; and if he will make a statement. [24124]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no remaining facilities which the Argyll and Clyde health board either requires or intends to transfer to NHS trusts in its area.

Play Areas (Safety Surfacing)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidelines he has issued to local authorities to encourage the provision of safety surfacing on play areas; what special financial provision he has made available to local authorities to encourage and enable them to meet this need; and if he will make a statement. [24090]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has not issued any guidelines on the provision of safety surfacing for play areas. However, local authorities should be aware of the new British standard on impact-absorbing playground surfaces which came into effect on 31 August 1989. On the question of special financial provision, there are no plans to target resources in this way. Local authorities have complete freedom to determine their own priorities from within the total resources available to them. It is therefore for individual local authorities to consider whether safety surfacing of play areas is a priority and, if so, to direct the necessary resources towards it.

Dykebar Hospital, Paisley

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last discusses the future of Dykebar hospital, Paisley with representatives of (a) Argyll and Clyde health board and (b) Renfrewshire Healthcare trust; and if he will make a statement. [24106]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Minister of State meets the chairmen of health boards and NHS trusts in Scotland from time to time when he discusses a range of matters.

The future of Dykebar hospital will be considered in the context of Argyll and Clyde health board's community care plan which is still in preparation. Once finished, the plan will be subject to extensive public consultation.

Security Companies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce a licensing scheme for security companies; and if he will make a statement. [24157]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no immediate plans to do so, but he will be considering the position on the publication of the report of the Home Affairs Select Committee inquiry into the private security industry in England and Wales. This report is expected shortly.

NHS Acute Beds

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last discussed with any member or official of the Greater Glasgow health board the acute bed strategy; what changes he suggested; and if he will make a statement. [24040]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right Friend has been kept informed by the health board as its strategy has developed. Public consultation on the acute elements of the board's strategy ended on 30 April; consultation on the maternity services elements is still under way. I expect the health board to submit its proposals formally for my right hon. Friend's consideration once it has considered the response to the consultation exercise.

Mortgage Repossessions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many court actions relating to mortgage repossessions in Paisley were heard in Paisley sheriff court in each year since 1980; and if he will make a statement. [24068]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Comprehensive information is not available in the form requested, but 206 such actions were initiated at Paisley sheriff court in 1994 and decrees in absence were granted in 188 actions at the court during the same 12-month period.

Operation Dragon

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on Operation Dragon in Strathclyde. [24084]

Lord James Douglas Hamiliton: My right hon. Friend fully supports the chief constable of Strathclyde police in mounting of Operation Dragon which is well organised and well resourced. The objective of the operation is to curb the recent outbreak of violent crime and to enable the police to identify and arrest those responsible. A number of arrests have been made and the police have recovered a number of shotguns and ammunition, handguns and replica handguns. The operation is continuing.

Temazepam

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the maximum penalities for those convicted of the illegal dealing in the drug temazepam; what plans he has to stiffen such sentences; and if he will make a statement. [24092]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Offences under Sections 4(3) and 5(3) of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 in relation to the supply of, or intent to supply, class C drugs, including temazepam, carry a maximum penalty of five years' imprisonment and/or a fine of up to £2,500 when tried on indictment.

The maximum fine for these offences was increased from £500 to £2,500 as recently as February of this year, when the relevant section of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 came into effect. There are no present plans to increase further the maximum penalties available to the courts for such offences.

Returning Officers

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the amount paid or payable to each returning officer in Scotland at the 1995 local elections; what out-of-pocket expenses had to be met from these payments; what was the level of payment to each other grade involved in these elections; and if he will make a statement. [24108]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not collected centrally. Returning officers' fees and expenses and other costs relating to the conduct of local government elections are met by the local authority. A total of £5 million was, however, made available exceptionally by the Scottish Office to regional councils to cover the cost of the elections to the shadow councils in April.

Scottish Homes

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current and specific remit of the national housing agency, Scottish Homes. [24116]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Housing (Scotland) Act 1988 established Scottish Homes and gave it a wide range of functions and powers to promote housing in Scotland. Scottish Homes' current aim, which reflects the Government's objective for housing in Scotland and is endorsed by my right hon. Friend, is to ensure the quality of housing and variety of housing options available in Scotland are substantially improved. It has six specific main objectives to achieve this aim. These were set out in Scottish Homes' recently published strategic plan for the period up to 1997–98.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his oral statement of 9 May, Official Report, column 565, if he will break down into its constituent parts the components of his forecast of an 8 per cent. fall in electricity prices in Scotland with particular reference to savings accruing from the ending of the nuclear premium. [24146]

Mr. Kynoch: The premium element in the price which Scottish Nuclear receives for its output from Scottish Power and Hydro-Electric under the nuclear energy agreement began to reduce in 1994–95. It was due to end entirely in 1998–99. The Government have now decided that the remaining element of the premium will not continue until 1998; instead it will be ended at the point of privatising Scottish Nuclear's two advanced gas-cooled reactor stations. It is proposed that changes will be made in the supply price control to ensure that the savings to ScottishPower and Hydro-Electric will be passed through to Scottish franchise customers. The Office of Electricity Regulation has calculated that the removal of the premium between 1994–95 and 1996–97 will result in franchise electricity prices in Scotland reducing by around 8 per cent. in real terms over that period.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what will be the net effect on electricity bills per household in Scotland of the premature abolition of the nuclear premium under the Government's plans to privatise the nuclear industry. [24502]

Mr. Kynoch: The premium element in the price which Scottish Nuclear receives for its output from ScottishPower and Hydro-Electric under the nuclear energy agreement began to reduce in 1994–95. It was due to end entirely in 1998–99. The Government have now decided that the remaining element of the premium will not continue until 1998 but will be ended at the point of privatising Scottish Nuclear's two AGR stations. At that time, changes will be made in the supply price control to ensure that the resultant savings to ScottishPower and Hydro-Electric are passed through to Scottish franchise customers. The Office of Electricity Regulation has calculated that the removal of the premium between 1994–95 and 1996–97 will result in franchise electricity prices in Scotland reducing by around 8 per cent. in real terms over that period, of which around 3 to 4 per cent. will be delivered in 1996–97.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Derek Bentley

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will review the release dates set by his predecessors for papers in the Derek Bentley case to conform fully with subsequent legal rulings on the obligations of the Home Office to disclose information; [24910]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the report submitted to his Department by the investigating officer on behalf of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis regarding inconsistencies in the evidence, including evidence not available to the court or the public, relating to the case of Derek Bentley. [24936]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to his question of 18 May, at columns 363–64.

Probation Services, Mid Glamorgan

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which of the newly formed unitary authorities will have responsibility for the provision of probation services currently provided by officers of Mid Glamorgan county council in (a) the Rhymney Valley, (b) Merthyr, (c) Aberdare and (d) Porth (e) Bridgend. [25050]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Local authorities contribute to the costs of, but do not have responsibility for, the provision of probation services. Such services are provided by probation committees. The Mid Glamorgan probation committee is responsible for the provision of services in its area. On 16 May, our intention to make changes to the Mid Glamorgan probation area was announced, and I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for High Peak (Mr. Hendry) of that date, at columns 189–90.

Probation Service, South Glamorgan

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total grant given by his Department to South Glamorgan probation service this year and each of the last three years in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms. [25602]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Information is given in the table.

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Cash terms	2,642,191	2,785,037	3,038,229	2,018,655
Real terms	2,642,191	2,702,345	2,890,215	2,781,206

The figures are in terms of specific grant cash limits. In addition to the cash terms figure shown for 1995–96, a further £202,486 is added to support probation service partnerships with the independent sector previously funded by the Home Office.

Fine Defaulters

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were imprisoned because of default on fines levied by the courts in the last year for which figures are available, and in each of the previous 20 years. [25318]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this mater has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Alun Michael, dated 22 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many people were imprisoned because of fine default on fines levied by the courts in the last year for which figures are available, and in each of the previous 20 years.

Provisional information shows that 22,400 persons in 1993 and 22,700 persons in 1994 were received into Prison Service establishments in England and Wales for fine default. Information for earlier years is published in "Prison Statistics, England and Wales" (Table 7.1 of the 1992 edition, Cm 2581), an extract of which is attached.

Jewish Burial Ground, London

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he gave approval for the removal of bodies from the Jewish burial ground at Kingsbury road off Balls Pond road, London N1; and what representations he has received about this. [25404]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The Secretary of State's directions with respect to the removal and reinterment of human remains interred in the Jewish burial ground at Kingsbury road, London N1 were given on 13 October 1994, in accordance with the provisions of the Disused Burial Grounds (Amendment) Act 1981. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has since received four letters of representation on the matter. His involvement is limited to ensuring that the removal and reinterment of human remains are carried out with due care and attention to decency. Before any removals can take place, the applicants will be required, under the 1981 Act, to advertise their intentions in the local press, and by notices posted at the burial ground, so that interested parties may have the opportunity to object to the proposals.

Consultancy Costs

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the level of expenditure on consultancy by (i) the Home Office and (ii) agencies for which the Home Office is responsible for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) the projected figure for 1995–96. [25522]

Mr. Howard: Information on the level of expenditure for consultancy contracts let by the Home Office, and agencies for which the Home Office is responsible, during the period specified is not recorded centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those companies in which the holder of his office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past five years. [25715]

Mr. Howard: The Secretary of State for the Home Department is not a major shareholder in any company, nor has he held a majority shareholding in any company which has been wound up in the past five years.

Mr. Richard Linford

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment was made by (a) Essex police and (b) the Prison Service of Mr. Richard Linford's psychiatric condition prior to his imprisonment. [24691]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 22 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what assessment was made by Essex police and the Prison Service of Mr. Richard Linford's psychiatric condition before his imprisonment.

Mr. Linford was remanded in custody by Chelmsford Magistrates Court on 28 November 1994. The Prison Service did not, therefore, have any opportunity to assess his psychiatric condition prior to his reception into its custody. The matter of what assessment was made of Mr. Linford's psychiatric condition by the police prior to his reception or by the Prison Service after his reception into prison will be one of the questions to be examined in the course of the independent inquiry the Prison Service is jointly commissioning with North Essex Health Authority and Essex Social Services into the circumstances surrounding the death of Mr. Christopher Edwards.

Secure Mental Hospitals (Manslaughter Detainees)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 May, Official Report, column 554, what proportion of patients with secure mental hospital orders for manslaughter has been given any kind of leave of absence it the last 10 years. [25157]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not available.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 May, Official Report, column 554, in which secure mental hospitals each of the patients who pleaded guilty to manslaughter was detained. [25134]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on the plea entered by defendants is not available centrally for those sentenced to detention in a secure mental hospital. The following information is based on those restricted patients with a hospital order who were sentenced for manslaughter.

[1] Moss Side and Park Lane merged to become Ashworth in February 1990.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultation is required by his Department before people being detained in secure mental hospitals after conviction for manslaughter with diminished responsibility are released into the community. [23526]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 10 May 1995]: Where such a person is subject to both a hospital and a restriction order, the powers of the responsible medical officer to grant leave to, or discharge, the patient may be exercised only with the consent of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State. Discharge may also be directed by a mental health review tribunal. In considering whether it is safe for a restricted patient to be granted leave or discharged, the Home Office takes account of all relevant information including reports by the responsible medical officer and members of the care team.

Abdelaziz Bouteraa

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assurances his Department has sought regarding the proposed release into the community from Chase Farm hospital of Abdelaziz Bouteraa. [23520]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 10 May 1995]: I am not aware of any current proposal to discharge Mr. Bouteraa from hospital. Mr. Bouteraa has overstayed his permitted leave to remain in the United Kingdom and has been served with a notice of intention to deport him. He has appealed against this decision to the independent appellate authorities. His immigration status will be reviewed in the light of his medical condition and the outcome of appeal proceedings.

Disclosure Demands

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his oral statement of 16 May, Official Report, columns 167-71, if he will list the criminal cases drawn to his attention which had to be abandoned due to unreasonable demands by defence lawyers for disclosure. [25260]

Mr. Howard: Paragraph 15 of the consultation document which I published on 16 May lists examples of cases drawn to my attention which have been abandoned following a court ruling on the disclosure of sensitive material.

Prison Staff

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of prison staff on the accelerated promotion scheme are women. [25150]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mrs. Barbara Roche, dated 22 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of women on the Prison Service Accelerated Promotion Scheme.

There are, at present, 89 members of the Prison Service on the Accelerated Promotion Scheme, 34 of whom are women.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many remand prisoners in England and Wales had been in custody for (a) up to three months, (b) from three to six months, (c) for six to nine months, (d) from nine to 12 months and (e) more than 12 months, on the latest date for which information is available. [24373]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Gerald Bermingham dated, 22 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many remand prisoners in England and Wales had been in custody for (a) up to three months, (b) from three to six months, (c) from six to nine months, (d) from nine to 12 months and (e) more than 12 months, on the latest date for which information is available.

The latest available provisional data for England and Wales is for 31 December 1994 and is shown in the attached table.

Remand prisoners in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales by length of time since first reception[1] on 31 December 1994

Time since first remand	31 December 1994[2]
Less than 3 months	6,660
More than 3 months, up to and including 6 months	2,660
More than six months, up to and including 9 months	940
More than 9 months, up to and including 12 months	840
Over 12 months	320
	11,420

[1] Awaiting trial or sentence. Time since first reception on remand into a Prison Service establishment. This includes any intervening time spent on bail, but excludes time spent in police cells beforehand.

[2] Rounded estimates which therefore may not add to the totals.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the remand population in England and Wales for the latest available date. [24372]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Gerald Bermingham, dated 22 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the remand population in England and Wales for the latest available date.

The latest available figure is for 28 February 1995, when there was a total of 11,970 prisoners on remand in England and Wales, including 124 being held in police cells.

Crack Cocaine

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been cautioned for possession of crack cocaine in each of the last five years. [24011]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Home Office records show that one person was cautioned for possession of crack cocaine in 1990. Three persons were so cautioned in 1991, and 14 persons in 1992. Information for 1993 is not available separately and that for 1994 is not yet available.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police stations have cautioned persons in respect of possession of crack cocaine in 1994. [24013]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information regarding individual police stations is not collected centrally. The only readily available information regarding cautioning for possession of crack cocaine relates to the years 1990 to 1992 and shows that all but two of the 18 cautions administered during that time were given by the Metropolitan police.

Women (Sentences)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the sentenced female population in England and Wales on the latest date available, broken down by type of offence, length of sentence and previous convictions. [24269]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 22 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the sentenced female population in England and Wales on the latest date available, broken down by type of offence, length of sentence and previous convictions.

The latest date for which figures are available is 28 February 1995. Figures for female population on this date by type of offence and length of sentence are contained in the attached tables.

The latest available published information on the previous convictions of females was given in "Prison Statistics England and Wales 1992" Cm 2581, Table 5.2, an extract of which is attached.

Female Prisoners

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional cell and bed space had been made available during the last six months in each female gaol in England and Wales. [24273]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 22 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the additional cell and bed space made available during the last six months in each female prison in England and Wales.

Establishments that have provided additional cell and bed space during the last six months are given in the table below:

Certified Normal Accommodation (CNA) available for use in Female Prison Establishments in England and Wales on 30 November 1994 and 28 April 1995

Establishment	CNA in use 30 November 1994	CNA in use 28 April 1995	Increase

Winchester	0	60	+60
Total	1,948	2,068	+120

Note:
Cell and bed space in all other female establishments has remained unaltered in the last six months.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the female prisoner population in England and Wales on the last day of April in 1994, 1993, 1992 and 1991 broken down by category of offence. [24268]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 22 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the female prisoner population in England and Wales on the last day of April in 1994, 1993, 1992 and 1991 broken down by category of offence.

The available information relates to the sentenced female prison population on 30 June each year. This information was published on 27 April 1995 in a Home Office Statistical Bulletin entitled "The prison population in 1994" (table 6, Issue 8/95), an extract of which is attached.

Transsexual Prisoners

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines relate to the type of prison establishment to which transsexual offenders are committed; and if he will make it his policy to house pre-operative transsexuals in the gaols of their new gender if they have had two or more years of hormone therapy. [23853]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 22 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the guidelines which relate to the type of prison establishment to which transsexual offenders are committed.

The particular difficulties experienced by transsexual prisoners have always been accepted by the Prison Service, which recognises it has a duty of care towards those committed by the courts, while at the same time having to take account of a prisoner's legal gender, as currently determined by a prisoner's birth certificate—a document at present understood in law to be immutable.

It is well understood that where transsexual offenders are concerned, a wide and complex range of physical, presentational, and psychiatric needs exist. For this reason the Prison Service adopts, in practice, a pragmatic approach once a full physical and psychiatric assessment has been made and the help of any specialist psychiatrist already involved in that individual's care before imprisonment has been sought. In virtually all such cases, the initial placement of an offender will correspond to his genetic gender and birth certificate: definitive location will be arranged only after careful, and often necessarily lengthy, assessment.

Following assessment, the principal issues which the Prison Service takes into account when considering allocation are the anticipated reaction of other prisoners and the difficulties likely to be encountered by a transsexual who may be allocated to an establishment which he/she considers to be inappropriate. While it is important that such prisoners should be offered, and avail themselves of, as wide a regime of activities as any other prisoners, in our experience many will request (and manage best) under the protection afforded by Prison Rule 43. A proportion will prefer to remain in the Prison Health Care Centre.

In view of the fact that in many instances gender dysphoria is only one facet of a very complex set of personality difficulties, it would be impractical to seek to prescribe anything other than these general guidelines for the management of transsexuals. By their nature, each particular individual will require a solution specific to himself/herself at that particular time in his/her history.

Temazepam

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are in place to ensure that imports of the drug temazepam are intended for legitimate prescribed use within the United Kingdom; what plans he has to introduce further measures; and if he will make a statement. [24118]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Controls on the licit trade in temazepam are contained in schedule 4 to the Misuse of Drugs Regulations 1985. Imports and exports are not controlled, but records must be kept. The supply of the drug, whatever its source, is subject to authorisation, and records are required to be kept for two years. The possession of the drug in non-medicinal form, which is the form in which most importation takes place, also requires authorisation. It is permissable to import temazepam for further processing and re-export.

The Government are continuing to give careful consideration to the recommendation that temazepam be moved from schedule 4 to schedule 3 to the regulations; this would introduce, among other things, a licensing requirement for imports and exports.

Postal and Proxy Voting

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which newspapers, magazines and periodicals will be used in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland during the period before the next general election to advertise postal and proxy voting; what assessment he has made of the coverage that these have across all parliamentary constituencies in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [24069]

Mr. Howard: In England and Wales, advertising giving details of absent voting procedure will be booked in all national daily and Sunday newspapers and in some ethnic minority language newspapers. A television advertisement will be transmitted in England and Wales, two days in advance of the press advertising to alert the public to the press campaign. Electoral registration officers in England and Wales will be provided with artwork for use in local advertising that they might wish to book.

The Central Office of Information estimates that the national newspaper advertising will be seen by 75 per cent. of the adult population throughout England and Wales.

Advertising in Scotland and Northern Ireland is arranged by the Scottish Office and the Northern Ireland Office.

Anabolic Steroids

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress he has made towards banning the supply of anabolic steroids; and when he intends to introduce legislation. [24136]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs agreed on 11 May which substances to recommend for control, and we hope to bring forward the necessary draft modification order to the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 shortly.

Telephones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what use his department makes of hand-held and car-based mobile telephones; what were the costs for each financial year of those services since mobile telephones were first introduced to his department; and how many mobile telephones are currently in use. [23449]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 9 May 1995]: There are about 1,400 mobile telephones in use in my department, including the executive agencies. Fewer than 50 of these are installed in cars. Mobile telephones are used mainly by operational staff in HM Prison Service and HM immigration service who need to maintain immediate contact with their offices or other officials. Current costs were about £580,000 in 1994–95 and about £495,000 in 1993–94. Figures for capital costs and for previous years are not available.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his department has taken to prevent the cloning of telephones being utilised by his department; and if his department has discussed this matter with any official agencies. [23455]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 9 May 1995]: The cloning of analogue mobile telephones can be detected, but not prevented. Cloning will cease to be a problem as my Department changes from analogue to digital telephones over the next three years. There have been no discussions, other than with the mobile telephone operators.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what cost his department has incurred during the last 12 months as a result of cloning of mobile telephones being utilised by his department, with particular reference to the making of unauthorised calls. [23489]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 9 May 1995]: None. Any such costs have been borne by the mobile telephone operators.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many mobile telephones being utilised by his Department have been cloned during the last 12 months. [23427]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 9 May 1995]: Twelve.

Prisons (Racial Discrimination)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) prison staff and (b) prisoners have been charged with offences under race legislation in each of the last five years; [23086]

(2) how many representations he has received on racial discrimination against prisoners in prison work in each year since the case of Alexander v. Home Office 1987. [23084]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 9 May 1995]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 22 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about race relations in prisons.

There are no records of any representations having been made to Ministers on racial discrimination against prisoners in prison work since the case Alexander v Home Office 1987. However, there have been approximately 55 official complaints made by prisoners to prison staff of racial discrimination on prison work since 1987.

Information on the number of prison staff and prisoners that have been charged with offences under race legislation in the last five years is not recorded centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Christopher Edwards

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement into the killing of Mr. Christopher Edwards by Mr. Richard Linford in Chelmsford prison on 28 November 1994; [24688]

(2) what warnings Chelmsford prison received to the effect that Mr. Richard Linford was potentially dangerous; and on what basis he was placed in a cell with another inmate; [24689]

(3) if he will list those prison service procedures which have been reviewed and changed since the killing of Mr. Christopher Edwards in Chelmsford prison; and if he will make a statement. [24690]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answers 18 May 1995]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 22 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the death of Mr Christopher Edwards in Chelmsford prison on 28 November 1994.

The internal investigation conducted by the Prison Service into the circumstances surrounding the death concluded that existing procedures at Chelmsford prison had been followed satisfactorily. There was no evidence on which to recommend changes in procedures.

In view of the wider issues raised by the case, the Prison Service is jointly commissioning an independent inquiry with North Essex Health Authority and Essex Social Services. All the matters which you raise will be considered in the light of the findings of this independent inquiry.

I will write to you again when the terms of reference have been agreed, with details of members of the inquiry panel.

Prison Proposals

Mr. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate his Department has made of the cost of building and running a super-max prison of the kind the Director General of the Prison Service is currently visiting in the United States of America. [22311]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 3 May 1995]: Although some early work has been done on possible construction costs, specific estimates can be prepared only when we know more clearly the requirement for such prisons, how many prisoners they might hold, their location and likely regime. I shall also want to consider the views of Sir John Learmont, who will report shortly on his wide-ranging inquiry into prison security.

DEFENCE

Meteorological Office

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to privatise the Meteorological Office. [24812]

Mr. Freeman: There are no such plans.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he proposes to meet Professor Julian Hunt, chief executive of the Meteorological Office to discuss the accuracy of weather forecasts. [24814]

Mr. Freeman: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence maintains regular contact with the chief executive of the Meteorological Office.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect of introducing competition for the Meteorological Office on the quality of weather forecasts. [24813]

Mr. Freeman: The Meteorological Office and the private sector have been competing for a number of years for commercial contracts for meteorological services. The competition helps to ensure that the Met Office maintains a very high-quality forecasting service.

Base Closures

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the MOD bases where closures have been announced in the last five years; and in which parliamentary constituency they are located. [25188]

Mr. Soames: My Department does not hold information in the form requested and it could not be provided without disproportionate cost. I would, however, refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) of 3 May, Official Report, columns 234–38. which listed bases sold by my Department since 1990.

Nuclear Emergencies

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total number of departmental staff and members of the armed services available for mobilisation in the event of a nuclear accident emergency as described at pages 39-40 of the Statement on the Defence Estimates, 1995, Cm. 2800; and what level of training is given to departmental staff on nuclear emergency response. [25263]

Mr. Soames: In addition to a small full-time staff in MOD headquarters, the Nuclear Accident Response Organisation could draw on the skills of many hundreds of personnel across the armed forces and the MOD. Their precise number and specialisation would be dependent on the particular circumstances of an accident but it might include medical experts, health physicists, technical/design specialists, radiation monitoring experts, engineering teams and associated logistic and other support staff. In addition to the training given to ensure day-to-day expertise in these functions, appropriate training is also provided to ensure familiarisation with specific procedures relevant to a nuclear accident; the exercises described in the Statement on the Defence Estimates are an essential element in ensuring an effective response organisation.

Auxiliary Oiler Replenishment Vessels

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he is now in a position to announce the agreed final costs for AORO1 and AORO2; and if he will make a statement. [24868]

Mr. Freeman: The total cost to the end of April 1995 to my Department is £154.890 million and £204.701 million, actual prices, for AORO1 and AORO2 respectively. Final costs for both vessels have still to be agreed.

Princess Alexandra Hospital

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the total amount of money spent by his Department on civilians receiving medical treatment at the Princess Alexandra hospital, RAF Wroughton, in each of the last five years. [25598]

Mr. Soames: No separate records are maintained of the costs of treating civilian NHS patients at service hospitals. The element of total running costs at the Princess Alexandra RAF hospital, Wroughton, proportionate to the percentage of patients treated on behalf of the NHS in each of the last five years is as follows:

1990–91: £8,100,000
1991–92: £6,200,000
1992–93: £7,600,000
1993–94: £8,400,000
1994–95: £8,100,000

These figures include fixed costs which would in any case have been incurred in the treatment of service patients. In addition, because of changes in budgetary responsibility and accounting procedures during the period, the costs are not entirely comparable year on year.

Tornado Aircraft

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 49, what was the total cost of the damage done to 28 Tornado aircraft based at RAF Coningsby; who will carry out the repairs to the damaged aircraft; when the investigation into the contamination will be concluded; and if he will make a statement on the conclusions of the investigation when he has received it. [25597]

Mr. Soames: Necessary work to allow the aircraft to resume normal operations was conducted by service personnel immediately after the contamination was discovered. Once full and careful consideration has been given to the investigation I will write to the hon. Member.

Tri-service Hospital, Haslar

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated total cost of accommodation at the proposed tri-service hospital at

Haslar. [25599]

Mr. Soames: Existing single accommodation will be made available for the staff of the Royal hospital, Haslar. Although some refurbishment may be necessary, the cost of this work is as yet unquantified. Estimates for the requirement of additional married quarters, which will be met in the short term by hiring property or payment of excess rent allowance, are not yet available, although these costs will be partially offset by savings at current locations.

Personal Protection Weapons

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the removal of personal protection weapons from soldiers in the Royal Irish Regiment. [25353]

Mr. Soames: There has been no change in our policy on soldiers from the Royal Irish Regiment holding personal protection weapons. The requirement for individual soldiers to retain army-issue weapons is kept under review on a case-by-case basis, and there are no plans to institute a general policy of withdrawing such weapons.

TREASURY

Inflation

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to alter the inflation target. [24876]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Government's aim is to keep underlying inflation in the range 1 to 4 per cent. and to bring it down into the lower half of this range by the end of the present Parliament. I have no plans to change the objective for that period.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, whether it remains his policy to keep RPIX inflation below 2.5 per cent. at the end of the current Parliament. [24552]

Mr. Nelson: The Government's policy is to keep underlying inflation, as measured by the retail prices index excluding mortgage interest payments, in the range 1 to 4 per cent. and to bring it down to the lower half of the range by the end of the present Parliament.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate for 1995–96 the number of individuals whose gross income and capital gains exceed (a) £70,000, (b) £80,000 and (c) £100,000, in each case specifying the number paying capital gains tax. [25011]

Sir George Young: Available information is in terms of taxable income and capital gains. Provisional estimates are given in the table:

Number of individual taxpayers, excluding trusts, 1995–96

Taxable income[1] and gains[2] over:	Total	Paying capital gains tax[3]
£70,000	220,000	19,000
£80,000	170,000	17,000
£100,000	110,000	14,000

[1] Taxable income is defined as gross income for income tax purposes less those allowances and reliefs which are available at the taxpayer's marginal rate.

[2] Taxable gains are chargeable gains net of reliefs and the annual exempt amount.

[3] Figures exclude gains made by companies which are included under corporation tax.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Government intend to publish provisional outturn figures for public expenditure in 1994–95. [25997]

Mr. Aitken: The Government propose to replace the annual Cash Limits Outturn White Paper by a comprehensive outturn document covering not just cash limited expenditure but all expenditure within the control total. The aim is to publish the first document in the new early July, a week or so before the normal publication date for the CLOWP. The document will show provisional outturn for 1994–95 for the control total by Department compared with plans, and for individual votes and voted cash limits, non-voted cash limits, external financing limits, and gross and net running costs limits compared with original and final provision.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update the figures contained in tables 1.2, 1.3, 1.4 and 1.5 of the public expenditure statistical supplement to the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1995–96 to show the outturn for 1994–95 and estimated outturn for 1995–96. [25193]

Mr. Aitken: My answer today to the hon. Member for Southport (Mr. Banks) described the arrangements for publishing provisional outturn data on public expenditure for 1994–95. For 1995–96, following usual practice, forecast outturn figures will be published in the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1996–97 for the control total by Department, and in more detail in the statistical supplement to that report.

Private Nursing Homes

Mr. Hood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer with what frequency the Inland Revenue performs spot checks on the accounting practices of owners of private nursing homes. [25488]

Sir George Young [holding answer 22 May 1995]: All businesses are liable to have their accounts inspected by the Inland Revenue and investigations are carried out where there is reason to believe the accounts may not be correct. Specific figures relating to nursing homes are not compiled.

Banks (Tax Relief)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been granted in tax relief to United Kingdom banks against possible default on third world debts in each of the last 10 years; and what is the rationale for such tax relief. [25373]

Sir George Young: Provisions by banks operating in the United Kingdom for doubtful sovereign debt—mostly of third world countries, but which may include relatively small amounts for other countries—are estimated to have reduced corporation tax receipts in the last nine years by the following amounts:

	£ million
1986–87	70
1987–88	190
1988–89	550
1989–90	490
1990–91	880
1991–92	120
1992–93	120
1993–94	120
1994–95 (provisional)	120

Estimates for earlier years are zero or small.

Third world debt is a feature of banking and losses on sovereign debt represent real losses arising in the normal course of such business. Losses or potential losses on sovereign debt therefore attract relief in broadly the same way as losses or potential losses on trading debts of other businesses.

Exporters

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has asked the Deputy Governor of the Bank of England to substantiate the claim of December 1993 that exporters were profiteering by raising prices excessively instead of increasing sales. [25478]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I regularly discuss a wide range of economic issues with both the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank of England. Export sales have clearly increased since December 1993, growing by 11 per cent. in 1994, the strongest increase in more than 20 years.

VAT on Spectacles

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the state of discussions between British ophthalmic physicians and his Department relating to the overpayment of tax under European directives; and how much his Department estimates is owed by the Customs and Excise to British opticians in overpaid tax. [25343]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Customs and Excise met opticians' representatives on 11 May and discussed the matters arising from the recent High Court decision on the VAT liability of supplies of spectacles. Proposals are awaited from the trade representatives on a number of the issues discussed and these will be considered at a further meeting planned for mid June. It is difficult to estimate the total amount of tax to be refunded to opticians, because the impact of the High Court decision will vary significantly from business to business; Customs estimate that the figure may be of the order of £250 million including statutory interest.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

South Africa

Mr. Caborn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will make a statement on the draft negotiating mandate for a new trade regime between the European Union and South Africa; [25610]

(2) if he will undertake a study into the effect of the proposed free trade area between the European Union and South Africa on the economies of the other member states of the Southern African Customs Union and the Southern African Development Community. [25609]

Mr. Needham: The draft negotiating directives presented by the European Commission propose that the EU should respond positively if the South African Government were willing to negotiate a bilateral free trade agreement. The Government believe that such an agreement offers the greatest potential for delivering improvements in access to the EU market for South African products and promoting our long-term trade relations.

We therefore support the Commission proposal, on the understanding that any free trade agreement negotiated between the EU and South Africa is compatible with World Trade Organisation rules and takes account of South Africa's regional commitments. I believe that this is in line with the recommendation on the future relationship between the EU and South Africa made in the Trade and Industry Select Committee's report on trade with southern Africa published on 27 July 1994. In the process of negotiation, we will urge the European Commission to take into account the possible effects of such an agreement on the economies of South Africa's neighbours and we will also listen carefully to the views of South Africa's partners in the Southern African Customs Union and the Southern African Development Community.

Balance of Trade

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what has been the balance of trade in oil in 1994 prices for each year since 1978; [25191]

(2) what has been the balance of trade in manufactured goods in 1994 prices for each year since 1978. [25190]

Mr. Needham: The information is published for 1994 by the Central Statistical Office in the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics", available in the Library of the House. The information is not available in 1994 prices for other years, although data at 1990 prices is available from the CSO's central shared database, also in the Library of the House.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Trading Standards Services, Cleveland

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the applicability of the views attributed to his Department on pages 42 and 43 of "Renewing Local Government in the English Shires" to the future of trading standards services in Cleveland after the division of those services among four unitary authorities as a result of local government reorganisation. [25215]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Kingswood (Mr. Berry) on 17 May, Official Report, column 283. The same considerations apply in Cleveland as in Berkshire.

Animal Health and Veterinary Group

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now publish the Lebrecht report. [24955]

Mrs. Browning: This report on an internal management review of the functions and organisation of the Ministry's animal health and veterinary group was not written with publication in mind and is not suitable for publication. My right hon. Friend did, however, issue a consultation document last October setting out the basis for his provisional conclusions following the review and took the many comments received into account in reaching the decisions that he announced in a written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Gloucester (Mr. French) on 4 May.

Fisheries

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why Irish vessels currently enjoy fishing rights off Spitzbergen. [25383]

Mr. Jack: For 1995 the European Union has a cod quota of 24,220 tonnes at Spitzbergen and Bear island. In accordance with the traditional allocation key, Council Regulation 3362/94 divides this between the member states as follows:

	Tonnes
France	2,130
Germany	4,820
Portugal	2,390
Spain	11,500
United Kingdom	3,130
Other member states except France, Germany, Portugal, Spain, United Kingdom, Finland and Sweden	250

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what red fish quotas were offered in Iceland waters in 1994 and 1995 to (a) Britain and (b) Germany; which British firms were offered catches there by his Ministry; and whether they took up the offer. [25384]

Mr. Jack: Germany and the United Kingdom were allocated quotas for respectively 1690 tonnes and 1160 tonnes of red fish in Icelandic waters for both 1994 and 1995. The Fish Producers Organisation of Grimsby was offered the UK quota for 1994 but did not take up the opportunity. For 1995 the United Kingdom quota has not yet been allocated; it is not available before 1 July each year.

Regional Service Survey

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the results of the recent survey of satisfaction with the levels of service his Department's regional organisation provides for the farming public. [26098]

Mr. Waldegrave: In accordance with the principles of the citizens charter, a survey of customers of the MAFF regional service centre was carried out by a firm of independent consultants in early 1995. The overall results are very positive and show that nearly nine in 10 customers felt their MAFF centre had done a good, very good or excellent job in dealing with their most recent scheme or licence application. We will be considering carefully what can be done to address those areas where our customers feel that there is scope for improvement in our performance.

I have placed copies of the consultants' report in the Library of the House.

Baby Milk

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultations she has had with community nurses, health visitors, midwives and other professionally involved groups concerning the effect of banning the advertising of baby milk within national health service premises on levels of breast feeding commencement; and if she will make a statement. [25605]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 22 May 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the right hon. Member for Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale (Sir D. Steel) on 14 March 1995, Official Report, columns 550-51.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what information he has on which European Union member states permit the advertising of baby milk (a) in generally available media and (b) health-specific premises on what dates changes in permission for either category of advertising was amended in either direction what subsequent changes occurred in breast feeding commencement levels; and if she will make a statement. [25604]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 22 May 1995]: I have no such information; there is no requirement on member states to supply it to one another.

Spanish Veterinary Inspections

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 24 April, Official Report, column 379, how many vets are employed by the Spanish authorities; how many of these have undertaken spot checks of sheep being imported into Spain; how many spot checks were undertaken by the Spanish authorities in the last year for which figures are available; and what assessment he has made as to the extent to which the welfare of British sheep exported to Spain is adequately provided for. [21851]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 22 May 1995]: The level of spot checking and the resources devoted to it are matters for the Spanish authorities. We maintain contact with them, and understand from them that they are satisfied on the basis of their checks that the animals' welfare is satisfactorily protected.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many inspections of live animals for export were made by Ministry vets at (a) Shoreham and (b) Brightlingsea, since 1 January. [24736]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 May 1995]: Between 1 January and 12 May there were 60 sailings from Shoreham carrying animals for slaughter or for further fattening and 70 from Brightlingsea. Veterinary inspectors were present at the ports for each sailing, when visual checks were made of the animals on board lorries and export paperwork checked. Veterinary inspection of animals for fitness to travel is carried out at point of departure, not at the port.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) calves and (b) sheep arriving at (i) Shoreham and (ii) Plymouth, in the period between 1 November 1994 and 30 April 1995 were (1) dead on arrival, (2) judged to be unfit to travel and (3) destroyed because of injury or disease; and if he will make a statement. [24735]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 16 May 1995]: The figures for the period specified are as follows:

	Number of animals
	Dead on arrival		Unfit to travel		Destroyed
Port	calves	sheep	calves	sheep	calves	sheep
Shoreham	none	1	1	2	none	none
Plymouth	none	none	none	none	none	none

PRIME MINISTER

North-West Kent

Q7. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to visit north-west Kent. [23845]

The Prime Minister: Although I have no current plans to do so, I hope such a visit will be possible in the near future.

Scotland

Q8. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Prime Minister when he next intends to visit Scotland. [23846]

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 23 May 1995. [24304]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 23 May. [24304]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Intelligence and Security Committee

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Prime Minister whether he has yet received a report from the Intelligence and Security Committee on the discharge of its functions under the Intelligence Services Act 1994. [25998]

The Prime Minister: I can confirm that I have recently received an interim report from the Intelligence and Security Committee, setting out the broad pattern of its work to date and outlining some of its future priorities for inquiry. I do not consider that the report contains any matter whose publication would be prejudicial to the continued discharge of the functions of the Secret Intelligence Service, Security Service or Government Communications Headquarters, and I have therefore today placed copies of it, as submitted by the Committee, in the Libraries of both Houses.

Nolan Committee

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will seek to extend the recommendations of the Nolan Committee concerning the conduct of Ministers and officials to include the Governor of the Bank of England and all senior members of his staff. [25379]

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so.

Antanas Gecas

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Prime Minister for what period Antanas Gecas was employed by British intelligence. [25622]

The Prime Minister: It remains the Government's policy not to provide information on the operations at the security and intelligence agencies.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those companies in which the holder of his office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past five years. [25722]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 22 May 1995]: None.

Bank of England

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister if the statement of Government policy set out in paragraph 5 of the Bank of England press release of the text of the Deputy Governor's speech to the City branch of the Institute of Directors on 13 December was authorised by him. [25683]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 29 March 1995 Official Report, column 640.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Recycling

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to introduce recycling programmes as part of the work of the Overseas Development Administration. [24991]

Mr. Baldry: We are ready to consider support to recycling programmes whenever invited to do so by partner countries. We are, for example, discussing recycling as part of current environmental management projects in India and Egypt.

Micro-enterprise Development

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made with regard to the Grameen trust's training programme application for support. [25090]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: We are keen supporters of micro-enterprise development. We have advised the Garmeen trust that the managers of our micro-enterprise projects in recipient countries will seek to identify suitable opportunities for project beneficiaries to use the trust's training facilities.

Bangladesh

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the amount donated by the Overseas Development Administration department for primary health care in Bangladesh, excluding family planning provision, for the last year in which figures are available. [25309]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Our expenditure on primary health care projects in Bangladesh in 1993–94 was £2.55 million.

Aid and Trade Programme

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the total expenditure on the aid and trade programme in each of the last five years; and which British companies have won contracts under this programme. [24884]

Mr. Baldry: The final outturn of expenditure for ATP in 1994–95 is not yet available.

Expenditure for ATP for each of the previous five years was:

Financial year	ATP actual expenditure £ million
1989–90	61.671
1990–91	94.424
1991–92	101.183
1992–93	93.019
1993–94	84.687

For lists of which British companies have won contracts under the ATP in the last five years I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Eccles (Miss Lestor) Official Report, 16 May, column 121, covering 1993–95 and, for the years 1991–1992, to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 23 November 1994 at column 199.

Population Control

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what action the Overseas Development Administration takes to ensure that money donated by Her Majesty's Government for family planning purposes is not used as part of a coercive family planning programme or to free resources in recipient countries for such programmes; [25313]

(2) what legal provisions govern the funding of coercive population programmes overseas; and what plans he has to promote legislation banning such funding. [25316]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Bilateral programmes are designed and monitored to ensure that they promote reproductive choice on an entirely voluntary and informed basis. We ensure that organisations to which we give funds for reproductive health activities operate similar policies and approaches. We do not believe that it is necessary to introduce legislation to ensure that aid funds for reproductive health programmes are used effectively and in accordance with our policies.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Overseas Development Administration's policy on the provision of financial, personal or community incentives to encourage contraceptive use in developing countries. [25312]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: We believe that decisions by couples and individuals about the use of particular methods of contraception should be made on an entirely voluntary and informed basis and that the use of incentives which are likely to prejudice this principle should be discouraged.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the officials from the Overseas Development Administration who sit on any board, committee, or regular meeting of the International Planned Parenthood Federation and the UN Family Planning Association. [25299]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: The British Government have a seat on the executive board of the United Nations development programme, which is also the governing body of the United Nations fund for population activities. Part of each board meeting is devoted to UNFPA business. The United Kingdom is invited to the annual donors meeting of the International Planned Parenthood Federation. In both cases meetings are attended by officials from the Overseas Development Administration's health and population division.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what visits officials from his Department have made to China to assess the Chinese population control programme or the work of the Chinese Family Planning Association or the UN fund for population activities in China; and what reports exist on such visits. [25303]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Officials from the British embassy in Peking have regular meetings with the relevant Chinese authorities to discuss a range of issues, including China's population policies.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to which countries the Overseas Development Administration donates money, directly or via a non-governmental organisation, where overseas aid is tied to acceptance of family planning programmes; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on tying overseas aid to acceptance of family planning programmes. [25311]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: None. We do not support making the provision of overseas aid conditional on the implementation of family planning programmes.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what considerations underlie the policy of donating funds from the Overseas Development Administration budget to the core funds of the International Planned Parenthood Federation and the UN Family Planning Association rather than to specific earmarked projects undertaken by those organisations; [25298]

(2) if he will list those organisations involved in family planning projects to which the Overseas Development Administration makes donations to their core funds, together with the amount donated for the last year for which figures are available. [25306]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: The United Nations Population Fund and the International Planned Parenthood Federation have the capacity to allocate and spend their resources in an effective manner. Together with other Governments we set policy for UNFPA and provide guidance for IPPF on the use of resources. Her Majesty's Government representatives seek to ensure that funds are used in ways which are fully in line with British aid policy and priority objectives. On this basis, we and other Governments provide the large majority of funds without earmarking. The efficiency and effectiveness of both organisations would be impeded if the United Kingdom and other donors earmarked their contributions for specific activities.

In 1994 we gave £7.5 million to the general funds of IPPF and £8.5 million to those of UNFPA.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will place in the Library all reports submitted to the Overseas Development Administration since 1989 by the International Planned Parenthood Federation on population policies in China. [25317]

(2) what written statements by the International Planned Parenthood Federation, the UN Family Planning Association or the Chinese Family Planning Association condemning or disassociating themselves from any instance of coercive population control in China are held on the files of his Department; and if he will list in each case the instance condemned and the date of the document. [25301]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: The latest annual report from the International Planned Parenthood Federation covering its worldwide operations, together with a sample of statements, by both the United Nations Population Fund and the IPPF, opposing coercion, have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on links between the International Planned Parenthood Federation and the British eugenics movement and the Gaton Institute. [25300]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: We understand from the International Planned Parenthood Federation that some individual members at its founding in 1952 may have had links with the eugenics movement. However, eugenics views have never influenced IPPF's policies or programmes. IPPF makes it an unequivocal condition for membership that each autonomous family planning association commits itself to fight all discrimination and coercion based on social or economic status, gender, race, colour, creed or political beliefs.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what definition the Overseas Development Administration uses of what constitutes coercive population control; and in which countries such practices have been identified. [25307]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Population activities would be considered coercive if they sought to infringe the basic right of couples and individuals to decide freely and responsibly the number and spacing of their children. Population programmes funded by the Overseas Development Administration safeguard and promote this right and facilitate the exercise of such a right by individuals. The Overseas Development Administration does not hold authoritative information on instances of coercion in overseas countries.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the numbers of volunteers provided by the Chinese Family Planning Association to assist in family planning initiatives in China; what assessment he had made of the level of independence of the Chinese Family Planning Association from the central Chinese Government; what information he has on the role played by the Chinese Family Planning Association in recent Chinese "population high tides"; what information he has on the liaison between the Chinese Family Planning Association and the International Planned Parenthood Federation; and what documentation the Overseas Development Administration has received arising from such liaison. [25310]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: The China Family Planning Association is a member of the International Planned Parenthood Federation. We understand that there are some 75 million volunteers in CFPA, including many doctors and nurses, who assist with counselling and providing information on family planning. The CFPA does not provide clinical services.

The CFPA is a non-profit, non-governmental organisation, governed by a board of volunteers drawn from all sections of national society. The CFPA has been appointed by the Chinese Government to monitor the national family planning programme and help to ensure that coercion does not take place in the programme. The IPPF provides information on the activities of CFPA as and when required.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessments his Department has made for the unmet need for family planning overseas; and on what assumptions such assessments are made. [25308]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: We use estimates of unmet demand for family planning prepared by the United Nations Population Fund and other organisations with expertise in this area. Such estimates are based on demographic and health survey data collected from individual countries. These surveys collect information about couples using family planning and about couples who do not, but who express a desire to limit their family size. Where necessary, we also undertake our own small-scale studies to assess specific reproductive health needs.

Child Mortality Rates

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what additional bilateral aid will be provided to meet the goals set at the 1990 world summit for children, to reduce (a) infant mortality rates and (b) under-five mortality rates, by one third by 2000. [25089]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: We are increasing our support for reproductive health programmes, which will enable children and women to enjoy better health through improved child spacing, safer childbirth, and improved access to other essential health care. We expect to commit, over the years 1994 and 1995, at least £100 million for these purposes and in support of other reproductive health goals.

HEALTH

Nursing Services

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the change in episodes in (a) health visiting, (b) community nursing services, (c) district nursing, (d) community mental handicap nursing and (e) occupational therapy between 1988–89 and 1992–93. [21743]

Mr. Sackville: The information available is set out in the table.

New episodes of care

	1988–89 (000's)	1992–93 (000's)
Community psychiatric nursing	229.7	303.4
Community mental handicap nursing	21.2	20.5
District nursing	2,383.2	2,152.5
Occupational therapy[1]	774.1	879.4

[1] Figures for occupational therapy are provisional.

New episodes of care have increased by 32.1 per cent. in community psychiatric nursing and by 13.6 per cent. in occupational therapy. Numbers of new episodes in community mental handicap nursing have remained virtually constant over the period 1988–89 to 1992–93.

The number of new episodes has reduced by 9.7 per cent. in district nursing. This may reflect the increasingly complex treatment they provide, requiring a longer time to be spent with each patient, and also their role as team leaders. Simpler treatments often administered by district nurses in the past may now increasingly be provided by other members of the care team or through self-medication by patients, enabling district nurses to devote more time to individual patients who require their specialist skills.

Information on episodes of care for health visitors is not held centrally.

Surgeons (Suspension)

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many surgeons suspended on full pay by NHS hospital trusts have later been (a) dismissed and (b) reinstated; and how many cases await a decision on the surgeon's future; [24729]

(2) how many surgeons have been suspended on full pay because of concern about their professional competence by NHS hospital trusts since their inception; [24728]

(3) what discussions she has had with the General Medical Council on the employment of suspended surgeons in hospitals, other than those in respect of which they were suspended; and what further discussions she plans to have; [24726]

(4) what advice her Department gives to NHS hospital trusts about the employment of surgeons who have been suspended by other NHS hospital trusts. [24727]

Mr. Malone: The General Medical Council, an independent statutory body, is responsible for protecting the public by regulating the medical profession. Its professional conduct committee may attach conditions to a doctor's registration, or suspend or remove a doctor from the register, if the doctor is found guilty of serious professional misconduct. The committee may immediately suspend a doctor, notwithstanding that he may appeal. In exceptional circumstances, interim suspension for two months may be imposed pending a hearing by the professional conduct committee. A doctor whose name is suspended or erased cannot practise in the national health service.

The GMC's powers are being widened. We have introduced the Medical (Professional Performance) Bill this Session, based on proposals by the GMC, to allow it to take action in cases of seriously deficient professional performance by doctors. This action may include suspension of registration. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will meet the new president of the GMC, when he is elected, to discuss these and other matters.

A doctor suspended by a NHS trust needs the trust's permission to work elsewhere. We would expect the trust to consider carefully the circumstances in which the doctor was suspended before agreeing to any other employment. Working without permission is a breach of contract. All NHS trusts should obtain references from previous employers as part of their duty to ensure that the competence and integrity of a doctor is not in doubt.

A decision to disqualify a general practitioner is made by the NHS tribunal. We have supported the Bill introduced this Session by the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Austin-Walker)—the NHS (Amendment) Bill—which will enable the tribunal to protect patients by suspending a GP before a full hearing takes place.

Guidance on doctors' registration and employment was issued in EL(92)84, copies of which are available in the Library. Figures on the number of suspensions by NHS trusts are not available centrally.

London Health Services Report

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response she has made to the report on London health services prepared by the Greater London Association of Community Health Councils for London Members of Parliament, dated 10 May, a copy of which has been sent to her. [24739]

Mr. Malone: No formal response has been made. However, the report on admissions times which monitors the progress of hospitals towards the new patients charter standard, launched in January 1995 is welcomed. From April 1995, all patients should be given a bed within three to four hours. The community health council figures show that progress has been made and it is encouraging to note the relatively small numbers outside the target last year before management attention was focused on this important issue.

Northern Birmingham Mental Health Trust

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when a negotiating body was formed by Northern Birmingham Mental Health trust to deal with pay and other trade union related matters. [24777]

Mr. Malone: This is a matter for the trust. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman, Mrs. Judith Mackay, for details.

Hepatitis C

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) letters and (b) other representations she has received in the current year concerning the need to compensate those people who are infected by the hepatitis C virus from contaminated blood; and if she will make a statement. [24946]

Mr. Sackville: Representations about payments include four parliamentary questions, a short debate in the House of Lords and three early-day motions. In addition, Ministers have received 196 letters.

Bull Bars

Sir Nicholas Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many admissions to hospital in (a) the London area and (b) nationally have to a significant extent been due to accidents involving bull bars on road vehicles in the latest available year. [25262]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Abortions

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many abortions involving admission and discharge the same day were performed on women resident in each district health authority and in each regional health authority in England and Wales in 1993; and how many of these operations were performed in NHS hospitals. [25047]

Mr. Sackville: This information will be placed in the Library.

Medical and Dental Education

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are to introduce the model of the Scottish Council for Postgraduate Medical and Dental Education for the delivery of postgraduate medical and dental education in England; and if she will make a statement. [25048]

Mr. Malone: None. The national health service executive is considering the future arrangements for postgraduate medical and dental education in England and a document entitled "Options for the Future Management of Postgraduate Medical and Dental Education" was issued for consultation on 27 March 1995, copies of which are available in the Library. Responses to the document are being considered.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the NHS has to support medical undergraduates' education. [26202]

Mr. Malone: I have placed in the Library a copy of the report, "SIFT into the Future", from an advisory group on future arrangements for the service increment for teaching—SIFT—chaired by Dr. Graham Winyard, health care director of the national health service executive.

I welcome the direction of change proposed by the advisory group. The report recommends development in the way we meet the additional NHS costs to hospitals, community trusts and general practitioners associated with teaching medical undergraduates. Payments will be based progressively on the demonstrated costs of clinical placements and of facilities to support teaching, within a sound framework of responsibilities, relationships and accountability. The report has been welcomed by the steering group on undergraduate medical and dental education and research.

I am sending copies of the report to health authorities, family health services authorities, trusts, universities and other interested bodies, seeking views on the detailed recommendations and on plans for implementation.

Comments are also sought on separate proposals for changes in the service increment for teaching dental students, which follow from the recommendations of the dental hospital subgroup of SGUMDER. I have placed in the Library a copy of the consultation paper about the proposals for change.

Subject to consultation and to detailed development work, changes will take effect from 1 April 1996.

London Initiative Zone, Newham

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 16 May, Official Report, column 166 how much of the amount allocated has been spent in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96 on each scheme funded through the LIZ initiative in Newham listed in her answer. [25214]

Mr. Malone: The information is shown in the table:

	Capital spend £
	1993–94	1994–95
Newham
Essex Lodge (primary care centre)	22,373	40,439
Shrewsbury Road	217,000	432,000
Improvement grants to GP premises	283,472	97,373
Star Lane (primary care centre)	470,128	130,533
Stratford Corridor (primary care centre)	304,132	188
Cyprus Dock (resource centre)	192,000	138,495

Notes:

1. Figures for 1995–96 schemes are not yet available.
2. Some 1994–95 projects have been carried over into the 1995–96 financial year. These are 533 Barking road, 1 Kennard street, Newham GP Forum and security improvements to GP surgeries.

Thalidomide Trust

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures she has considered in response to the 1994 report of the Thalidomide Trust National Advisory Council, with particular reference to the actuarial projections on the life of the trust. [24972]

Mr. Sackville: The Government have not been asked to respond to this report. Representations have, however, been made by Thalidomide disabled people that the moneys held by the Thalidomide Trust are insufficient to meet their needs, and the Government have brought these concerns to the attention of the trust. The Government welcome the further financial help promised by Guinness plc to secure the future of the Thalidomide Trust and underpin the beneficiaries' needs, but have made it clear that adequacy of the settlement with Distillers—now Guinness—is not a matter in which the Government can intervene.

Dental Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number and percentage of the population (a) across the United Kingdom, (b) in the north-west and (c) in Lancashire which have dental treatment outside the NHS for each year since 1979. [25152]

Mr. Malone: Information about the number and percentage of the population who have dental treatment outside the national health service is not available centrally.

New Hospitals, London

Mr Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the number of new hospitals which have opened in central London in the last 10 years, together with their numbers of beds. [25136]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to contact Sir William Staveley and Mr. William Wells, chairmen of North Thames and South Thames regional health authorities respectively, for details.

Contraception

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost of (a) the registered morning-after pill and (b) the equivalent oral contraceptive; and if she will make a statement. [25046]

Mr. Sackville: Schering PC4 is the only product marketed in the United Kingdom for use as a morning-after pill. The cost of a pack of four tablets is £1.40. Oral contraceptives range in price from 37p to £2.77 per cycle, but none is licensed for post-coital use.

Glaucoma

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps her Department is taking to inform (a) people of Afro-Caribbean origin, (b) diabetics and (c) individuals aged over 40 years with a family history of glaucoma of the increased risks that they face of developing glaucoma; [25029]

(2) what steps her Department is taking to inform blood relatives of glaucoma sufferers of the availability of free glaucoma checks after they reach the age of 40 years. [25030]

Mr. Sackville: All close relatives aged 40 and over—parents, brothers and sisters, and children—of diagnosed glaucoma sufferers are entitled to free national health service sight tests. All optometrists are required to display in their practices a notice advising of the services available under the general ophthalmic services. Information about glaucoma, and the groups most at risk from it, is also available from the International Glaucoma Association. It would not be appropriate to disclose information about a person's health to third parties.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statistical evidence she has on whether improvements in the early detection of glaucoma have occurred in the last five years. [25031]

Mr. Sackville: There is no centrally collected statistical data on prevalence of glaucoma.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to ensure that uneven standards in testing for glaucoma are minimised. [25032]

Mr. Sackville: Screening for diseases of the eye, of which glaucoma is one, is part of the routine sight test procedure carried out by optometrists and ophthalmic medical practitioners. We have no evidence which would lead us to believe that standards of sight testing are uneven.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration her Department has given to widening the availability of free eye tests to all groups that face a significantly higher than average risk of developing glaucoma. [25036]

Mr. Malone: Close relatives—parents, children, brothers and sisters—aged 40 or over of diagnosed glaucoma sufferers are already eligible for free sight tests.We have no plans to alter these categories.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Serious Fraud Office

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General how much was paid to leading counsel for the Serious Fraud Office in the prosecution against Roger Levitt; and how much was paid to the counsel team prosecuting in the Barlow Clowes case. [25780]

The Attorney-General: Leading counsel for the prosecution in the Roger Levitt case acted for the Serious Fraud Office from January 1991 to December 1993 and was paid a total of £137,405 in fees.

Over the period 1988 to 1993, covering preparation, trial, and appeal, a total of nine counsel were instructed at different times as part of the prosecution team in the Barlow Clowes case. Five of those nine either were Queen's Counsel or were appointed queen's counsel during the course of the case. The total paid to the team in fees was £1,109,261.80.

The information referred to above is based on payments made inclusive of value added tax.

ENVIRONMENT

Industrial Waste

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what new steps he is taking to maximise the recycling of industrial waste materials; [24987]

(2) what plans he has to encourage the minimisation of industrial waste. [24989]

Mr. Atkins: The "Waste Strategy for England and Wales", a consultation draft published in January 1995, sets out the steps the Government are taking to minimise the production of and maximise the recycling of industrial waste materials. A copy is in the Library.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of industrial waste is recycled. [24988]

Mr. Atkins: The "Waste Strategy for England and Wales", a consultation draft published in January 1995, includes an estimate that approximately 18 per cent. of industrial waste in the UK is recycled or re-used—table 1.2, page 6. A copy is in the Library.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next expects to meet representatives from local authorities to discuss waste minimisation and recycling issues. [24990]

Mr. Atkins: Representatives from local authorities have regular meetings with the Department to discuss a wide range of waste related issues, including proposals set out in the draft "Waste Strategy for England and Wales".

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the additional administrative staff who will be required by the four unitary authorities created as a result of local government reorganisation in Cleveland. [25219]

Mr. Curry: Staffing structures are a matter for the newly elected councils.

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer about both the transitional and continuing administrative costs of the reorganisation in Cleveland; and what was the outcome of those consultations. [25218]

Mr. Curry: Government decisions are collective. The Cleveland (Structural Change) Order 1995, which implements reorganisation in Cleveland, was made on 30 January.

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the views he has received from the business community in the Teesside area, prior to and since the decision to divide the Teesside conurbation among three unitary authorities. [25224]

Mr. Curry: Following publication of the Local Government Commission's final recommendations for Cleveland, we received representations from the local business community both in support of and opposing the commission's proposals. We took these into account, together with other representations, when we decided to put the Cleveland (Structural Change) Order 1995 before the House.

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment at what stage is Teesside airport's bid to gain the funding from the ERDF; and what guidelines he proposes to issue in respect of future bids by airports for funds from the ERDF. [24979]

Sir Paul Beresford: The application from Teesside airport for ERDF grant is being considered alongside other bids which have been submitted under the north-east objective 2 structural funds programme for funding. There are no proposals to issue guidelines in respect of future bids by airports for funds from ERDF.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has made to the European Commission to reconsider the priority that airports have within the European regional development fund. [24976]

Sir Paul Beresford: None.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what (a) European and (b) national alternatives there are for bidders who fail to gain funds for capital projects from the European regional development fund through overbidding. [24978]

Sir Paul Beresford: Competitive bidding for resources available under the structural funds programme plays a major part in ensuring good value for money. Bids for European regional development fund grants have generally exceeded the resources available under current programmes. This has helped to ensure that grant has been made only to those projects which best met the aims and objectives of each programme. Bids which fail to gain ERDF funding may be eligible to receive resources available under other European or national programmes. However, this will depend very much on the activity concerned and whether this is eligible for support under a particular programme.

Staff

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many posts were lost in (a) the Department of the Environment and (b) agencies for which the Department of the Environment is responsible, listing the total lost posts agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and how many posts are proposed to be lost in 1995–96. [25076]

Sir Paul Beresford: The numbers of staff employed by my Department and each of its executive agencies in 1993–94 and 1994–95, and plans for 1995–96, are published in my Department's annual report, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. This shows the reduction of posts between years.

Pollution

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by volume, and rivers affected, the annual discharges from abandoned mines and tips in the Yorkshire National Rivers Authority area. [24909]

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 22 May 1995]: The information requested, so far as it is available, has been provided by the National Rivers Authority and is as follows:

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many court actions were taken in each of the last three years by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution; what were the gross and net legal costs of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution in each of the past three years; how many of the court actions taken by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution in each of the last three years resulted in prosecution and fines; and what were the total fines imposed by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution in respect of pollution incidents in each of the past three years. [25778]

Mr. Atkins: The tables give details of the court actions taken by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution in each of the financial years 1992–93, 1993–94 and 1994–95. Fines imposed by the courts and details of costs are also included. All this information is available in HMIP's annual reports, the latest one of which, for the year 1994–95, is due for publication on 21 July. When considering what level of enforcement action to take, HMIP considers not only the environmental consequences and operator culpability, but whether it will be sufficient to ensure that remedial action to prevent a recurrence is carried out. Prosecution is not the only solution in every case, as HMIP endeavours to make the level of enforcement action proportionate to the offence. Enforcement may take the form of a letter of admonishment, an enforcement notice, a prohibition notice, prosecution or even revocation of the authorisation.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many court actions were taken in each of the last three years in total and in each authority area by the waste regulation authorities; what was the gross and net costs to each waste regulation authority and in total of legal action taken in each of the past three years; what were the total fines imposed by each waste regulation authority and in total in respect of pollution incidents in each of the past three years; and how many of the court actions taken by waste regulation authorities in each of the past three years resulted in a prosecution and fine. [25779]

Mr. Atkins: The information requested is not held centrally. Information on the number and description of prosecutions brought by waste regulation authorities under part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 must be included in the annual reports authorities are required to publish under section 67 of the Act. Authorities are required to publish their reports within six months of the end of each financial year and the first such reports will be those for the financial year 1994–95.

Contracting Out

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what work has been contracted out (a) by his Department and (b) by agencies for which his Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) projected for 1995–96; [25524]

(2) for each piece of work subject to a bidding process under the auspices of (a) the Department of the Environment and (b) agencies for which the Department is responsible where work was contracted out who were the successful bidders; and which contracts were won by in-house bidders in (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) projected for 1995–96. [25526]

Sir Paul Beresford: Under the competing for quality programme, results during the 1 October 1993 to 30 September 1994 market testing year are:

Contaminated Land

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he has made in regard to the allocation of capital resources for local authorities to tackle contaminated land in 1995–96. [26101]

Mr. Atkins: The Department of the Environment has today written to 49 local authorities and waste disposal authorities informing them of the Secretary of State's intention to issue supplementary credit approvals for 1995–96 totalling nearly £8 million in respect of capital expenditure on 109 new projects to investigate or carry our remedial work to contaminated land.

The Department has already written to 40 authorities about making SCAs totalling £6.7 million available this year in respect of 127 on-going projects from previous years.

Between 1990–91 and 1993–94 SCAs worth nearly £40 million were issued to enable work to be undertaken on over 800 contaminated sites. A figure for SCAs spent for 1994–95 is not yet available as authorities are in the process of submitting final returns for that financial year.

The SCA programme for contaminated land is aimed at tackling problems on sites in local authority ownership or where they have responsibility to take action and cannot recover their costs. The Department operates an assessment and prioritisation procedures to ensure that the available funding goes to projects representing the greatest threat to health or the environment.

Local Government Commission

Mr. Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what decisions he has reached on the Local Government Commission's final recommendations on electoral, boundary and other non-structural matters. [26203]

Mr. Curry: The Local Government Commission made a number of recommendations on boundary and electoral matters in its final reports on the future of local government in the shire countries of England. My right hon. Friend has now reached decisions on these recommendations.

Among other factors, he has had regard to the possible interaction between these recommendations and the programme of fresh structure reviews of individual districts which he announced on 2 March. Where the commission has recommended further reviews of boundaries or electoral arrangements he has considered the implications for the commission's programme of periodic electoral reviews and other work. In each case he has considered the commission's reports and the representations he has received, and is satisfied that these decisions will best reflect the identities and interests of local communities and will best secure effective and convenient local government.

My right hon. Friend accepts the recommendations made for a boundary change in Gloucestershire between the parishes of West Dean and Coleford in the district of the Forest of Dean, and the consequential changes to parish, district and county electoral arrangements. He also accepts the recommended change in boundary between Colchester borough and Tendering district in the Wivenhoe area of Essex, the recommended re-warding of East Hertfordshire district and the recommended re-warding of Newbury district in Berkshire.

Basildon, Thurrock and Peterborough will be subject to fresh district reviews. My right hon. Friend has already announced that the recommended boundary changes around Basildon which would transfer Wickford to Rochford and Billericay to Brentwood will not be acted upon pending the fresh reviews. It follows that he should defer a decision on the recommended changes in electoral representation in Wickford, Billericay, Basildon and the county, which are based on this boundary change. He considers that a decision on the electoral change recommended for Thurrock—an extra two councillors—should also await the fresh review. Similarly, in Peterborough, a decision on the recommended boundary change which would transfer the southern township area from Huntingdonshire to Peterborough will be made in the light of the outcome of the fresh review of Peterborough. He also expects the commission to look again at the re-warding of Peterborough as part of that review.

In a number of cases the commission suggested it be directed to undertake further reviews. My right hon. Friend will be considering the case for undertaking a review of Cambridge City's boundaries in due course. As he has already announced, he will consider asking the commission to look again at the proposed boundary change around Southend airport. On electoral matters, the commission recommended an early review of electoral arrangements at district and county level in those areas of Essex affected by structural change, the six districts in Berkshire which will gain unitary status and the Suffolk Coastal district. He accepts the case for each of these, and will be discussing with the commission how they may be given priority in its programme of work.

Decisions in principle on all the commission's structural recommendations have now been announced. Decisions on the remaining planning recommendations were announced on 11 April, and an announcement on the parishing recommendations will be made very shortly. Other matters, such as recommendations for police and fire service arrangements, flow directly from the structural decisions, and will be set out in draft orders for structural change which are the subject of consultation. Similarly, ceremonial matters will be covered in general regulations and in structural change orders which are subject to public consultation.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Official Gifts

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those gifts received by Ministers in their official capacities and reported to the Permanent Secretary in each of the last five years. [23783]

Mr. Goodlad: The details of gifts received by Ministers are not made public. Their retention or disposal is dealt with in accordance with "Questions of Procedure for Ministers".

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he will take to support the international action plan and fund proposed by Norway to address (a) safety at nuclear installations, (b) the sound management of nuclear waste and (c) problems associated with the dumping of nuclear waste and arms-related environmental hazards in the Kola peninsula. [25182]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We share Norway's concerns about nuclear safety and radioactive waste management problems in Russia. The majority of international assistance in this area is currently focused on improving the safety of nuclear reactors. Our main contributions to these efforts are channelled through the European Union's PHARE and TACIS programmes, as well as the G7 multilateral programme of action. As projects in these nuclear safety related programmes begin to bear fruit, increasing emphasis is likely to be placed on the specific problem of radioactive waste management.

Immigration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance is being offered to Mrs. Abida Noreen and her daughter, Muneeza Khan (Ref: Imm/C8970) by the United Kingdom post in Islamabad to return as residents of the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [25699]

Mr. Baldry: I have asked the high commission at Islamabad for details and will arrange for the hon. Member to receive a substantive reply from the migration and visa correspondence unit as soon as possible.

Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the main constitutional issues on the Government's agenda for the 1996 inter-governmental conference. [25776]

Mr. David Davis: We shall not make proposals at the 1996 intergovernmental conference which would involve significant constitutional change. We will also, as my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister said on 23 May, block any attempt to extend Community competence into intergovernmental areas such as foreign affairs, defence and home affairs.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Police Order

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether comments on the draft proposals to change the Police (Northern Ireland) Order will be placed in the Library at the conclusion of the period of consultation on 6 June. [24322]

Sir John Wheeler: No substantive comments on the draft order have yet been received. I will, however, keep the suggestion under review, bearing in mind that some comments may be offered on a confidential basis.

Housing Benefit

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to introduce into Northern Ireland proposals in relation to the capping of housing benefit similar to those made for England and Wales. [24749]

Sir John Wheeler: The implications for Northern Ireland of the proposals for amending the housing benefit scheme in Great Britain are currently being considered. Account will be taken of the different arrangements in Northern Ireland for administering the housing benefit scheme.

Health Service Contracts

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on all contracts placed by (a) each health board and (b) each health trust with Grafton Recruitment. [24505]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 17 May 1995]: There are currently 52 nursing agencies licensed by the Department, of which two have been issued in respect of Grafton Recruitment. Information on contracts placed by the health and personal social services with these agencies is not held centrally, but by individual health and social services boards and trusts.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those companies in which the holder of his office is the majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past five years. [25711]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 May 1995]: None in either category.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Advisory Committee on Business Appointments

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many civil servants applied to the advisory committee on business appointments for approval for a job offer in the private sector in each of the last five years; and in how many cases the application was refused. [25016]

Mr. Horam: The information requested, including information on members of the diplomatic service, is set out in the table. Separate applications must be submitted for each appointment or consultancy commission an individual wishes to accept. Under the business appointment rules applications cannot be rejected outright, but approval may be made subject to behavioural conditions or to waiting periods of up to a maximum of two years.

Number of applications (number of applicants)

Financial year	Unconditionally approved	Conditionally approved	Total
1990–91	12	9	21 (16)
1991–92	17	14	31 (21)

1993–94	8	15	23 (13)
1994–95	13	17	30 (16)

Note:

The figures in brackets refer to the number of individuals who applied; all other figures refer to the number of applications received.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list by name and profession the members of the advisory committee on business appointments. [25017]

Mr. Horam: The members of the Prime Minister's advisory committee on business appointments are:

The right hon. the Lord Carlisle of Bucklow QC—Chairman
The Lord Bridges GCMG—Deputy Chairman
Sir John Blelloch KCB
Sir Denys Henderson
Sir Charles Huxtable KCB CBE
Sir Robin Ibbs KBE
The right hon. Peter Shore MP
The right hon. the Lord Thomson of Monifieth KT

Lord Carlisle, Lord Thomson and Mr. Peter Shore are senior parliamentarians and former Ministers. Lord Bridges is a retired diplomat; Sir John Blelloch is a retired senior civil servant; Sir Charles Huxtable is a retired senior army officer; Sir Robin Ibbs is chairman of Lloyds Bank plc; and Sir Denys Henderson is chairman of the Rank Organisation.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list by Government Department the number of civil servants who have applied to the advisory committee on business appointments for approval to take a job in the private sector in each of the last five years. [25018]

Mr. Horam: The number of civil servants, including members of the diplomatic service, who have applied to the advisory committee for approval to take a job in the private sector in each of the last five financial years is set out in the table:

EDUCATION

Dance and Drama

9. Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she has met the Secretary of State for National Heritage to discuss the future of dance and drama training. [23818]

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. Friend has done so.

Higher Education Review

14. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what are the aims of her departmental review of higher education. [23824]

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. Friend is reviewing the aims and purposes of higher education with a view to determining its appropriate shape and size at the end of the century and beyond.

Mathematics and Engineering

15. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to letters to the hon. Member for Linlithgow from the Minister of State, what proposals Her Majesty's Government have for relating mathematics teaching in schools to the requirements of the engineering profession as set out by the Engineering Council. [23825]

Mr. Forth: The mathematics curriculum is relevant to many professions, including engineering. As the hon. Member is aware, the Government are committed to higher standards and higher quality teaching in mathematics for all pupils.

History Teaching

16. Mr. Hawkins: to ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans she has to review the teaching of history in schools. [23826]

Mr. Forth: None.

School Funding

17. Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations she has received asking her for increased funding for school budgets in 1996–97. [23827]

Mr. Robin Squire: My. right hon. Friend has received a number of representations on school finances, many of which have requested increased funding for school budgets in 1995–96.

23. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many representations she has now received from (a) parents, (b) teacher and (c) governors regarding school funding for 1995–96. [23834]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has received a number of such representations. It is not possible to break down this total into separate categories.

24. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what estimate she has made of the effect of a national funding formula for primary and secondary schools on financial distribution to local education authorities. [23835]

Mr. Robin Squire: The detailed effects of a national funding formula would depend on how it was constructed. It is clear, however, that redistributing a national funding total using identical formula factors across the country would result in large numbers of schools gaining, and large number of schools losing compared with their existing levels of funding.

Selective Grammar Schools

18. Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will make a statement about the Government's policy towards selective grammar schools. [23828]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Government believe that schools which select pupils by ability, or which specialise in particular subjects, have an important part to play in giving parents a choice of schooling for their children.

Nursery Education

19. Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment she has made of the need for nursery education in Hampshire. [23829]

Mr. Forth: It is for local education authorities to determine the need for education provision for children below compulsory school age.

22. Sir David Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what are her future plans for the development of nursery education; and if she will make a statement. [23832]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has set a target to provide, over time, a pre-school place for all four-year-olds whose parents wish to take it up. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and the official task force have been consulting widely with a view to drawing up detailed proposals for the expansion.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State what has been the amount of money given from her Department to London borough councils to help with the provision of nursery schooling in each of the last two years. [23823]

Mr. Forth: In 1994–95 local education authorities in London received in total in their education standard spending assessment some £189.870 million in respect of the population of children aged 0 to 4 in their area. In 1995–96 the figure was £199.198 million. How much each local authority spends on nursery provision is a matter solely for the local authority concerned.

Primary School Pupils

20. Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what guidelines her Department issues on the optimum number of pupils per class in primary schools. [23830]

Mr. Robin Squire: None. It is for the governors and head teachers of individual schools to decide how to organise their classes.

Grant-maintained Schools

21. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many grammar and high schools in Kent have successfully applied for grant-maintained status; and if she will make a statement. [23831]

Mr. Robin Squire: Eighteen grammar schools and 46 other secondary schools in Kent have successfully applied for grant-maintained status. This means that half the state secondary schools in the county are now self-governing—a clear illustration of the extent to which Kent parents have appreciated the benefits of GM status for their children's schools.

Assisted Places

25. Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proportion of pupils on the assisted places scheme receive a free place. [23836]

Mr. Robin Squire: Over 42 per cent. of assisted place holders are receiving a free place in the current academic year 1994–95.

Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans she has to review the assisted places scheme; and if she will make a statement. [23833]

Mr. Robin Squire: The assisted places scheme is an outstanding success and popular with parents. It is here to stay under this Government. We will continue to keep its detailed operation under regular review.

Further Education

26. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she expects to maintain the unit of resource per student in the further education sector over the next two years. [23837]

Mr. Boswell: The Government's expenditure plans mean that the funding available for colleges will increase by 4 per cent. in 1995–96 and by a further 3 per cent. in 1996–97. The plans assume that FE sector colleges will make real terms efficiency gains of 5 per cent. in 1995–96 and 3 per cent. in 1996–97.

Ethnic and Religious Facilities

27. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education to what extent her Department wishes to encourage the development of additional ethnic and religious facilities in English primary and secondary schools in the future. [23838]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend considers proposals from promoters of a variety of new voluntary and grant-maintained schools. She takes into account a number of factors, including the extent to which the proposals would enhance the choice, diversity and quality of education in the area; the overall need for additional school places locally and therefore the cost-effective use of public money; and evidence that the new school would be able to deliver the national curriculum.

Teaching Methods

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what guidance her Department is giving for methods of teaching classes of all sizes; and if she will make a statement. [24302]

Mr. Robin Squire: None. The Teacher Training Agency and Ofsted are to take joint action to identify good teaching methods and improve teachers' effectiveness. The agency is conducting a fundamental national review of in-service training.

Autism

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for education what plans she has to increase the level of provision for autistic children in north-east London; and if she will make a statement. [24046]

Mr. Forth: The assessment of autistic children and the identification of a suitable school for them is the responsibility of the LEA in whose area they live. Not every LEA will be able to, or need to make its own specialist provision. In some cases collaboration between LEAs might be desirable; if this led one or more LEAs to publish statutory proposals for new schools or units, or to the development of additional provision in non-maintained special schools, the Secretary of State would consider any proposals carefully.

Medical Students

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she or her ministerial colleagues will agree to meet medical student representatives from the British Medical Association to discuss the current level of student loans and other relevant matters. [23817]

Mr. Boswell: The pressure of other commitments means that my right hon. Friend and I are unable to meet representatives of the medical students committee. I am well aware of the arguments advanced by the BMA medical students committee, and have answered the points raised by them in correspondence.

Special Needs

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list by local education authority those secondary schools which are grant maintained, giving for each the number of pupils with a statement of special educational needs for each year since the school became grant-maintained. [25678]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested will take a little time to assemble. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy in the Library.

Statements of special educational needs are drawn up by the local education authority and name the school which the pupil in question should attend, taking account of parents' preferences and consultation with the schools' governors. A grant-maintained school can neither draw up a statement itself nor refuse admission to a pupil whose statement names that school.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Assaults (Police Officers)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many physical assaults on police officers were recorded in Hampshire and the Isle of Wight for each year since 1990. [25034]

Mr. Maclean: The information available centrally relates to assaults on police officers recorded for the Hampshire police force area as a whole. Separate information for the Isle of Wight is not available centrally. There were 343 assaults in 1990, 374 in 1991, 388 in 1992 and 355 in 1993. Information for 1994 is not yet available.

Asbestos Ash

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what instructions his Department has given to police force and fire brigade services to co-ordinate strategies in evacuating communities that are at risk from dispersed asbestos ash following fires on buildings containing asbestos material. [25035]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Guidance has been issued to fire brigades on dealing with incidents involving asbestos and to the police on any type of incident where evacuation is to be considered.

Prison Statistics

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the total number of sentenced offenders, including fine defaulters, received into prison in (a) 1993 and (b) 1994; and how many had committed offences involving (i) violence, (ii) sex and (iii) robbery; [25319]

(2) what was the total number of sentenced offenders, excluding fine defaulters, received into prison in (a) 1993 and (b) 1994; and how many had committed offences involving (i) violence, (ii) sex and (iii) robbery. [25320]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Alun Michael, dated 23 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the total number of sentenced offenders, both including and excluding fine defaulters, received into prison in (a) 1993 and (b) 1994; and how many had committed offences involving (i) violence, (ii) sex and (iii) robbery.

Provisional information for receptions of sentenced prisoners in 1993 and 1994 is contained in the attached table.

Receptions into Prison Service Establishments, 1993 and 1994, by offence group, including and excluding fine defaulters

Prison Golf Courses

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the estimated cost of providing a golf course at Swaleside prison on the Isle of Sheppey; what costs had been incurred when the work was stopped; what is the estimated cost of restoring the land to its original condition; what amount was spent to purchase golf clubs and balls; and how many clubs and balls were brought. [17340]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 3 April 1995]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Stephen Byers, dated 23 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the costs incurred in the abandoned project to construct a three hole golf course at Swaleside prison. I am sorry for the delay in replying to your Question.

At the time of the cancellation of the project, the cost that had been incurred as a result of labour costs, plant hire and materials was £14,275. Some of the aggregate materials that had already been delivered to the site were recovered and used for construction purposes elsewhere in the prison estate. There have subsequently been cancellation costs of £8,043.

Some ground work had already been carried out at Swaleside. The work to restore the land will be done by prisoners under the supervision of staff and will need no additional resources.

The cost of 24 golf clubs, 150 golf balls and 200 practice balls was £709. It is hoped to recover some of this cost through negotiation with equipment suppliers.

As a result of what happened at Swaleside, it has been made clear to governors that there should be no further proposals to use public funds in this way.

Al Fayed Brothers

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who signed (a) notices refusing applications by Mr. A. and Mr. M. Al Fayed to be granted British citizenship and (b) letters refusing to explain the reasons for such refusal notices submitted by either applicant or their representatives; and on whose behalf such notices or letters were signed. [25700]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: It is not our practice to disclose details relating to individual applications for British citizenship.

Police Vehicle Accidents

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the percentage of police vehicles involved in (a) serious and (b) fatal accidents in each of the last 15 years. [25426]

Mr. Maclean: The available information on the number of police vehicle accidents in England and Wales is for the period 1988–1993 and is given in the table. The figures shown for casualties relate only to death or serious injury in the course of either police pursuits or responses to emergency calls.

Police vehicle accidents (England and Wales)

Criminal Injuries Compensation

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the average award for rape plus a serious injury given under the criminal injuries compensation scheme under the tariff scheme operating from April 1994; [24887]

(2) if he will list for each of the last five years the number of claimants for criminal injuries compensation who were incapacitated for more than 28 weeks and the percentage they represented of (a) the total number and (b) the total cost of claimants in each year; [24889]

(3) what was the number of awards and total value of awards made (a) in respect of rape and (b) in respect of rape plus a serious injury in each of the last six financial years. [24888]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 18 May 1995]: This information is not recorded centrally.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the criteria he intends to use in reviewing the criminal injuries compensation tariff once it is in place; [24891]

(2) if it is his policy that the tariff published with the Criminal Injuries Compensation Bill should be uprated to allow for inflation; and if it is his policy to ensure that the tariff rates are subsequently uprated each year; [24896]

(3) if it is his policy that the tariff published with the Criminal Injuries Compensation Bill should be implemented as it stands. [24895]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 18 May 1995]: It is the intention that the tariff which was published on 11 May should be the one which is used when the enhanced tariff scheme starts.

The injury descriptions in the tariff will be monitored on a continuing basis, and can be adjusted as necessary with the consent of Parliament. It is intended that the tariff levels will be reviewed every three years. No criteria for such reviews have yet been set, but might be expected to include reference to inflation more generally and other pressures on public expenditure.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make it his policy that the time limit for applications under the criminal justice compensation tariff should be not less than three years; [24899]

(2) what will be the time limit for applications under the recently announced tariff scheme for criminal injury compensation. [24898]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 18 May 1995]: The intention is to set the time limit at two years. Police and other records are often weeded at about three years and this can make it more difficult to obtain documentary evidence to substantiate claims. However, there will continue to be discretion for the scheme administrators to waive the time limit in exceptional cases.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will define the terms dependency/loss of support payments used in note 4 to his paper on the proposed tariff scheme published with the Criminal Injury Compensation Bill, together with the circumstances in which they are relevant and the means by which this relevance would be assessed in a specific case. [24890]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 18 May 1995]: Payments for dependency and loss of support will be made to those relations who are able to show that they were financially dependent on the deceased at or before his or her death, or a probability that the deceased would have provided some sort of financial support in the future had he or she lived. They will be calculated by reference to the deceased's contribution to the household budget and the probable length of the dependency.

Europol Drugs Unit

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff (a) in his Department and (b) in other Government Departments have specific duties relating to the Europol drugs unit. [25051]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Within the National Criminal Intelligence Service two members of staff currently work full-time on liaison duties associated with the Europol drugs unit. Other members of NCIS, the Home Office and Customs and Excise undertake duties associated with the work of the unit as part of their wider responsibilities for national and international police and customs co-operation.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost in 1994–95 of the United Kingdom's participation in the Europol drugs unit. [25052]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 May 1995]: For the financial year 1994–95 the United Kingdom's contribution towards the running and staff costs of the Europol drugs unit in The Hague was £849,000. Some additional costs were incurred in the United Kingdom as a result of staff time spent on representational, liaison and other duties associated with the work of the unit.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, how many United Kingdom police officers are currently serving (a) full-time and (b) part-time with the Europol drugs unit. [25057]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 May 1995]: (a) Three; (b) none.

National Criminal Intelligence Service

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many United Kingdom police officers are currently serving (a) full-time and (b) part-time with the National Criminal Intelligence Service. [25053]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 May 1995]: As at 1 May there were 248 police officers serving with the National Criminal Intelligence Service, all full-time. Of these, 229 were seconded on central service terms and 19 were on periods of attachment.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost in 1993–94 and 1995 of the National Criminal Intelligence Service. [25054]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 May 1995]: In 1993–94 the net outturn for the National Criminal Intelligence Service was £20.068 million. The outturn in 1994–95, which has yet to be confirmed, is estimated to be £23.508 million.

Forensic Science Service Agency

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what targets he has set for the Forensic Science Service agency for 1995–96. [26102]

Mr. Howard: During 1995–96 I expect Forensic Science Service to continue to improve its efficiency and effectiveness. The financial targets for the year are recovery of full economic costs; and a cash unit cost target of £484.91 based on an efficiency gain of 1.98 per cent. The service level targets are to meet 90 per cent. of delivery dates agreed with customers; and to maintain accreditation to national measurement accreditation service and BS5750 standards.

Boards of Visitors

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has reviewed the role of boards of visitors. [26103]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: On 1 February 1995 I made an announcement in the House that I would conduct a review of the role of boards of visitors. My right hon. and learned Friend and I place great value on the work of boards and on the participation of lay people from the local community in the prison system. There has been considerable change within the Prison Service, particularly after it became an agency, which has placed new and increased demands on boards of visitors. The objective of the review was to find ways to strengthen the role of boards and help them undertake their duties more effectively.

My review group consisted of Mrs. Lindsay Addyman JP, Mrs Mary Bentall OBE JP, Mr. Colin Edwards, Ms Freda Evans, Mrs Denise Hurst, Mr. Alfred Mossop JP, Mrs Sylvia Peach JP, Mr. Jim Romer, and Mrs Judy Veale OBE JP, all of whom are current or past members of boards of visitors, and Judge Stephen Tumim, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons. The governor of HM prison, Maidstone was co-opted. Support was provided by a small team of officials.

Written representations within the terms of reference were invited by 3 March from a wide variety of groups interested in penal affairs including boards of visitors, prison governors and others. I chaired a number of meetings during March and April at which the review group considered these representations and in the light of their own wide practical experience, developed the recommendations.

The main recommendations are that:

the title "board of visitors" should be replaced by "advisory council";

a code of practice should be produced and all boards should follow it; a statement of purpose and a common constitution should be adopted by all boards; all training for new and experienced members and new chairmen should become mandatory; and a training-needs analysis should be completed;

there should be a new elected body under the title "national advisory council" to represent to the Secretary of State matters of common concern to boards;

there should be a director of boards, appointed by open competition, supported by a secretariat based in the Home Office; additional funds of about £300,000 per annum will be necessary; the director's role will be to provide support to boards and to enhance their performance of the watchdog role on behalf of ministers;

the chairman and vice-chairman of a board should be appointed by the Secretary of State after they have been nominated by a secret ballot of its members;

the role of the board chairman should be strengthened, his duties should include ensuring the best use of resources within a notional budget set by the Secretary of State, and agreeing with the governor (or prison director) in writing the level of administrative support required from the clerk to the board and other secretarial staff; and a 12-month probation period should be introduced for all new members; a new power should be introduced enabling the Secretary of State to suspend a member from duty as a matter of urgency; and objectives should be introduced for members and chairman together with a system of open appraisal.

One of the remarkable features of the review group was the unanimous agreement on the nature of the problems faced by boards and about their solutions. I am confident that the recommendations will command widespread support. The aim is to have them in place by January 1996.

Copies of the report of the review have been placed in the Library.

Crime Statistics

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the percentage change in each category of recorded crime and in total recorded crime (a) between the last two years for which figures are available and (b) between 1979 and the last year for which figures are available (i) in England and Wales and (ii) in each police force area. [25258]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is contained in the tables:

Identity Cards

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the consultation paper on identity cards. [26104]

Mr. Howard: I will lay before Parliament and publish tomorrow a Green Paper on identity cards.

Fireworks

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many shops and businesses were successfully prosecuted for selling fireworks to children under the apparent age of 16 years by (a) the police and (b) trading standards officers, in each year since 1985. [23572]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Statistics relating to prosecutions undertaken by trading standard officers cannot be identified centrally.

The table shows the number of police and non-police prosecutions and convictions under section 31 of the Explosives Act 1875, as amended, from 1985 to 1993: 1994 data will not be available until autumn 1995.

It should, however, be noted that the statistics of court proceedings are based on returns made by the police to the Home Office and although these include offences where there has been no police involvement, such as those prosecutions instigated by Government Departments, local authorities—in this case, probably trading standards officers—and private organisations and individuals, the reporting of these types of offence is known to be incomplete.

Telephones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations his Department has made to the Department of Trade and Industry concerning the need for legislation to prevent the cloning of mobile telephones. [23467]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 9 May 1995]: None.

Body Armour

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which European countries routinely supply their police officers with body armour. [25149]

Mr. Maclean: We do not have this information.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) bullet-proof and (b) knife-proof vests have been supplied to police officers in each police division in England; [25148]

(2) how many police officers have been supplied with (a) knife-proof body armour and (b) bullet-proof body armour; and what proportion this constitutes of all police officers. [25141]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not kept centrally.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department is carrying out into body armour for police officers which is both knife and bullet proof. [25155]

Mr. Maclean: The police scientific development branch of the Home Office has a continuous programme of evaluating the latest developments in this field. It has in addition, developed test standards and procedures which are provided to manufacturers.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects body armour to be supplied to all police officers in England and Wales. [25142]

Mr. Maclean: This is a matter for chief officers of police. I understand, however, that all officers involved in firearms operations are issued with ballistic protection.

Police Discipline

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) further to the recent report of the Police Complaints Authority, how many police officers were allowed to retire early on medical grounds while facing disciplinary charges in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [25015]

(2) how many police officers facing disciplinary charges retired early on medical grounds in each of the last five years. [25740]

Mr. Maclean: In 1993, 39 officers retired on the grounds of ill health during the course of investigations into their conduct or whilst facing disciplinary action or criminal proceedings.

Information for earlier years is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) further to the recent report of the Police Complaints Authority, what form of disciplinary action was imposed on 1,228 police officers in 1994; [24983]

(2) further to the recent report papers of the Police Complaints Authority, what was the nature of the 1,228 offences for which disciplinary action was imposed in 1994. [24982]

Mr. Maclean: The information available on punishments resulting from disciplinary hearings, including those originating from a complaint, will appear in the Home Office's annual statistical bulletin on police complaints and discipline, which is expected to be published in June.

Information on the types of complaint which resulted in disciplinary action recorded by the Police Complaints Authority in 1994 will appear in the authority's annual report, which is due to be published shortly.

Police Training

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 May, Official Report, column 555, what estimates were made of the training costs needed to enable police in England and Wales to be fully aware of the provisions of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994; and to what extent these were taken into consideration when assessing police funding. [25232]

Mr. Maclean: No additions to funding have been made for local training requirements in relation to this Act which were expected to vary according to individual and operational needs. Police funding generally takes into account increasing costs, but forces have to work within budgets to meet changing demands.

Name Badges (Prison Service)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the policy of his Department that all members within the Prison Service should wear name badges. [22206]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have asked the Prison Service to review the policy.

WALES

Nursery Education

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what review he is making of nursery school provision in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [24849]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend and I are considering a number of options on how to fulfil the Government's commitment to provide pre-school places for all four-year-olds whose parents wish to take them up.

In Wales the office of Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools is undertaking a survey of existing provision in the maintained and voluntary sectors.

Education Funding

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning school funding in 1995–96 from (a) teachers, (b) governors and (c) parents; and if he will make a statement. [24853]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend and I have received many representations concerning school funding in 1995–96 from many parties. The funding of schools is a local government responsibility. We have made it clear that in our view there is sufficient scope for local authorities in Wales to fund schools appropriately from within the overall settlement they have received. By long-standing arrangement, it is for local authorities in Wales to decide their priorities for spending.

Doctors (Suspension)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what measures he will take to ensure that general practitioners found guilty of professional misconduct do not continue to practise pending the outcome of their appeal; [24860]

(2) how many general practitioners found guilty of professional misconduct are continuing to practise pending their appeal; and if he will make a statement; [24839]

(3) what representations he has received concerning general practitioners who continue to practise pending their appeal; and if he will make a statement. [24859]

Mr. Richards: The General Medical Council is the independent statutory authority responsible for regulating the medical profession. In the last two years the GMC has used its powers to suspend doctors in almost 50 per cent. of cases. Representations have been received on individual cases, but these are matters for the GMC, not the Government.

A Bill currently before Parliament would give the NHS tribunal new powers of suspension.

School Class Sizes

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines his Department issues on the optimum number of pupils per class in primary schools; and if he will make a statement. [24851]

Mr. Richards: Class sizes are a matter for individual school governing bodies.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the amount of Government funding given to each of the public schools in Wales via the assisted places schemes in (a) 1993–94 (b) 1994–95; and if he will make a statement. [24852]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is as follows:

Total payments to APS schools 1993–94 and 1994–95

Name of school	Total payments 1993–94 £	Total payments 1994–95 £
Monmouth Boys	456,071	468,332

Monmouth Girls	186,956	196,502
Total expenditure	2,621,261	2,771,504

National Lottery

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the sports bodies in (a) Wales and (b) Clwyd to which grants from national lottery proceeds have been made; and if he will give the amounts given. [24840]

Mr. Richards: The first allocation of grants from Sportlot, the Lottery Sports Fund for Wales, has been distributed throughout Wales as follows:

Applicant	Amount of grant £
Cardiff Central Youth Club	95,192
Llandaff Rowing Club	150,623
Y Pant Comprehensive School	4,500
Builth Wells Rugby Club	60,398
Llanfapley Cricket Club and Llanfapley Sports and Social Committee	34,498
Llanwrda Cricket Club	10,675
Clwb Rygbi Castell Newydd Emlyn	100,000
Dyffryn Cricket Club/Bryncoch Sports Club	4,000

Applicant	Amount of grant £
Lampeter AFC	20,000
Aberporth and District Youth Club	45,000
Pembroke Dock Bowling Club	10,000
Dale Yacht Club	5,000
Solva Rowing and Watersports Club	5,000
Rhydymwyn Football Club	26,125
Total	571,011

In Clwyd one grant of £26,125 has been made to Rhydymwyn football club.

Welsh Patients Treated in Chester

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the percentage of beds taken annually by people from Clwyd in Chester hospitals; and if he will make a statement. [25163]

Mr. Richards: Reliable information is not available centrally.

Infertility Treatment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy concerning treatment for infertility. [25162]

Mr. Richards: The NHS in Wales provides a wide range of services for the investigation and treatment of infertility. It is for individual health authorities to determine the extent and type of services in the light of local needs and priorities.

The Welsh Office has provided guidance in the protocol, "Investment in Health Gain for Health Living", and has drawn attention to the advice contained in "The Effective Health Care Bulletin on the Management of Subfertility", published for the NHS management executive by a consortium of Leeds and York universities and the research unit of the Royal College of Physicians, and the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists publication "Infertility—Guidelines for Practice". Copies of these documents are available in the Library of the House.

European Structural Funds

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what contributions are planned from his Department during 1995–96 for funding to facilitate the optimising of take-up of EU grants under the objective 5b programme in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [25008]

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 11 May, Official Report, column 585. Support for the objective 5b programme can come from a variety of public sector sources, including my own Department. The amount of assistance actually made available from any source in direct support of objective 5b projects will depend on the nature and quality of projects put forward.

Care in the Community

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the working so far of care in the community in Wales. [25164]

Mr. Richards: Local authorities in Wales have made generally good progress since April 1993 with community care. The Welsh Office departmental report, Cm2815, records that in the first year of the new arrangements local authorities assessed over 50,000 people for community care services and over 28,000 were provided with care to help them stay in their own homes.

Contracting Out

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what work has been contracted out (a) by his Department and (b) by agencies for which his Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what is projected for 1995–96. [25544]

Mr. Redwood: As a result of my Department and its agency's competing for quality programmes the following services have been contracted out: 1993–94 building maintenance management; 1994–95 staff training; 1995–96 to date, architects and surveyors services and careers service in Wales. Contracting out of further work in 1995–96 is dependent on the outcome of current market testing exercises.

Elderly People

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total income in 1993–94 to each local authority and in total from placements of old people in (a) registered and (b) unregistered independent residential care and nursing homes, inside and outside the local authority area and from placements in local authority homes for older people; and if he will break down by income from (i) government grants, inside aggregate external finance and outside aggregate external finance, (ii) sales, (iii) fees and charges, (iv) other income and (v) joint arrangements. [25393]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is given in the following tables, based on revenue outturn forms from local authorities in Wales. Local authorities received no income in 1993–94 from placements in unregistered independent residential care and nursing homes.

(a) Income from residential care and nursing placements in registered independent homes for the elderly 1993–94[1]

[2]Includes specific government grants inside and outside Aggregate External Finance.

Schools Inspectors

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list of all schools inspectors indicating those who have undertaken further training to become registered inspectors and are able to tender for school inspections and lead inspection teams. [25391]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 22 May 1995]: This is a matter for Her Majesty's chief inspector to deal with and I have arranged for him to write to the hon. Member about it.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to allow radioactive waste from the nuclear power industry to be accepted by local landfill disposal sites. [25773]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This is one of the issues being considered in the current review of radioactive waste management policy, as part of which a major consultation exercise was undertaken last autumn. The Government's conclusions on this matter and other aspects of radioactive waste management policy will be published in a White Paper in the summer.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the local landfill disposal sites that accept low level radioactive waste for disposal; and if he will make a statement about the sources of such waste. [25775]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In Wales only one landfill site has been authorised for this purpose—Cilgwyn quarry, near Caernarfon. The very small amounts of waste involved have come from the university sector and have been regulated in accordance with the Radioactive Substances Act 1993.

Welsh Language

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to ensure that the privatised utilities in Wales develop comprehensive bilingual policies. [25774]

Mr. Richards: It was not intended that the provisions of the Welsh Language Act 1993 should apply to the private sector. However, many private companies, including privatised utilities, have produced Welsh language schemes voluntarily and in response to customer demand. The privatised utilities have, I believe, a particularly good record of operating bilingual policies successfully.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Income Support

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations his Department and its agencies have received since 1 January about delays in paying income support in respect of persons with extreme difficulties in specialised units (a) nationally and (b) in Somerset; what trends there have been in the time taken to settle these claims; and if he will make a statement. [24285]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. David Nicholson, dated 22 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about delays in making payment of Income Support to customers with extreme difficulties living in specialised units in Somerset and elsewhere in Great Britain.

I understand that the Manager of the Benefits Agency's District Office in Somerset wrote to you on 17 May concerning the Income Support claims of four residents of a specialised unit, two of whom had their cases immediately resolved. Since that date the two outstanding cases have also been resolved and full entitlement to benefit including all arrears due has been sent.

I am very sorry that there have been difficulties in respect of these particular cases. I am assured, however, that this is an isolated matter and we have no evidence or indication that there is a problem of delays in the payment of Income Support either in Somerset or nationally to customers in these circumstances.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have been refused income support after failing the habitual residence test since its introduction, in the Euston district office of Glasgow; how many have appealed against this decision; how many of those appeals have now been heard by a tribunal; how many claimants won their appeals; how many are still waiting for an appeal date to be given; and how many of those claimants appealing, have applied for an interim payment, and how many of those applicants have been refused. [25403]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 22 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the operation of the habitual residence test (HRT) for Income Support customers of the Benefits Agency (BA) District Office in Euston.

The full range of information is not available. Information about the number of customers who pass or fail the HRT is collected and maintained centrally for BA management information purposes. Information is not routinely collected about appeals specifically against HRT decisions, the result of those appeals, or of requests for interim payments on account of Income Support entitlement.

However, as an aid to their resource planning and management team at Glasgow Benefit Centre has kept an informal record of appeals against Income Support disallowances from customers of Euston District Office who fail the HRT, and of the decisions of the Social Security Appeal Tribunals, for which a notification has been received, in those appeals. The data available is:

Habitual Residence Test disallowances—3966

Habitual Residence Test appeals—364

Appeals heard—97

Appeals allowed—72

Hearing date awaited—116

It should be noted that in a number of cases the local adjudicating authorities revised the disallowance of Income Support as part of a routine review of the decision following receipt of an appeal; a number of appeals have been heard but notification of the Tribunal decision is awaited; and in a number of cases hearing dates have been notified to customers.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will re-institute the collection and publishing of data on the length of time claimants have been drawing income support by each year of duration above two years, and up to 20 years plus. [25140]

Mr. Roger Evans: It is no longer possible to collect reliable information on durations of claims for those people who have been in receipt of income support for relatively long periods. A full explanation is given in the introduction to the 1993 annual statistical enquiry, a copy of which is in the Library.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how far back computerised records of national insurance contributions extend. [25040]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The administration of national insurance is the responsibility of Mrs. Faith Boardman, the chief executive of the Contributions Agency. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Jon Owen Jones, dated 19 May 1995:

As Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency, I have responsibility for answering questions about operational matters relating to the National Insurance scheme, I have been asked to reply to your question about how far back computerised records of National Insurance contributions extend.

A cumulative total is held on each contributor's computer account of all National Insurance contributions from April 1948 to March 1975.

From April 1975, detailed annual records of all National Insurance contributions are held on each contributor's account.

I hope you will find this reply helpful. If I can be of any further assistance, please let me know.

HIV Infection

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps his Department is taking to disseminate the guidance to Benefits Agency medical services on HIV infection to doctors and staff. [25247]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. Frank Field, dated 22 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the guidance that is issued by the Benefits Agency on HIV infection.

"A Guide to Benefits and HIV" was produced by the Benefits Agency in June 1993. It was written in co-operation with many organisations including the Terrence Higgins Trust. The Guide was distributed widely throughout the Agency, and provides advice for staff, including the Agency's medical advisors, and customers about the benefit and welfare issues which affect people with HIV positive related illnesses. There is also advice on other agencies and outside organisations from whom help may be obtained; a list of related publications is also included.

Additionally, during 1994 guidance was issued to staff, including the Agency's medical advisors, on the following topics:-

i) the safe disposal of hypodermic needles discarded by the public in Benefits Agency District and Branch Offices.

ii) precautions to be taken by those administering First Aid, particularly in the avoidance of blood contact.

iii) the Benefits Agency Policy Statement covering employees and clients who may have AIDS or be HIV positive.

I have enclosed both "A Guide to Benefits and HIV" and the further guidance I have mentioned, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Benefit Take-up

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people received social security benefits (a) in total and (b) as a percentage of the eligible population in each year since 1979. [25757]

Mr. Hague: The information is not available in the form requested.

Sickness and Maternity Pay

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people have been denied statutory sick pay because their earnings were too low in the last year for which figures are available; [25001]

(2) how many women in the last year for which figures are available have been denied statutory maternity pay because their earnings were too low. [24994]

Mr. Hague: The information is not available. Employers are not required to keep information on exclusions.

Incomes

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the weekly income of (a) a single person aged 25 years or over, (b) a married couple with a non-earning partner and (c) a married couple with a non-earning partner with two children aged four and six years when the person in work was employed for (i) 16 hours and (ii) 40 hours a week at (1) £2.50 an hour, (2) £3 an hour, (3) £3.50 an hour, (4) £4 an hour and (5) £4.15 an hour, assuming full take-up of benefits and assuming that they lived in local authority accommodation paying average council tax and local authority rent. [25045]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the tables.

From July, families working 30 or more hours per week will be entitled to an extra £10 family credit A new benefit to provide help to couples and single people without children in low-paid work of 16 or more hours per week is to be piloted from October 1996.

Home Responsibilities Protection

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consideration his Department is giving to the treatment of a male claimant of home responsibilities protection credits, for looking after and taking responsibility for his children while his partner is working, in a way which differs from what would apply if the roles were reversed; what plans he has to equalise the treatment; and if he will make a statement. [25789]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Home responsibilities protection protects a person's basic retirement pension by reducing the number of years of contributions otherwise needed for a full pension. The provisions apply equally to both men and women. HRP is available to those with child-caring responsibilities provided that they are entitled to child benefit for a child under age 16. In cases where the caring roles are reversed, it is open to a woman to forgo her CHB entitlement so that her partner can claim it and thus have access to HRP.

In-work Benefit Scheme

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress has been made regarding the setting up and running of family credit pilot schemes for families without children; and for how long he intends these pilot schemes to run. [25802]

Mr. Roger Evans: The pilot of a new in-work benefit for those not able to take advantage of family credit is one of a number of measures which we announced last November to help unemployed people move back into work more easily and increase the opportunities and rewards of work.

The pilot will run for three years to enable the impact of the new benefit to be properly evaluated. A Green Paper to be published shortly will set out our proposals in detail.

EMPLOYMENT

Unemployment

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people are recorded as having been unemployed for more than six months; and what proportion this is of the total number recorded as unemployed. [22318]

Mr. Oppenheim: In April 1995 there were 1,361,160 claimants who had been unemployed for six months or more. This represents 57.3 per cent. of the total number of claimant unemployed. In autumn 1994, according to the labour force survey, there were 1,499,000 people who had been unemployed for six months or more on the internationally standard ILO definition. This represents 59.6 per cent. of the corresponding ILO total. Both figures are on the unadjusted basis.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the minimum wage in other EC countries; which EC countries have a minimum wage of £180 per week equivalent; what assessment he has made of the effect of these minimum wages on jobs and the economy; and if he will make a statement. [23692]

Mr. Oppenheim: The table gives the most up-to-date information available on national minimum wages in other European Union countries:

Minimum wage level	Own currency	UK equivalent converted at market exchange rates £ per hour (estimated)
Belgium	42,808 BF monthly	5.30
France	35.56 FF hourly	4.60
Greece	4,934 Dr daily	1.70
Luxembourg	42,677 LF per month	5.30
Netherlands	2,163.2 Hfl monthly	4.90
Portugal	52,000 Esc monthly	1.30
Spain	62,700 Pts monthly	1.80

Note:
Table uses latest information available in April 1995. Wage rates converted to UK equivalent using spot exchange rates for May 9 1995.

On the above estimates, on the assumption of a 40-hour working week, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg would have minimum wages of £180 per week or more.

Minimum wages destroy jobs, particularly among young people. This was the conclusion of the OECD jobs study.

Correspondence

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he intends to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Monklands, West of 27 April, regarding the access to work programme. [25159]

Miss Widdecombe: The letter was replied to on 16 May 1995, before the hon. Member tabled this question and well within the normal time scale for ministerial reply.

Health and Safety Executive Publications

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how the price for the Health and Safety Executive's publication, "New and Expectant Mothers at Work—A Guide for Employers", HS(G) 122, was arrived at; what the profit margin is; what profit he expects to make on sales; and what assessment he has made of the deterrent effect of the price on availability of this information to those who need it in order to comply with legal duties. [25211]

Mr. Oppenheim: In accordance with Treasury guidelines the Health and Safety Executive aims to recover the costs of production and distribution of its priced publications. There is no profit element built into the price.

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what considerations underlie the refusal by the Health and Safety Executive to allow trade unions to photocopy the Health and Safety Executive publication, "New and Expectant Mothers at Work—A Guide for Employers", HS(G) 122, for use by union health and safety representatives. [25213]

Mr. Oppenheim: I understand that there has been no such refusal by the Health and Safety Executive.

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many copies of the Health and Safety Executive publication, "New and Expectant Mothers at Work—A Guide for Employers, HS[G]122, have so far been sold; how many would need to be sold to give a substantially complete coverage of employers; and what percentage of employers he estimates will have been reached so far. [25212]

Mr. Oppenheim: Over 10,000 copies of this guidance have been sold since it was published in December 1994. It is not feasible to estimate the size of the market for the publication.

Staff

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what changes there have been in the numbers of staff employed by (a) the Department of Employment and (b) agencies for which the Department of Employment is responsible, listing the changes in the number of staff agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what changes are proposed for 1995–96. [25059]

Miss Widdecombe: Information on staff numbers for the Department can be found in annexe A to table (iii) of the Department's annual report, Cm 2805. A copy of this publication is available in the Library.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what inter-departmental discussions he has conducted to prohibit age discrimination in the civil service; [24996]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect of age discrimination legislation in Canada and New Zealand; [24999]

(3) what discussions (a) have been held or (b) are proposed to be held by his Department with employers' organisations on age bars on young and older people. [24995]

Miss Widdecombe: The Government are firmly committed to countering discrimination on age grounds in the workplace. I launched a campaign in 1993 to highlight the unfairness of such discrimination. As part of the campaign the Employment Department published in 1994 a booklet, "Getting On", aimed specifically at employers. It urges them to recruit on merit and drop age bars in job vacancies. A series of regional seminars is currently spreading this message among locally invited employers and their organisations.

Staff in Employment Service jobcentres have been given clear guidance to challenge employers over restrictive upper and lower age limits and to try to persuade them to consider all jobseekers on merit.

Responsibility for promoting equality of opportunity in the civil service, in particular in the areas of gender, race and disability, but including age discrimination, lies with the Office of Public Service and Science. Civil service policy is that all eligible people have equal opportunities for employment and advancement on the basis of their suitability. A 1990 ruling not to set age limits on recruitment was extended in 1994 to cover those adverts which give preferred age ranges of applicants. This enables the civil service to benefit from the skills, experience and commitment which older workers can offer. Discrimination on grounds of age alone is now permitted only in exceptional circumstances—for example where there are statutory requirements, and with the prior consent of OPSS.

In June 1994, the Employment Department published a report entitled "An International Overview of Employment Policies and Practices Towards Older Workers", research series No. 29, containing research into the policies and practices towards older workers in 22 countries, including Canada and New Zealand. The research found no evidence that anti-discrimination legislation has been successful in improving either the economic activity rates of older workers or their employment prospects. A copy of the report is available in the Library.

Wage Studies

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what studies he has initiated to ascertain how many workers receive less than £66.50 per week. [24997]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Department has undertaken no such study.

Statutory Employment Rights

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment to what extent he monitors the impact of statutory employment rights on the economic effectiveness of the work force. [24953]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Department conducts research from time to time to assess the effect of statutory employment rights, including on employment and the economy.

Graduate Unemployment

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of graduates was unemployed one year after leaving higher education (a) currently (b) in 1979. [25020]

Mr. Oppenheim: The latest available estimates for Great Britain from the spring 1994 labour force survey show that 16.6 per cent. of graduates of working age who were not full-time students when interviewed, but were full-time students one year prior to interview were ILO unemployed. There is no information for 1979.

Access to Work Programme

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his policy regarding items of equipment purchased under the access to work programme where the beneficiary has ceased to be employed but is actively seeking work. [25323]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. G. Johnson to Mr. Tom Clarke, dated 23 May 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your question about the policy regarding items of equipment purchased under the Access to Work programme where the beneficiary has ceased to be employed but is actively seeking work.

Special aids and equipment are supplied under the Access to Work programme to help overcome work related needs that arise because of disability. Where a person in receipt of such help is no longer employed but is actively seeking employment and continued use of that equipment would benefit them in finding work, they may retain the equipment for an agreed period at the discretion of the Employment Service. The equipment may then be used in their new job if appropriate.

I hope this is helpful.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, if he will list those companies in which the holder of his office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past five years. [25719]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 22 May 1995]: None.

Job Clubs

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his policy regarding smoking at job clubs. [25750]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 23 May 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the smoking policy in Jobclubs.

In 1994 a policy on smoking in all Employment Service (ES) programmes, including Jobclub, was introduced. The principle of the policy is that participants shall be entitled to a smoke free environment. In practice this means that unrestricted smoking is not allowed on any ES workshops, seminars or courses, including Jobclub. Wherever possible, designated areas and times should be provided for smokers.

Jobclubs continue to be both popular with the people who join and an effective way of helping them back to work. We are now able to help more members than at any time before and over 266,000 unemployed people joined Jobclub last year.

I hope this is helpful.

Disqualification Periods

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the latest statistics of the periods of disqualification for benefit for those who have voluntarily left employment. [25427]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Paul Flynn dated 23 May 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about statistics held on the periods of disqualification of benefit for clients who have voluntarily left employment.

The regular statistics regarding disqualifications are broken down into subjects, not the length of disqualification and I am therefore unable to provide the information you have requested. I am however able to advise that the number of decisions affecting clients who have left employment voluntarily during the three months to 31 December 1994 was 58,425. Of these, 50.2 percent were Adverse Decisions.

These figures are taken from the unemployment benefit statistics. A copy of this quarterly publication which is an Analysis of Adjudication Officers' Decisions has been placed in the Library.

A one-off survey, which was part of a larger project looking at adjudication issues carried out in late 1994, gave a snap shot picture of average periods of disqualification during October 1994. The findings showed that for those who left their employment voluntarily, 25 percent were disqualified for the maximum period of 6 months.

I hope this is helpful.

TRANSPORT

Driving Theory Test

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how he proposes to implement the driving theory test; and if he will make a statement. [26194]

Mr. Norris: The previous Secretary of State set in hand detailed developmental work on a separate theory test, Official Report, 9 February 1994, columns 270–71. I announced earlier today that the test will be in the form of a written test lasting about half an hour and consisting of about 35 multiple choice questions on the main principles of safe driving and the responsible use of vehicles on the road. The theory test will need to be passed before a candidate can take the practical test. We see the new test as making an important contribution to safer driving, especially by new drivers.

Introduction of the new theory test will be the responsibility of the Driving Standards Agency, which plans to contract out the practical implementation work to the private sector. Tenders will shortly be invited from non-governmental bodies for the operation of the theory test through a network of local centres. We shall be seeking a reputable body with experience in conducting assessments and with no financial interest in driving tuition.

We have carefully considered the alternative of a computerised test involving hazard perception and concluded that for the present this option would be too costly and needs further development. We shall be monitoring the effect of the separate theory test with a view to developing it in ways which will further improve road safety, one of which may well be the use of computers.

We shall be making further announcements in due course on the details of the test.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 10 May, Official Report, column 457 (1) if he will make it his policy to ensure that the public expenditure cover he will make available to the British Railways Board in regard to the contractual and other obligations of the board will be sufficient to cover all industrial injury claims brought by retired British Rail employees following privatisation of British Rail; [25028]

(2) whether the amount of public expenditure cover that will be made available by his Department to the British Railways Board in regard to the contractual and other obligations of the board will be financially limited. [25027]

Mr. Watts: In setting the annual level of public expenditure provision to support British Rail, the Government have regard to all aspects of the board's financial position, including any contractual obligations and any need to make payments arising from industrial injury claims awards.

Collision Research

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what new proposals he has to make road vehicle fronts more absorbent to the force of collision. [25428]

Mr. Norris: The United Kingdom has taken a leading role on pedestrian protection research for many years. We have in particular encouraged the preparation of a draft EU directive which would require car fronts to be designed with pedestrian accidents in mind and will continue to press the European Commission to bring forward a proposal without further delay.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will investigate the evidence on the safety value of the use of airbags on the front of cars in Japan. [25529]

Mr. Norris: No. Very little information is yet available on this system.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has evaluated into the effects on driver and passenger on vehicles with bull bars when involved in accidents, listing the studies (a) conducted in the United Kingdom and (b) conducted overseas. [25425]

Mr. Norris: None. We are not aware of any relevant research.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those companies in which the holder of his office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past five years. [25706]

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 22 May 1995]: On (a), majority shareholdings are currently held in the following five companies: Railtrack Group PLC, Union Railways Ltd, European Passenger Services Ltd, National Bus Company Pension Trustees Ltd and National Bus Nominees Ltd.

On (b), a majority shareholding was held in the Red Sea Lights Company, prior to the company being wound up in 1991.

Marine Safety Exercises

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of the passengers and crew involved were able-bodied; and in what time periods the passengers were evacuated and succoured ashore in the evacuation exercises carried out by the coastguard. [25573]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 22 May 1995]: This is an operational matter for the Coastguard Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 23 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question as the question deals with an operational matter, for which I have responsibility as Chief Executive.

PQ 1811/94/95 The information requested in this PQ is detailed below:

Munitions Transport

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if permission was granted by the Civil Aviation Authority for British Airways to transport munitions from Hong Kong to London on 4 April. [25571]

Mr. Norris: I understand that British Airways was granted permission by the Civil Aviation Authority to carry munitions of war from Hong Kong on 4 April.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what controls exist to regulate the transport of weapons and ammunition as cargo on scheduled civil air services. [25568]

Mr. Norris: Article 46 of the Air Navigation Order 1989—Article 51 of the 1995 order—sets out the conditions under which weapons and munitions of war can be carried on civil aircraft. The Air Navigation (Dangerous Goods) Regulations 1994 set out the conditions under which dangerous goods, including ammunition, can be carried on civil aircraft.

Vehicle Licence Payments

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will bring in a scheme to allow the payment of the vehicle licence by monthly instalments, at no extra cost. [25540]

Mr. Norris: No. This would be costly to administer, and is unnecessary since, under the existing stamp saving scheme, £5 stamps can be purchased at post offices throughout the year for use towards payment of the vehicle licence.

Contracting Out

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) for each piece of work subject to a bidding process under the auspices of (a) his Department and (b) agencies for which his Department is responsible (i) where work was contracted out, who were the successful bidders and (ii) which contracts were won by in-house successful bidders in (1) 1993–94, (2) 1994–95 and (3) 1995–96; [25664]

(2) what work has been contracted out (a) by his Department and (b) by agencies for which his Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94 (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) projected for 1995–96. [25662]

Mr. Norris: The information requested is given in the table. It is not possible to forecast which work will be contracted out in 1995–96 but items in the Department's competing for quality programme which are not yet completed are listed.

Stationary Buses (Pollution)

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration he is giving to the practice of stationary tourist buses with their engines running for long periods. [25407]

Mr. Norris: The Government deplore the actions of any motorist who leaves an engine running unnecessarily. It is already illegal to do so in certain circumstances.

London Transport Staff

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff were employed by London Transport on 1 April. [25790]

Mr. Norris: London Transport employed 18,602 permanent staff, full-time equivalent, on 31 March, the nearest date for which figures are available from its management accounts.

Train Repair Services

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what facilities are currently available to repair a train on the InterCity west coast service which develops a fault on its southbound journey; and what facilities will be available in six months' time. [24810]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter which is the responsibility of British Rail.

I understand that scheduled maintenance activities on InterCity west coast are carried out principally at Glasgow Polmadie, Manchester Longsight, Wolverhampton Oxley and London Wembley. BR is in consultation with the rail regulator about the future of Wembley depot.

SCOTLAND

Public Bodies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce, further

(a) non-governmental departments, (b) arms-length bodies, (c) trusts and (d) executive agencies in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: The three new water authorities are expected to be public corporations. In 1996, the Scottish Environment Protection Agency, the Scottish Children's Reporter Administration and the Scottish Water and Sewerage Customers Council, all of which will be non-departmental public bodies, will come into operation. No decisions have yet been taken on the establishment of bodies under section 18, residuary bodies, or section 19, property commission, of the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Act 1994. There are no plans at present to create further NHS trusts. Forest Enterprise, which has a Great Britain-wide remit and for which I am lead Minister, will be established as an executive agency within the Forestry Commission later this year. In addition, the Scottish Office fisheries research services is a potential candidate for agency status.

Housing (Disabled Access)

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if and when he will take steps to make barrier-free standards mandatory for new Scottish housing. [25132]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend is currently considering a number of options for amendment of the Building Standards (Scotland) Regulations to extend access for disabled people to new dwellings, taking into account responses to a consultation document issued by the Scottish Office on 8 February 1995.

Child Witnesses

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which recommendations contained in the report "Live Television Links: An Evaluation of its use by Child Witnesses in Scottish Criminal Trials", central research unit, Scottish Office, 1995 he plans to implement; and if he will make a statement. [24462]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Provisions in the current Criminal Justice (Scotland) Bill implement a number of the recommendations in this report which was published last month. The other recommendations in the report are being carefully examined and decisions on the outcome will be announced in due course.

NHS Consultants

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received from (a) health boards and (b) NHS trusts about difficulties in the recruitment and selection of consultants and other hospital-based medical practitioners in (a) Strathclyde and (b) Scotland; which specialist areas have the greatest problems on such recruitment and selection; and if he will make a statement. [24866]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 May 1995]: We are aware of the difficulties of NHS trusts in recruitment of senior house officers, particularly in accident and emergency medicine and in paediatrics, and of consultants. NHS trusts last year reported 120 consultant vacancies with the largest numbers in anaesthetics and general psychiatry. To increase the number of candidates for consultant posts, the establishment of senior registrars in Scotland this year has been increased from 473 to 500. Increases have been made in anaesthetics, general medicine, medical paediatrics, diagnostic radiology, ear, nose and throat surgery, ophthalmology, orthopaedic surgery and urology.

Coronary Heart Disease

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made towards the eradication of premature deaths caused by coronary heart disease in Scotland. [24906]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Deaths from coronary heart disease among people under 65 have fallen from 94 per 100,000 population in 1986 to 72 per 100,000 in 1993, the latest year for which figures are available. The target set in "Scotland's Health—A Challenge To Us All", the policy statement issued in 1992, is to reduce mortality in this age group by 40 per cent. between 1990 and 2000. This will require a further decrease to 46 deaths per 100,000 population. A wide range of initiatives is in train to facilitate progress towards the target by addressing the risk factors associated with coronary heart disease and encouraging the life-style changes which can help prevent it.

A77

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if there is to be a public inquiry into the upgrading of the A77 from Fenwick to Malletsheugh; and if he will make a statement. [25246]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 May 1995]: There are a number of objections to the order published for the scheme and negotiations are continuing to see whether these can be resolved by agreement. A decision on whether a public local inquiry will be required will be taken later this summer.

Nurses' Pay

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary for State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley, Official Report, 16 May 1995, column 216 if he will list which NHS trusts have offered nurses a wage increase (a) in excess of 3 per cent., (b) at 3 per cent., with no attached conditions, (c) at 3 per cent., with conditions, (d) under 3 per cent. but above 1 per cent., (e) at 1 per cent. and (f) under 1 per cent. [25248]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 May 1995]: The information requested is as detailed. This covers formal offers and notice by trusts of intent to offer. All the offers are, of course, subject to local negotiations.

None.

Drumkinnon Bay

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, columns 207–208, on what date (a) his predecessor as Minister with responsibility for industry and (b) officials in his Department were first informed of Dunbartonshire Enterprise's interest in the acquisition of Drumkinnon bay from the Drumkinnon Development Company. [25265]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 22 May 1995]: I understand that, during his tenure as a Minister, my predecessor was not advised of Dunbartonshire Enterprise's interest in acquiring Drumkinnon bay. Officials of the Scottish Office Industry Department first became aware of that interest in early December 1994, although the matter was not formally referred to the Department.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the criteria for owning a registered nursing home in Lanarkshire; and if he will make a statement. [25487]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 May 1995]: The requirements for the registration of nursing homes are set out in the Nursing Homes Registration (Scotland) Act 1938 as amended. Health boards, as registering authorities, make copies of relevant guidance available to those seeking registration. A copy of the Lanarkshire health board guidance notes on "Registration and Inspection of Nursing Homes" has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will initiate an independent inquiry into the care for the elderly in the Lanarkshire health board area. [25485]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 May 1995]: My right hon. Friend has no plans to initiate an independent inquiry into the care for the elderly in the Lanarkshire health board area.

Rural Child Care

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will undertake to carry out the recommendations of the European Commission network on child care on child care services for rural families. [25582]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 May 1995]: My right hon. Friend understands that the European Commission's report on child care services for rural families was launched in Scotland earlier this month. He will study it with interest.

Socialist Education Association

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will include the Socialist Education Association in any relevant lists of bodies to be consulted on educational matters. [25583]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Yes.

Technical Plastics Ltd.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the investigation by Strathclyde police into matters arising from a television documentary programme relating to ICL Technical Plastics Ltd. in Glasgow was concluded; and if any prosecution arises as a result. [25615]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 May 1995]: The investigation is not yet concluded.

Torness Power Station

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what funds were provided by the European Commission for the building of Torness nuclear power station; and what terms were applied to the provision of the funds. [25493]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 22 May 1995]: No funds were provided by the European Commission for the building of Torness power station.

Dounreay

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he received from the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee its report on the radioactive contamination arising from the nuclear waste disposal deep shaft at Dounreay, and what remedial action he intends should be taken to clean up the contamination. [25411]

Sir Hector Monro: My right hon. Friend awaits the committee's report on the radioactive particles found at Dounreay and will consider it carefully as soon as he receives it.

Prescriptions

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the guidance he has issued to Scottish health boards concerning the issuing of private medical prescriptions to patients where the costs of obtaining the medication on an NHS prescription are greater than those in buying the medication through a private prescription. [25330]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No such guidance has been issued to Scottish health boards.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prescriptions were issued by general practitioners in each health board in Scotland in each year since 1979–80. [25351]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information for each health board for the financial years 1979–80 to 1993–94 is set out in the tables. The figures include prescriptions written by general medical practitioners and dentists, as well as hospital-generated prescriptions from England and prescriptions written for personnel serving in the armed forces.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will notify Scottish local authorities of the relevant date under the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Act 1994 when they should statutorily consult the new unitary authorities before taking decisions with revenue implications for the new councils. [25331]

Mr. Kynoch: Section 55 of the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Act 1994 requires existing local authorities to gain the agreement of their successors from a date to be specified by my right hon. Friend before committing themselves to major financial transactions. Existing and new authorities are currently being consulted on the proposal that the specified date should be 1 August 1995. A copy of the consultation letter has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the framework which will be adopted for transferring staff on 1 April 1996 from existing regional and district councils to their successor bodies. [26100]

Mr. Kynoch: Following discussions with the Local Government Staff Commission (Scotland) and consultations with Scottish local authorities, the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities and staff representative bodies, I have today laid before Parliament the Local Authorities (Staff Transfer) (Scotland) Order 1995 which requires outgoing local authorities and their successor bodies to draw up and agree detailed schemes for the transfer of staff to the new bodies on 1 April 1996.

This is an important step in the reorganisation process. The order is designed to ensure a fair and ordered transfer of staff to the new councils, the water and sewerage authorities and the Scottish children's reporter administration. Successful transition to the new authorities is dependent on the efforts of both councillors and staff.

Education Consultation

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what criteria he uses to establish which bodies should be consulted on educational matters. [25589]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Consultees are selected from lists held by the Scottish Office Education Department of organisations which may have an interest in educational matters. As account is taken of the relevance of each subject to particular bodies, all the organisations listed do not necessarily receive all consultation papers as a matter of course. The aim, however, is always to include the widest appropriate range of interests in any consultation exercise.

Traffic Calming

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidelines his Department has issued to the roads departments of Scottish local authorities relating to the provision of traffic calming measures with particular reference to the traffic flows necessary to justify these measures. [25333]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office Industry Department issued guidance on traffic calming to local roads authorities in October 1994. This refers to traffic flows and advises local authorities that traffic calming is more suited to roads which have lower traffic levels and is likely to be inappropriate on high-speed roads with high volumes of through traffic. The guidance also indicates that traffic calming should not be discounted on busier routes since such treatment may be used to tackle a particular road safety problem. The final decision on which roads, other than trunk roads, should be treated with traffic calming rests with the local roads authorities themselves.

Ayr Road

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much policing operations at the Ayr road route arising out of roads construction at the location have cost thus far. [25335]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As at 14 May 1995, policing costs associated with the construction of the Ayr road route amounted to £145,526.

Expelled Pupils

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many pupils were (a) suspended and (b) expelled in each financial year since 1979–80 in each education authority in Scotland. [25336]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information sought is not at present held centrally. However, following a circular issued by the Scottish Office Education Department last year, education authorities are to collect and provide information on exclusions on a school-by-school basis with effect from the current school session as part of the annual exercise to collect statistics on attendance and absence.

Returns provided in 1993 by education authorities for a working group, comprising representatives from the Scottish Office and the Association of Directors of Education in Scotland, indicated that there were around 25,000 exclusions from school in total during the school year 1992–93.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was (a) the amount of regional selective assistance recovered from Scottish companies and (b) the number of companies involved for each financial year since 1979–80; [25348]

(2) if he will list for each financial year since 1979–80 those Scottish companies where regional selective assistance was recovered because of the original terms of the offer not being met. [25349]

Mr. Kynoch: Recovery figures are given in the table for all assisted projects in Scotland. Details of grant recoveries from individual companies are commercially confidential and are not divulged.

Financial year	Amount recovered £000	Number of companies
1989–90 or earlier	67	4
1990–91	1,106	10

Planning Applications

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was (a) the total number of public inquiries held by the Scottish Office into planning applications, (b) the total costs of these inquiries and (c) the number of public inquiries for each Scottish local authority, for each financial year since 1979–80. [25340]

Mr. Kynoch: This information is available only by callendar year. The answer to part (a) is set out. Regarding part (b), the Scottish Office is responsible for the reporter's salary, travelling and subsistence expenses and the hire of the accommodation. The remainder of the costs are borne by the participating parties. It is therefore not possible to give details of the total costs of these inquiries. Information regarding part (c) is not available.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of (a) planning applications passed to the Scottish Office for consideration and (b) planning application refusals overturned by the Scottish Office for each year since 1979–80. [25341]

Mr. Kynoch: This information is only available by calendar year and is as set out.

[1] These figures relate to the number of applications, in each given year which planning authorities were minded to grant consent to, but which, for various reasons, were required to be notified to the Secretary of State so that he could decide whether or not to call them in for his own determination.

Scottish Prison Service

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what targets he has set the Scottish Prison Service for 1995–96, its third year of agency status. [26099]

Mr. Lang: I have set the chief executive of the Scottish Prison Service the following targets:

Performance measures	Key targets
The number of prisoners unlawfully at large.	—No A category prisoners should escape. —The number of escapes by B category prisoners should be no higher that 2.3 per 1,000 prisoners.
The number of significant incidents.	The number of significant incidents should be no higher than 10.
The number of serious assaults on staff and prisoners.	—The number of serious assaults on staff should be no higher than four per 1,000 staff. —The number of serious assaults on other prisoners should be no higher than 10 per 1,000 prisoners.
Basic quality of life for prisoners.	By April 1996, 63 per cent. of available prisoner places will have access to forms of night sanitation.
The amount of available opportunities for prisoners' self development.	85 per cent. of convicted prisoners should have the opportunity of at least seven hours per working day of programmed activities.
Time out of cell for unconvicted prisoners.	On average, 30 per cent. of unconvicted prisoner hours— seven in 24— should be available for out of cell activities.
Average annual cost per prisoner place.	To keep costs within £26,724 per place available for use.
The level of absence through staff sickness.	To reduce the average number of days lost per person per year through staff sickness to 17.

Councils (Political Restrictions)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was (a) the total number of appeals lodged against the classification of posts in Scottish councils as politically restricted and the total number of successful appeals against political restriction, (b) the number of these appeals lodged for each local authority in Scotland, (c) the number of successful appeals against political restriction for each Scottish local authority and (d) the percentage figure for successful appeals for each Scottish local authority, for each financial year since 1989–90. [25337]

Mr. Kynoch: Appeals relating to the rules on political restrictions are considered by the political restrictions exemptions adjudicator. Information supplied by his office indicates that the total number of applications for exemption from political restrictions since 1989–90 is 168. Of these, 141 have been granted. Of the remaining 27, 20 were unsuccessful, two were withdrawn, four were declared invalid and one case has still to be determined. The percentage of successful applications was 84 per cent. Statistics are not recorded on a local authority basis.

[1] Notification of award made 1994–95, contract to commence in 1995–96.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what work has been contracted out (a) by his Department and (b) by agencies for which his Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25550]

Mr. Goodlad: Work contracted out in (a) the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, (b) its agency, Wilton Park and (c) the Overseas Development Administration is shown in the table.

In 1995–96, an exercise to decide on the future ownership of the Natural Resources Institute will also be completed.

FCO	Wilton Park	ODA
1993–94 Travel services
1994–95 Home security service	Cleaning services

The following services will be investigated in 1995–96 with a view to possible contracting out:

	Service
Travel accounts unit	Payroll services
Pensions	Daytime security
	Messenger services for travel implant

Note:
Additional candidates for contracting out are currently under consideration.

Retirements and Redundancies

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the annual cost to his Department of staff leaving under redundancy/early retirement schemes to incorporate (a) added years lump sum payments, (b) redundancy payments, (c) pension payments, including enhancements and (d) any other special arrangements for (i) 1993–94 (ii) 1994–95, (iii) projected for 1995–96 and (iv) projected for 1996–97. [25664]

Mr. Goodlad: The costs to the Department of early retirement and redundancies are borne form the Department's running costs provision.

A detailed breakdown of the various cost could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The total costs borne on the Department's running costs in 1993–94 and 1994–95 were £3,777,329 and £6,017,362 respectively. For 1995–96, the amount is estimated at £3,598,324. The figures cover both the diplomatic wing and the Overseas Development Administration. Projections for 1996–97 will be determined during the coming public expenditure survey.

Armenia

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what recent reports he has received of attacks and violence against Pentecostal and other evangelical Christians, and members of the Baha'i and Hare Krishna communities in Armenia; and if he will make a statement. [25593]

Mr. Goodlad: We have received no reports of such incidents.

Staff

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes there have been in the number of staff in employment by grade in (a) his office and (b) each agency for which his office is responsible (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25624]

Mr. Goodlad: The numbers of permanent staff employed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office diplomatic wing and its executive agency and the Overseas Development Administration in 1993–94, projected out-turn for 1994–95, and plans for 1995–96 are published in my Department's annual report, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. No projections broken down by grade are available.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff of (a) the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and (b) agencies for which the FCO is responsible, were employed on a casual or short-term basis in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25480]

Mr. Goodlad: I refer the hon. Member to reply that I gave on 22 May, Official Report, column 381.

Consultancy Expenditure

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the level of expenditure on consultancy by (a) his Department and (b) agencies for which his Department is responsible for (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25551]

Mr. Goodlad: The table shows the level of expenditure on consultancy by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Diplomatic and Aid Wings for 1993–94 and 1994–95 and projected figures for 1995–96 including the aid wing's agency, the Natural Resources Institute. Figures for the aid wing exclude expenditure under the aid programme.

	£ millions
	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96 Projected
Diplomatic wing	14.2	12.4	16
Aid wing	0.7	0.5	0.8
Natural Resources Institute	0.02	0.04	0.05

British Prisoners Overseas

Mr. Ottoway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government on appeals for clemency on behalf of British nationals who are sentenced to death overseas. [26110]

Mr. Baldry: An appeal for clemency is a request to foreign authorities to exercise such leniency as they can under their own legal and constitutional system.

We do not automatically appeal for clemency on behalf of British nationals sentenced to death overseas. Appeals for clemency are considered case by case, normally once the domestic legal process has been exhausted.

We take a number of factors into account in deciding whether to appeal for clemency, including considering whether the sentence complies with established international standards on the application of the death penalty. For example:

—Is the sentence disproportionate to the crime?

—Are there grounds to believe there has been a denial or miscarriage of justice?

—Is an appeal for clemency by the prisoner allowed locally?

We also take into consideration whether the accused is a dual national, any humanitarian grounds for concern, and the likely effect of an appeal for clemency.

An appeal for clemency on behalf of a British national is in principle a bilateral matter between ourselves and the state concerned. Where a bilateral appeal has been rejected, we may consider asking our EU partners to join us in supporting an appeal.

Falklands Islands (Oil)

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what agreement British Gas has reached with Her Majesty's Government on obtaining exclusive rights to explore for oil off the Falkland Islands. [26584]

Mr. David Davis: No special agreements have been entered into between any company and either the British or the Falkland Islands Governments. The Falkland Islands Government are responsible for awarding licences to explore for hydrocarbons off the islands. They intend to seek expressions of interest in licences from all companies wishing to be involved in oil exploration.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Mr. Jonathan Carrington Miller

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Attorney-General if he will review the sentence given to Mr. Jonathan Carrington Miller at Hereford Crown court in May. [24793]

The Attorney-General: I am unable to review the sentence in this case as the offences for which the sentence was imposed fall outside the scope of my powers under the Criminal Justice Act 1988.

WALES

Public Bodies

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what date his Department has set by which all Welsh executive non-departmental public bodies must (a) establish and (b) publish registers of members' interests; [25387]

(2) if it is his policy to ensure that all Welsh executive non-departmental public bodies publish registers of members' interests; and what steps he has taken to instigate their publication [25388]

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 16 May, Official Report, column 131. I expect all Welsh executive non-departmental public bodies to establish a register within the current year.

Disabled Parking

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines he issues to ensure that spaces allocated in public car parks for the disabled are left executively for them; and what measures he is taking to ensure that those guidelines are complied with. [25761]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Designated bays can be provided on the highway or in off-street car parks under the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984. These are enforceable by law.

Guidelines for the provision and enforcement of spaces for the disabled are contained in traffic advisory leaflet 5/95 issued by the Department of Transport. Copies of the leaflet are available in the Library of the House.

In privately owned and operated car parks, it is for individual operators to take whatever steps they consider necessary to see that reserved spaces are not misused.

Further Education Funding Council

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to announce the new membership of the Further Education Funding Council for Wales; and if he will make a statement. [26433]

Mr. Richards: The following have accepted invitations to be members of the Further Education Funding Council for Wales:

Mr. Richard Webster, Chairman
Mr. Stephen Dunster
Mr. Shaun Dyke
Mr. Osborn Jones
Mrs. Caroline Lewis
Mr. Idris Price
Mr. Ken Thomas
Mr. Grant Walshe
Mr. Trevor Wilmore

Mr. Dunster, Mr. Thomas and Mr. Walshe have been reappointed for two years from 6 May 1995, and the other members appointed for three years from the same date.

Professor John Andrews continues as chief executive and member until 5 May 1997.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Lord President of the Council what is the procedure for obtaining parliamentary answers in the House of Commons from the Lord Advocate and the Solicitor-General for Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [24077]

Mr. Newton: Parliamentary questions relating to matters which fall within the responsibility of the Lord Advocate or Solicitor General for Scotland are addressed to the Secretary of State for Scotland and answered by a Scottish Office Minister.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Child Care

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Lord President of the Council what are the child care or nursery facilities within his Department; and what is the breakdown in their use (a) by grade and (b) by gender. [15233]

Mr. Newton: Privy Council Office staff are able to use the Westminster holiday play scheme, which is organised by the Office of Public Service and Science. So far, no staff have made use of this facility.

TREASURY

Treasury Reserve

Miss Lestor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all the occasions when the Treasury reserve was used in 1994–95; how much was drawn; and which Departments or Ministries were involved. [25734]

Mr. Aitken: Provisional outturn figures for public expenditure for 1994–95 will be published as described in the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Southport (Mr. Banks) on 23 May. The information published will include revised plans and provisional outturn by Department, and the difference between these constitutes the net claim on the reserve. Because these are net figures which include offsets for underspending, it is not possible to break them down into individual claims.

Miss Lestor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the occasions in the last five years when the Overseas Development Administration has had to draw on Treasury reserves. [25735]

Mr. Aitken: The ODA has drawn on the reserve 22 times in the past five years. The claims were agreed in the usual way on the occasions listed:

1990–91 Main Estimates
1990–91 Summer Estimates
1991–92 Winter Supplementary
1991–92 Main Estimates
1991–92 winter Supplementary
1991–92 Spring Supplementary
1992–93 Winter Supplementary
1993–94 Spring Supplementary
1994–95 Main Estimates
1994–95 Winter Supplementary
1994–95 Spring Supplementary
1995–96 Main Estimates

Staff

Ms Hodge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what changes there have been in the numbers of staff employed by (a) the Treasury and (b) agencies for which the Treasury is responsible, listing the changes in the number of staff agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what changes are projected for 1995–96; [25063]

(2) how many posts were lost in (a) the Treasury and (b) agencies for which the Treasury is responsible, listing total posts lost agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and how many posts are proposed to be lost in 1995–96;

(3) what changes there have been in the number of staff in employment by grade in (a) the Treasury and (b) each agency for which the Treasury is responsible in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96; [25628]

(4) how many staff of (a) the Treasury and (b) agencies for which the Treasury is responsible were employed on a casual or short-term basis in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25417]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The numbers of permanent and casual staff employed by the Treasury in 1993–94, projected outturn for 1994–95 and plans for 1995–96 are published in the Departmental report of the Chancellor's smaller Departments, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Projections by grade are not available. The Treasury does not have any executive agencies.

Bank of England Inflation Report

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to instigate an inquiry into the disclosure of the Bank of England's inflation report conclusions before the release time of 11.30 am on 11 May.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 23 May 1995]: The bank's inflation report was published at 11.30 am on Thursday 11 May. I have no reason to believe that any unauthorised person had access to the report or its conclusions prior to that time.

HEALTH

City and East London FHSA

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date she received the section 20(3) report referred to in the City and East London family health services authority 1994 management letter. [23944]

Mr. Malone: On 2 February 1995.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the (a) chairmen and (b) members of the City and East London family health services authority since 1 January 1990; and what were their terms of office. [25558]

Mr. Malone: The City and East London family health services authority was established on 17 September 1990. Those who have served as chairmen since then are:

Ms Jacqui Lait from 17 September 1990 to 31 October 1991;

Mr. Norman Warner from 1 November 1991 to 31 August 1994; and Mr. Peter Holwell from 1 September 1994. Mr. Holwell's term of office is due to expire on 31 March 1996.

The appointment of non-executive members to City and East London FHSA is a matter for North Thames regional health authority, the hon. Member may wish to contact Sir William Staveley, the chairman, for details.

Skin Cancer

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what information campaigns her Department is funding to increase understanding and awareness of the dangers of exposure to the sun; [24578]

(2) what work her Department has undertaken in the past year to raise awareness of the dangers to the skin of exposure to sunlight; [24579]

(3) what steps her Department is taking to ensure that children are protected from exposure to the sun during the summer months; and if she will make a statement. [25477]

Mr. Sackville: Skin cancer is a serious public health problem—and one that is largely preventable. In pursuit of "The Health of the Nation" strategy to halt the year on year increase in the incidence of skin cancer, the Department is collaborating with a number of organisations on a range of initiatives and "health alliances" aimed at tackling skin cancer. These include:

surveys on behaviour and attitudes to sun exposure in order to refine targeting of action; research projects on the nature of skin cancer to help provide a better understanding of prevention and treatment strategies;

the issue of comprehensive guidance to the NHS on local skin cancer prevention strategies;

public information initiatives, such as ultraviolet radiation levels on Television weather forecasts; a Freephone Helpline, and a factsheet on UVR from the National Radiological Protection Board;

the launch of a "sun know-how" programme of skin cancer prevention initiatives by the Health Education Authority involving more than 1,000 local organisations;

the issue earlier this month of "Sun Awareness and Protection Guidelines for Schools" to encourage the implementation of prudent sun protection policies in schools; most recently, the launch of a poster from the Cancer Research Campaign and the Department aimed specifically at primary health care teams giving prevention and early diagnosis advice.

In addition, the Health Education Authority is participating in a Sun Awareness Week starting on 5 June, when a number of mainly local events will be mounted.

The Department will continue to work actively with others to reduce the rising incidence of skin cancer over the next decade and beyond.

Immunisation

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of adverse reaction among children to immunisation have been reported by the medical profession to her Department in each of the last five years. [24564]

Mr. Sackville: The number of reports of adverse reactions to all vaccines in children reported to the Medicines Control Agency is shown in the table, with the total number of immunisations given to children as part of the childhood vaccine programme:

Time period	Number of UK reports of adverse reactions (children aged 16 years or less)	Estimated number of immunisations given as part of the UK childhood vaccine programme (children aged 16 years or less)
June 91–May 92	481	8,000,000
June 92–May 93	1,585	11,000,000
June 93–May 94	1,125	10,000,000
June 94–present	1,844	18,000,000

Notes:

1. Information about the adverse reactions for the period June 1991 to May 1992 has not been provided because of disproportionate cost. A report of a reaction does not necessarily mean that it was caused by the vaccine.
2. In the time period shown, considerable changes have been made to the childhood immunisation programme. Hib vaccine was introduced in October 1992 and the measles and rubella immunisation campaign was carried out during November 1994.

Local Government Reorganisation, Cleveland

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the implications for the implementation of effective care in the community services in Cleveland when the Tees health authority makes arrangements with four social services departments following local government reorganisation; [25221]

(2) if she will make a statement on the implications for child protection services and procedures in the Cleveland area—including the effect on children on the child protection register—resulting from local government reorganisation in Cleveland; and what guidance she has issued in relation to how other agencies, including health, probation and police should maintain effective and consistent working arrangements with four social services departments. [25222]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Kingswood (Mr. Berry) on 17 May, Official Report, columns 281-82.

Consultancy Expenditure

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the level of expenditure on consultancy by (a) her Department and (b) agencies for which her Department is responsible for (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) the projected figures for 1995–96. [25634]

Mr. Sackville: The Department of Health and its agencies have spent the following amounts from running costs on consultancy.

1993–94 : £15,933,037
1994–95 : £18,479,405

The projected figure for 1995–96 is in the region of £15,600,000 and is based on 1993–94 prices.

Separate expenditure for the Department and agencies could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Patients Charter

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will provide details of the 10 trusts which came closest to meeting each of the new patients charter targets on out-patient waiting times and the area trusts which were furthest from meeting the targets in the latest quarter for which figures are available, indicating the percentages of patients concerned. [25572]

Mr. Malone: Data on out-patient waiting times at individual trusts will be published in full shortly and placed in the Library.

Staff Contracts

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she now has to require NHS trusts to remove gagging clauses from the terms of staff contracts. [26077]

Mr. Malone: The contents of employment contracts are a matter to be decided between national health service trusts and their staff and must be expressed in a way which does not conflict with the principles and advice outlined in the NHS Executive's document, "Guidance to staff on relations with the public and the media—EL(93)51". Copies of the guidance are available in the Library.

Mental Health Funding

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what extent a social deprivation score is included as a weighting factor in allocation formulae for mental health funding. [26073]

Mr. Malone: There is no index of deprivation in the formula. Instead it uses two needs indices, one for acute services and the other for psychiatric services, both of which take account of a number of health and socio-economic factors.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list by cost all the NHS projects that have been fully or partly funded under the private finance initiative, and all those currently under discussion; [26106]

(2) how much investment has been made in the NHS under the private finance initiative in each year since the scheme began. [26105]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 21 April at cols 312–13.

Hospital Maintenance

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list by region the hospital maintenance backlog as at 31 March. [26078]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 8 December 1994 at cols 359-60 for the latest information available.

Competitive Tendering

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library a list of the contracts for hospital and health services awarded so far under the competitive tendering process by each district health authority. [26072]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Departmental Plans

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are her plans for the work of the Department in 1995–96 and beyond. [26434]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have agreed a statement of the aims, goals and priorities for my Department for 1995–96 and subsequent years.

The statement covers the whole range of the Department's work relating to health and social services, European Union and other international issues, and internal management.

The statement includes our specific priorities for the National Health Service Executive, which are taken forward in more detail in the NHS Executive's business plan for 1995–96, approved by the NHS Policy Board, and which was published on 5 April 1995.

Copies of the statement will be placed in the Library.

Statement of Responsibilities and Accountabilities

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she intends to publish the statement of responsibilities and accountabilities foreshadowed in the document published in October 1993 on changes in the NHS, "Managing the new NHS". [26435]

Mrs. Virgina Bottomley: The statement of responsibilities and accountabilities is being published today. It explains how the Government's responsibilities for health and social care in England are discharged by the Department of Health and the national health service, and the lines of accountability within both organisations to the Secretary of State and to Parliament. Copies of the statement will be placed in the Library.

Community Care Conferences (Wheelchair Access)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if all the venues for local community care charter regional conferences had wheelchair access facilities; and if she will list all the venues. [25397]

Mr. Bowis: Arrangements were made at all the venues used for the regional conferences on local community care charters to allow attendance by disabled delegates. Disabled delegates were invited to contact the conference organisers to specify their needs. Conferences have been arranged at the following locations: Grand hotel, Broad street, Bristol; Wigan conference centre, Waterside drive, Swan Meadow road, Wigan; Civic centre, Newcastle-upon-Tyne; Hotel Russell, Russell square, London WC2 and Jarvis Grand hotel, Granby street, Leicester.

Treatment Costs

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answers of 9 and 11 May, Official Report, columns 409–10 and 574, (1) if she will make a statement on the relationship between the reductions in treatment costs and length of stay in hospital between 1982–83 and 1992–93; [25904]

(2) if she will make a statement on the average cost of treating an acute patient contained in the departmental report, Cm 2812, between 1982–83 and 1990–91. [25903]

Mr. Sackville: Over the 10-year period from 1982–83 there has been a shift towards day case treatments and shorter hospital stays. These changes reflect improving clinical practice and have brought benefits to patients, who recover better at home with their families, and economic advantages to the national health service, which can treat more patients within the same resources, while maintaining high standards of care.

Casualty Officer Posts

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the number of vacancies in medical posts in casualty units around the country. [25900]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the table.

Whole-time equivalent vacant posts not occupied by a locum in England as at 30 September 1993, accident and emergency, by grade

	Number
Consultant	10
Staff grade	4
Senior registrar	2
Registrar	4
Senior house officer	4
Total	24

Note:
All figures are rounded to the nearest whole number.

GP Fundholding

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of general practitioners are fundholders in each region. [25899]

Mr. Malone: From April 1995, it is estimated that 39 per cent. of general practitioners in England are fundholders, serving over 41 per cent. of the population.

Information, by region, on the general practitioner fundholding scheme is shown in the table.

GP fundholding scheme by region—1994–95

Region	Number of funds	Number of fundholding practices	Number of fundholding GPs	Percentage of GPs[1] that are fundholders	Population served by a fundholding GP (percentage)
Northern and Yorkshire	265	321	1,500	41	40

Estimates from regional health authorities.
Note:
[1] Unrestricted principals taken from April 1994 GP Census.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioner fundholders have contracted with (a) NHS trusts and (b) district health authorities for (i) health visiting services and (ii) community psychiatric nursing services in each of the last five years. [25759]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not available centrally.

Community health services have been included in the general practitioner fundholding scheme since April 1993. GP fundholders are required to contract for health visiting services with an established national health service provider of community nursing services, or with a provider of community mental health services for community psychiatric nursing services.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on geographical variations in the uptake of general practitioner fundholding. [25890]

Mr. Malone: The strength of general practitioner fundholding is its voluntary nature. It is to be expected therefore that the rate at which family doctors take up the opportunities of fundholding will vary, depending on local circumstances and the state of their practice development. The extensions to fundholding announced last October provide a wider range of options for general practitioner teams to improve services for patients in this way.

Hospitals

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 30 March, Official Report, col 716, what indication the information obtained from energy consumption returns gives of the change in the number of hospitals between 1 April 1994 and 1 April 1995; and if she will publish the numbers and make a statement. [25897]

Mr. Malone: The change in the number of hospitals in England between 1 April 1994 and 1 April 1995 obtained from energy consumption returns is not yet available. These figures have to be treated with caution because they do not define hospitals in accordance with section 128 of the National Health Service Act 1977 and include estimates for incomplete returns.

Primary Care, London

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the projected revenue savings from the closure of London hospitals in the next three years in real terms; and what is the projected extra money spent in London on primary care in each of the next three years. [25901]

Mr. Malone: The revenue savings expected to be released following the changes announced on 4 April are currently estimated to be around £75 million per year. The timing of the release of the savings will depend on the detailed implementation of proposals. Figures for total projected expenditure on primary care are not available. Most elements of family health services expenditure are primarily demand-led and funded accordingly. However, investment in primary and community health services in the London initiative zone area alone is likely to exceed £200 million over the next three years.

Broadmoor Hospital

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what independent monitoring there has been of the Broadmoor hospital re-build fund; and if she will make a statement. [25760]

Mr. Bowis: This is the responsibility of the Special Hospitals Service Authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the authority for details.

Organ Donation

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training programmes have been initiated for doctors in respect of requesting permission from relatives prior to organ donation. [25881]

Mr. Sackville: Much is being done by hospitals in education of their staff about organ donation and approaches to bereaved relatives, including bereavement counselling. As part of this the Government, following consultation with the royal colleges, are piloting a programme of information and training for doctors and nurses working in intensive care units development by the European donor hospital education programme.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the proposed national registration day to promote the national computerised registration system for organ donors. [25889]

Mr. Sackville: We will as usual be supporting the publicity activities organised by the group of charities known as "Transplants in Mind" during its National Transplant Week which is held each year in conjunction with the British Transplant Games in July. This year their activities will focus on the national health service organ donor register.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what support her Department has provided for the national computerised registration scheme for organ donors; what is its advertising budget; and what has been the expenditure to date on information packs. [25882]

Mr. Sackville: The Department set up the national health service organ donor register in October 1994. In addition to funding the cost of setting up and maintaining the Register, which is held at the United Kingdom Transplant Support Service Authority, we spent £1.53 million in 1994–95 on publicity material and activities to promote the register. It is planned to spend a similar sum in the current year. This has included national, regional and local newspaper advertisements and the production of 10 million information leaflets—"Life Don't Keep it to Yourself"—containing registration forms of which more than 7 million have already been distributed. About £7,500 was spent on producing 20,200 copies of the "NHS Organ Register and General Practitioners" booklet which were sent to every general practice in England. The United Kingdom Transplant Support Service Authority has also produced an information leaflet for the general public and a resources and an information pack for the transplant community.

Treatment Numbers

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many bed days of finished episodes there were in each of the last 10 years; [25883]

(2) how many people were treated as a hospital in-patient or day-care patient without going on to a waiting list in each of the last 10 years. [25885]

Mr. Sackville: The available information for the years 1988–89 to 1993–94 has been published in the annual volumes of Hospital Episode Statistics. Information for the years 1986 and 1987–88 is not available. For 1984 and 1985 information was published in the relevant volumes of Hospital In-Patient Enquiry, but because of changes to information systems in the NHS after 1985, figures are not directly comparable with HES. Copies of the publications are available in the Library.

The latest available information for patients admitted immediately is shown in the table. Comparable figures are not available for earlier years.

Year	Patients admitted immediately
1988–89	3,597,501
1989–90	3,748,774
1990–91	3,786,756
1991–92	3,829,414
1992–93	4,037,827
1993–94	4,291.304

Hospital Transport

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many free hospital bus services are provided by (a) her Department, (b) trust hospitals and (c) in total; what was the total expenditure on these services; and what proposals she has to reduce them. [25887]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Tobacco Advertising

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 9 May, Official Report, columns 412–13, if she will define the meaning of the phrase "not have a major impact" in terms of a percentage reduction in the consumption of tobacco if tobacco advertising were banned. [25891]

Mr. Sackville: It is not possible to quantify this phrase in terms of a percentage reduction in tobacco consumption.

Information Dinner

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the budget for her Department's information dinner in each of the last five years. [25893]

Mr. Sackville: The Department does not have an information dinner. The right hon. Lady may wish to provide clarification.

"Making London Better"

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estiamte she has made of public support for her document entitled "Making London Better". [25895]

Mr. Malone: "Making London Better" set out the strategic direction for health services in London and the framework within which change would take place. It stated that, where appropriate, there would be statutory consultation before decisions were taken. Proposals for a number of changes have already been the subject of local public consultation by health authorities in the usual way. Detailed information on the public response to those consultations may be obtained from the health authorities concerned.

Local Pay

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her answer of 2 May, Official Report column 713, what projected savings in staff costs will result from the estimated cost of £500,000 for the financial year 1994–95 for the National Health Service Executive support programme for the introduction of local pay. [25898]

Mr. Malone: The purpose of the introduction of local pay throughout the health service, facilitated by this support programme, is to provide more flexible working, to redeploy finite resources and to target them more closely on improvements in the quality and quantity of healthcare. The support programme is designed to facilitate the spread of good practice developed by trusts which have made significant progress in developing local pay schemes for different staff groups.

Cancelled Operations

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her answer of 16 March, Official Report, column 704, how many operations were cancelled on the day or after the date when the patient was due to be admitted to hospital by regional health authority, district health authority and in total; and how many were not readmitted within one month for the fourth quarter of 1994–95. [25902]

Mr. Malone: This information will be placed in the Library when available.

Termination Payments

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many termination payments have been made by national health service trusts to (a) chief executives, (b) general managers and (c) senior managers; and what was the total amount for each trust since 30 September 1994. [25788]

Mr. Malone: Since 30 September 1994 national health service trusts have reported to the National Health Service Executive three termination payments made to chief executives and 38 payments made to both general and senior managers(1).

The total amount for each trust is as follows:

NHS trust	Amount £
Broadgreen Hospital NHS Trust	86,167
Bromley Hospitals NHS Trust	25,400
Burnley Health Care NHS Trust	245,000
Dudley Priority Health NHS Trust	17,120
East Hertfordshire NHS Trust	22,500
Enfield Community Care NHS Trust	35,522
Frimley Park Hospital NHS Trust	6,328
Kingston Hospital NHS Trust	37,402
Kings Health Care NHS Trust	23,627
Mid Anglia Community Health NHS Trust	5,449
New Possibilities NHS Trust	65,199
Northgate and Prudhoe NHS Trust	6,500
North Middlesex Hospital NHS Trust	11,328
North West London NHS Trust	6,500
Northern Birmingham Mental Health NHS Trust	74,526
Nottingham City Hospital NHS Trust	54,960
Nottinghamshire Ambulance Service NHS Trust	17,500
Plymouth Hospitals NHS Trust	21,900
Royal Free Hampstead NHS Trust	35,295
Royal Liverpool Children's Hospital NHS Trust	12,122
Royal Liverpool University Hospital NHS Trust	35,626
Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital NHS Trust	7,130
Salford Mental Health Services NHS Trust	15,874
South Devon Health Care NHS Trust	37,740
South Downs Health NHS Trust	8,727
South Kent Community Healthcare NHS Trust	30,636
Southmead Health Services NHS Trust	30,649

NHS trust	Amount £
Stockport Healthcare NHS Trust	21,940
West Herts Community Health NHS Trust	69,505
Winchester and Eastleigh NHS Trust	19,504
York Health Services NHS Trust	55,000

[1] Payments made to general managers and payments made to senior managers are not separately identified in the information held centrally.

Kidney Patients

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the adequacy of Manchester Royal Infirmary's provision for kidney transplant patients. [25879]

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for district health authorities, in consultation with the North West regional health authority, to decide. The right hon. Member may wish to contact Sir Donald Wilson, regional chairman, for further information.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of how many patients die each year from kidney failure; how many of these did not receive dialysis; and what assessment she has made of how many would have survived if they had received a transplant. [25880]

Mr. Sackville: In 1992, the latest year for which figures are available, 856[1] people died from chronic renal failure. Information on how many of these were not receiving dialysis is not available. It is not therefore known how many were on the active kidney transplant waiting list. No estimate can be made of how many would have survived if they had received a transplant.

[1] Data received from the Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals provide kidney dialysis treatment in each region of the NHS; how many patients there are in the catchment area of each hospital; and how many hospitals provide kidney transplants. [25888]

Mr. Sackville: The information is not available in the form requested. Kidney dialysis and transplant provision for England in 1993 will be placed in the Library. It is not possible to show numbers of patients per catchment area, as the number of renal units are limited and there is much cross-boundary activity. There are 30 hospitals in England that provide kidney transplants for adult patients.

St. Bartholomew's Hospital

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many patients are seen on average each week at the minor injuries unit at St. Bartholomew's hospital. [25896]

Mr. Malone: The average figure for weekdays is 36 people per day and for weekends 13 people per day.

Waiting Lists

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people waited for hospital in-patient or day-care treatment for (a) nought to three months and (b) nought to six months in each of the last 10 years; [25884]

(2) what percentage of patients treated in hospital have come from a waiting list in each of the last 10 years. [25886]

Mr. Malone: Such information as is available is given in "Hospital Episode Statistics, England". The latest year for which information has so far been published is 1993–94. Copies are available in the Library.

Dr. Johnstone

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish communications between the Department of Health NHS Management Executive and Camden and Islington health authority over the last six years in relation to Dr. Johnstone's legal action. [25892]

Mr. Malone: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

London Hospital

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many name changes the London Hospital has had in the last five years; and what those names were. [25894]

Mr. Malone: The name of the Royal London hospital has not changed.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much has been spent on legal aid in each of the five years. [24790]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Net expenditure on legal aid in each of the last five years was as follows:

1990–91: £682 million
1991–92: £906 million
1992–93: £1,093 million
1993–94: £1,210 million
1994–95[1]: £1,294 million

[1] Estimated outturn

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of the overall cost of legal aid has been spent on administration in each of the last five years. [24769]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The total cost of legal aid over the past five years has been:

1990–91: £682 million
1991–92: £906 million
1992–93: £1,093 million
1993–94: £1,210 million
1994–95[1]: £1,294 million

The Legal Aid Board is responsible for administering the majority of that expenditure, namely:

1990–91: £526 million
1991–92: £720 million
1992–93: £873 million
1993–94: £974 million
1994–95[1]: £1,032 million

The cost of the Legal Aid Board's administration are met by separate provision as follows:

1990–91: £33.2 million
1991–92: £41.2 million
1992–93: £43.7 million
1993–94: £47.5 million
1994–95[1]: £49.0 million

This gives the following figures for the board's administration costs as a percentage of the legal aid money that the board deals with:

1990–91: 5.9 per cent.
1991–92: 5.4 per cent.
1992–93: 4.8 per cent.
1993–94: 4.7 per cent.
1994–95[1]: 4.5 per cent.

The remainder of legal aid expenditure relates to criminal legal aid in the higher criminal courts, which is administered by the courts concerned. It is not possible to isolate the costs to the courts of administering this part of the legal aid scheme.

Note:
[1]Figures for 1994–95 are estimated.

Official Print of Statutes

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he expects there to be an official print of all statutes. [25513]

Mr. John M. Taylor: An official print of all statutes is published by HMSO immediately upon Royal Assent. An annual volume of Public General Acts and Measures is prepared by the Statutory Publications Office for publication by HMSO. The four parts constituting the 1993 volume were published in March of this year.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Contributions Agency

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are currently employed (a) in Wales and (b) in Newcastle upon Tyne in the work of the National Insurance Contributions Agency; and what were the corresponding figures for five and 10 years ago. [25014]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The administration of the Contributions Agency is the responsibility of Mrs. Faith Boardman, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Dafydd Wigley, dated 23 May 1995:

As Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency, I have responsibility for answering on operational matters relating to the Agency. I have been asked to reply to your question about how many people are currently employed in a) Wales and b) Newcastle Upon Tyne in the work of the Contributions Agency; and what were the corresponding figures for five and ten years ago.

The Agency currently employs 205 staff in Wales. This includes staff both in Field Operations and the Agency's Civil Recovery Section in Cardiff.

In being asked to supply a figure for the number of staff employed in Newcastle Upon Tyne I have interpreted this to mean those staff who work on the Agency's Newcastle Estate (ie excluding those staff employed in Field Operations offices in the Newcastle area). The number of staff currently employed by the Agency at its Newcastle estate is 5598.

The Contributions Agency was established as a "Next Steps" agency in April 1991, and prior to that the Contributions Unit had operated within the Department of Social Security from April 1990. Whilst I cannot provide exact details of the number of staff employed by the Contributions Unit in Wales five years ago, I can tell you that the total number of staff employed in our Wales and Severn Estuary Divisions at 1 May 1990 was 307. However, some of the staff from the Severn Estuary Division would have been working in its two offices located in England, and records of the precise split in staff numbers between England and Wales have not been kept.

The number employed by the Contributions Unit at the Newcastle estate on 1 May 1990 was 2029.

I regret that I am unable to supply corresponding figures for ten years ago as they are not kept in that form. The records of the number of staff actually employed on contributions duties cannot be dis-aggregated from the overall staffing of the Department of Social Security.

I hope you will find this answer helpful. If I can be of any further assistance please let me know.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many jobs will be lost from the Porthmadog office of the Contributions Agency as a result of the centralisation of the work of the agency to North East England; and if he will make a statement. [25006]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The administration of the Contributions Agency is the responsibility of Mrs. Faith Boardman, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Dafydd Wigley, dated 23 May 1995:

As Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency, I have responsibility for answering questions on operational matters relating to the Agency. I have been asked to reply to your question about how many jobs will be lost from the Porthmadog office of the Contributions Agency as a result of centralisation of work to North East England.

Over the last four years the Contributions Agency has centralised some work in Newcastle Upon Tyne while maintaining a local presence. In many areas we have also gradually been reducing the number of local offices by concentrating Field staff in larger, more viable units. Nationally, the combined effect has been to improve the flexibility, efficiency and quality of the service provided. At present I am looking at proposals to establish a Call Centre to handle, on a national basis, all unsolicited telephone calls, but as yet no decision has been made as to where this would be located, and we are conducting a comprehensive national review of the overall organisation and numbers of our Field Offices in order to see how far we should extend the efficiencies already achieved in some areas.

Since the Contributions Agency was formed in April 1991 four staff have been employed at the Porthmadog Office. However, with the need to achieve operational efficiencies it has quite recently been decided to transfer the processing of clerical work dealt with at Porthmadog to our office in Rhyl. This has resulted in a reduction of two clerical staff at Porthmadog.

As has been the case since April 1991, the Benefits Agency in Porthmadog will continue to provide a counter service for customers making enquiries about National Insurance matters. If a customer wishes a private interview with a Contributions Agency officer this can be arranged and can take place in the Porthmadog office. Additionally, there is a Customer Access Telephone in the reception area of Porthmadog office which allows the customer to speak directly to Contributions Agency staff free of charge.

Retirement Pension

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if his Department automatically sends letters notifying people of their eligibility for a pension when they reach retirement age to people (a) who have worked and paid national insurance contributions in the last 25 years and (b) who have not worked and not paid national insurance contributions in the last 25 years. [25039]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The administration of retirement pensions is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr Jon Owen Jones, dated 23 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Department automatically sending letters to people at retirement age concerning their eligibility for Retirement Pension.

Approximately four months before a person reaches State pension age (60 for a woman and 65 for a man), the Benefits Agency automatically sends them, by computer process, a form on which to claim Retirement Pension; this is provided they have established some entitlement to a pension, however small. In the case of a man, two claim forms are sent. This is to enable a wife to also make a claim on her husband's National Insurance record. An accompanying form sets out the amount of pension to which it is known the person is so far entitled. Both Welsh and English versions of the forms are sent to addresses in Wales.

Even if there is no entitlement to any pension at the time the claim forms would be sent, they would still be sent if it was known the person had previously lived abroad or if the person is shown to be either widowed or divorced. In these cases, contributions paid abroad or paid by the former spouse may help establish entitlement to pension.

The automatic issue of forms to claim Retirement Pension is not a legal requirement, but it is in line with the Agency's aim to provide a high level of Customer Service.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Bronchitis and Emphysema

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many chronic bronchitis and emphysema claims have been (a) instigated and (b) successful in each of the last five years (i) in total and (ii) in each benefits area directorate. [24773]

Mr. Hague: The administration of industrial injuries disablement benefit is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. Mike O'Brien, dated 23 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about claims made for chronic bronchitis and emphysema both nationally and in each area directorate in the last five years.

Information about the number of claims and successful claims is not available for all the period requested because chronic bronchitis and emphysema did not become a prescribed disease until 13 September 1993. The available information has been provided at Annex A.

There was a "take on" exercise which lasted twelve months and the data shown in the table, under the heading September 1993–September 1994, covers this exercise. The data under the heading October 1994–March 1995 covers the six month period from the end of the exercise to the end of the 1994–95 statistical year.

I hope you find this reply helpful

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the additional revenue gained to the national insurance fund if women aged between 60 and 65 years were subject to national insurance contributions. [24947]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The effect on the national insurance fund for 1995–96 is estimated to be a gain a of some £70 million.

Note: figures are for Great Britain.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the additional cost to the national insurance fund of exempting men aged over 60 years from paying national insurance contributions [24949]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The effect on the national insurance fund for 1995–96 is estimated to be a loss of some £350 million.

Note: figures are for Great Britain.

Staff

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what changes there have been in the numbers of staff employed by (a) the Department of Social Security and (b) agencies for which the Department of Social Security is responsible, listing the changes in the number of staff agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what changes are projected for 1995–96; [25064]

(2) what changes there have been in the number of staff in employment by grade in (a) his Department and (b) each agency for which his Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96; [25629]

(3) how many staff of (a) the Department of Social Security and (b) agencies for which the DSS is responsible were employed on a casual or short-term basis in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25419]

Mr. Hague: The numbers of permanent and casual staff employed by this Department and each of its executive agencies in 1993–94, projected outturn for 1994–95, and plans for 1995–96 are published in the Department's annual report, a copy of which is in the Library.

Agency Job Losses

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many posts were lost in (a) the Department of Social Security and (b) agencies for which the Department of Social Security is responsible, listing the total lost posts agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and how many posts are proposed to be lost in 1995–96. [25078]

Mr. Hague: The information is not available in the form requested.

Income Distribution

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide an analysis and examples of the family types and occupational groups who appear in the top 10 per cent. of the income distribution. [26387]

Mr. Lilley: In 1991–92, the latest period for which figures are available, there were 5.7 million people in the top tenth of the income distribution in the UK, of whom 13 per cent. were pensioners, 41 per cent. couples without children, 26 per cent. couples with children and 19 per cent. single, all after housing costs.

Analysis of the patterns of personal disposable income throughout the UK income distribution will be included in the next edition of households below average income statistics, covering the period 1979 to 1992–93, which will be published on Friday 2 June.

EMPLOYMENT

Training and Enterprise Council Licences

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what progress Hertfordshire training and enterprise council is making in meeting the criteria for the award of a three-year licence. [26341]

Mr. Paice: I am pleased to announce that Hertfordshire training and enterprise council has now completed the process of meeting the rigorous standard we set for the award of the new three-year licences.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what progress Thames Valley Enterprise TEC is making in meeting the criteria for the award of a three-year licence. [26342]

Mr. Paice: I am pleased to announce that Thames Valley Enterprise TEC has now completed the process of meeting the rigorous standard we set for the award of he new three-year licences.

Mr. Biffen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what progress Shropshire training and enterprise council is making in meeting the criteria for the award of a three-year licence. [26583]

Mr. Paice: I am please to announce that Shropshire training and enterprise council has now completed the process of meeting the rigorous standard we set for the award of the new three-year licences.

EDUCATION

Staff

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what changes there have been to the number of staff employed by (i) her Department and (ii) each agency for which the DFE is responsible in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96; [25491]

(2) what changes there have been to the number of staff employment by grade in (i) the Department for Education and (ii) each agency for which the DFE is responsible in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96; [25422]

(3) how many staff of (a) the Department for Education and (b) agencies for which the Department for Education is responsible, were employed on a casual or short term basis in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96; [25506]

(4) how many posts were lost in (a) the Department for Education and (b) agencies for which the Department for Education is responsible, listing the total posts agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95 and how many posts are proposed to be lost in 1995–96. [25073]

Mr. Boswell: The numbers of permanent and casual staff employed by the Department, including the Teachers Pensions Agency, in 1993–94, projected outturn for 1994–95, and plans for 1995–96 are published in the departmental report, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. No projections broken down by grade are available.

Consultancy Expenditure

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the level of expenditure on consultancy by (a) her Department and (b) agencies for which her Department is responsible for (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96.

Mr. Boswell: The level of expenditure committed by the Department's central purchasing unit on consultancy for the periods requested is as follows:

(a) Department
1993–94	1,300,000
1994–95	1,400,000
1995–96	[1]3,000,000
(b) Agencies
1993–94	190,000
1994–95	285,000
1995–96	[1]240,000

[1] Projected.

Retirements and Redundancies

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many staff of (a) the Department for Education and (b) agencies for which the Department for Education is responsible (i) took early retirement, (ii) took voluntary redundancy, (iii) took compulsory redundancy and (iv) were retired on medical grounds in (1) 1993–94 and (2) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25505]

Mr. Boswell: Information on DFE staff working in the Teachers' Pensions Agency cannot be separately identified from the Department as a whole without disproportionate cost.

During 1993–94, a total of 45 staff took early retirement and 10 retired on medical grounds.

In 1994–95, 20 staff took early retirement and 11 were retired on medical grounds.

There were no redundancies during either of these years. None are planned for 1995–96, though the Department keeps its staffing requirements under constant review.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the annual cost to the Department of staff leaving under redundancy/early retirement schemes to incorporate (i) added years lump sum payments, (ii) redundancy payments, (iii) pension payments including enhancements and (iv) any other special arrangements for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95, and projected for (c) 1995–96 and (d) 1996–97. [25643]

Mr. Boswell: The costs to the Department of early retirement and redundancies are borne from the Department's running costs provision.

A detailed breakdown of the various costs could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The total costs borne on the Department's running costs in 1993–94 and 1994–95 were £4.9 million and £2.8 million respectively. For 1995–96, the amount is estimated not to exceed £2.4 million. Projections for 1996–97 will be determined during the coming Public Expenditure Survey.

Contracting Out

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, for each piece of work subject to a bidding process under the auspices of (a) her Department and (b) agencies for which her Department is responsible (i) where work was contracted out, who were the successful bidders and (ii) which contracts were won by in-house bidders in (1) 1993–94, (2) 1994–95, and (3) 1995–96.

Mr. Boswell: The information requested, resulting from market tests, is as follows:

Market Test	Year	Name of Contractor
(i) Successful bidders for work contracted out
Provision of data preparation services	1994–95	Compower Ltd.
Provision of banking services to the Teachers Pensions Agency	1995–96	Midland Bank
Development and management of a computerised register of schools	1995–96	The Schools Register
(ii) Work won by in-house bidders
Provision of telephone network management	1993–94	—
Development of small IT systems	1993–94	—
Provision of central support services (London)	1993–94	—
Provision of central support services (Darlington)	1994–95	—

All of the tests were under the auspices of the Department, apart from provision of banking services to the Teachers Pensions Agency.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what work has been contracted out (a) by her Department and (b) by agencies for which her Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) projected for 1995–96.

Mr. Boswell: Information on work which has been contracted out during the years in questions is as follows:

Description of work	Year
(a) Department
Provision of data preparation services	1994–95
Development and management of a computerised register of schools	1995–96
(b) Agencies
Provision of internal audit services to the Teacher Training Agency (TTA)	1994–95
Provision of banking services to the Teachers Pensions Agency	1995–96

There is no projection for future work to be contracted out in 1995–96, and no work was contracted out in 1993–94.

Schools Budget

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will show for each local education authority for the year 1995–96 the element of the potential schools budget which is not delegated to schools through the aggregated schools budget, expressed (a) as a percentage of the potential schools budget and (b) as a sum of money per pupil in schools covered by the LMS scheme. [25037]

Mr. Robert Squire: The percentage of the potential schools budget not delegated to schools in 1995–96 through the aggregated schools budget is shown for each local education authority in the following table, which is derived from the percentages shown as delegated in the LMS budget statements for 1995–96 published by local education authorities under section 42 of the Education Reform Act.

The Department is not yet in a position to provide the information requested at (b). I will write to my hon. Friend when these figures are available later in the year.

National Curriculum (Gardening)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans she has to introduce gardening into the national curriculum so as to equip school-leavers with the skills needed to grow vegetables. [15259]

Mr. Forth: The national curriculum has just been subject to a major review, and the revised curriculum will be introduced in schools from this September. The Government have announced that we have no plans to make any further major changes for at least five years.

TRANSPORT

Vehicle Testing

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if local authority DOT—approved testing facilities will continue to test Hackney carriages and private hire vehicles to MOT standards. [25354]

Mr. Norris: Any local authority MOT testing stations must test to MOT standards. The Government have announced that taxis and private hire vehicles will in future be treated by suitably equipped MOT testing stations, and is currently considering whether taxis would be subject either to more frequent or more rigorous inspections than under the current MOT scheme.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, if private hire vehicle operators with their own garages will be permitted to undertake MOT testing for private hire vehicles. [25355]

Mr. Norris: This is permissible at present. The criterion that any prospective MOT tester must satisfy is that they have the necessary skills and facilities to MOT test vehicles. The issue of whether or not they might test their own vehicles as well as others is irrelevant to that question.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if higher standards of MOT testing are required for taxis, public hire vehicles and other public service vehicles. [25356]

Mr. Norris: Some licensed taxis are currently exempt from MOT testing on the basis that they are subject to an annual licensing inspection carried out by the licensing authority which is at least as rigorous as the MOT test. In most cases licensing authorities who test taxis require comfort and cleanliness to be tested as well as the roadworthiness of the vehicle. These additional aspects are also included in the annual MOT tests of public service vehicles. Where the licensing authority does not test taxis or private hire vehicles, vehicles are subject to the MOT test as for private cars.

London-Tilbury-Southend Line

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what policy considerations underlie the decision to allocate the older rolling stock to the London-Tilbury-Southend line under the cascade arrangements; on what occasion this has occurred over the past decade; and if he will make a statement. [25360]

Mr. Watts: These decisions have been an operational matter for British Rail.

Wheelchair-accessible Taxis

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if flexibility will be granted to local authorities discretion, in circumstances where wheelchair-accessible vehicles are taken off the road for short periods following accidents or awaiting repair, to allow taxis which are not wheelchair accessible to be operated in the interim period, where the original vehicle will return to use. [25359]

Mr. Norris: If a taxi is taken off the road for a period, there is nothing to stop an owner transferring the taxi licence to a substitute vehicle, but the substitute will have to meet the local taxi standards, including wheelchair accessibility where appropriate; it may have to be tested if the licensing authority requires, and licensing fees may be payable.

Rail Fares

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what Exchequer funding will be made available for each of the next seven years to meet the cost of pegging rail fares; and if he will make a statement. [25613]

Mr. Watts: The Government remain firmly committed to the franchising process and to providing the subsidy needed to support passenger railway services, including the effects of the new policy on fares. The level of funding needed for the railways will depend on the bids received by the franchising director for franchises. The Government believe that privatisation will bring efficiency and other improvements to services. All these factors will affect the level of funding required by the railways.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Minerals Plans

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local minerals plans are currently in force in England and Wales. [24973]

Sir Paul Beresford: Eighteen mineral local plans have been adopted and are currently in force in England. Planning matters in Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Retirements and Redundancies

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the annual cost to the Department of staff leaving under redundancy/early retirement schemes to incorporate (i) added years lump sum payments, (ii) redundancy payments, (iii) pension payments including enhancements and (iv) any other special arrangements for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and projected for (c) 1995–96 and (d) 1996–97.

Sir Paul Beresford: The costs to the Department of early retirements and redundancies are borne from its running costs provision. A detailed breakdown of the various costs could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The total cost borne on my Department's running costs provisions for 1993–94 and 1994–95 were:

	1993–94 £	1994–95 £
DOE[1] and next steps agencies	2,601,328	2,408,042

For 1995–96, the amount is estimated at:

DOE[1] and next steps agencies	1,752,600
Property Services Agency	28,500,000

1. The figures for 1994–95 and 1995–96 are net of Treasury funding (ie 80 per cent.) of the cost of retirements occurring after 1 October 1994).

[1] excludes Property Holdings, on which information is temporarily unavailable. I will write to the hon. Member in due course.

Projections for 1996–97 will be determined during the current Public Expenditure Survey.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many staff of (a) the Department of the Environment and (b) agencies for which the Department of the Environment is responsible (i) took early retirement, (ii) took voluntary redundancy, (iii) took compulsory redundancy and (iv) were retired on medical grounds in (1) 1993–94 and (2) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25517]

Sir Paul Beresford: The following information covers staff in my Department, excluding Ordnance Survey and PSA Services.

Planning Regulations

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review the provisions of the Town and Country Planning (General Development) Order 1988, in respect of permission granted to a householder to construct an outbuilding two metres from a neighbouring dwelling without permission, in circumstances where the neighbouring householder is housebound and the erection of the outbuilding will obstruct his view. [24974]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department keeps the General Development Order under constant review. If I find that the permitted development rights granted by it are being widely abused, I shall consider taking action. I cannot, however, intervene in individual cases.

Staff

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, how many staff of (a) the Department of the Environment and (b) agencies for which the Department of the Environment is responsible were employed on a casual or short-term basis in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25515]

Sir Paul Beresford: The numbers of casual staff employed by my Department and each of its executive agencies in 1993–94, projected outturn for 1994–95, and plans 1995–96 are published in my Department's Annual Report, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, what changes there have been in the number of staff in employment by grade in (a) his Department and (b) each agency for which his Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25633]

Sir Paul Beresford: The numbers of staff employed by my Department and each of its executive agencies in 1993–94, projected outturn for 1994–95, and plans 1995–96 are published in my Department's annual report, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. No information or projections broken down by grade are available.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, what changes there have been in the number of staff employed by (i) his Department and (ii) each agency for which his Department is responsible in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25494]

Sir Paul Beresford: The numbers of staff employed by my Department and each of its executive agencies in 1993–94, projected outturn for 1994–95, and plans 1995–96 are published in my Department's annual report, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Right to Buy

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people in (a) London and (b) the rest of the country have exercised their right to buy their council house since the right was introduced. [25528]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Between October 1980 and September 1994 some 185,000 council homes in London were purchased by tenants under the right-to-buy legislation. During the same period, about 1,025,000 sales were made to local authority and new town tenants in the rest of England.

Construction Contracts

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which Government Department he is consulting as to a construction contracts Bill, and if he will make a statement. [25755]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: A number of Government Departments have received copies of my Department's consultation documents, "Latent Defects Liability and 'Build' Insurance" and "Fair Construction Contracts", which follow up proposals for legislation set out in Sir Michael Latham's report, "Constructing the Team".

City Pride

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on which dates he received the city pride documents from (a) Manchester, (b) Birmingham and (c) London; and if he will estimate the cost of implementing the proposals submitted so far from each. [25768]

Mr. Curry: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment received the Manchester, Birmingham and London city pride prospectuses on 8 September 1994, 18 April 1995 and 23 January 1995 respectively. The promoters of city pride and the Government have not costed the proposals set out in the prospectuses, most of which are at a provisional stage.

Houses in Multiple Occupation

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many responses he has received in reply to the consultation paper on the case for licensing houses in multiple occupation; and when he expects to issue his report. [25754]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Members for Cardiff, Central (Mr. Jones) and for Sheffield, Heeley (Mr. Michie) on 20 March 1995, Official Report, columns 57-58.

Housing, Yorkshire and Humberside

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what sum for new rented housing association homes in 1995–96 would have been available if funding outlined in the 1992 Autumn Statement had been maintained for each local authority in Yorkshire and Humberside; [25399]

(2) what estimate he has for the number of housing association homes for rent which will be built in 1995–96 in each local authority in Yorkshire and Humberside; [25398]

(3) what is the total central Government funding for new rented housing association homes for 1995–96, excluding tenant incentive schemes, do it yourself shared ownership and major repairs or sales programmes for each local authority in Yorkshire and Humberside. [25358]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Allocations made in Yorkshire and Humberside from the Housing Corporation's 1995–96 approved development programme for the provision of new-build rented housing are as follows, together with the Housing Corporation's estimate of what the allocations may have been for 1995–96 if funding plans in the 1992 Autumn Statement had been maintained.

Further social lettings will also be made available through vacancies in local authority and housing association properties; through the Housing Corporation's new-build programme for shared rent/sale; through the corporation's other home ownership initiatives and rehabilitation; through housing association developments funded by local authority housing association grant; and through the cash incentive scheme.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of applicants on council waiting lists for each local authority in Yorkshire and Humberside. [25357]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Local authorities in England report the numbers of households on their housing waiting lists at 1 April each year in their annual housing investment programme returns.

The latest available data for individual local authorities in Yorkshire and Humberside can be found in section B of the "1994 HIP1 All Items Print", a copy of which is in the Library.

English Partnerships

Mr. Evenett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when English Partnerships' management statement and financial memorandum will be available [26195]

Mr. Curry: Both documents have today been placed in the Library. The management statement defines the strategic relationship between the Secretary of State and English Partnerships, and the financial memorandum set out the framework for financial control within which English Partnerships must operate.

Housing Repairs

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many cases have been brought in England under housing and public health legislation to oblige local authorities to (a) carry out essential repairs to their own dwellings and (b) to give essential repairs grants to owners of private dwelling in each year since 1990. [25803]

Mr. Robert B Jones [holding answer Tuesday 24 May 1995:]: The local Government and Housing Act 1989 requires local authorities to give mandatory renovation grants to owners of unfit private dwellings. Mandatory grants given annually since 1990 to the nearest thousand, are:

1990 : 2.6
1991 : 29.7
1992 : 35.5
1993 : 37.4
1994 : 37.8

The Department does not collect data on the number of repairs local authorities are obliged to carry out to their own dwellings under housing and public health legislation.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Railway Projects

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the railway infrastructure and rolling stock projects supported in the last five years by (a) Overseas Development Administration bilateral aid, (b) EU aid and (c) other multilateral donors to which the Overseas Development Administration contributes giving the date each project was approved, its value and the European companies which obtained contracts as suppliers or consultants to those projects. [24951]

Mr. Baldry: Details of railway infrastructure and rolling stock projects supported by ODA in the last five years have been placed in the Libraries of the House. These involve only British companies. ODA is unable to list the projects supported by the European Union and other multilateral donors.

Loan to Grant Conversion

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the cost in each of the last five years of converting Overseas Development Administration loans to developing countries into grants; and whether conversion of Overseas Development Administration loans into grants is registered as expenditure in the year in which conversion is made. [25376]

Mr. Baldry: The cost in each of the last five years of converting Overseas Development Administration loans to developing countries into grants is shown on the attached table; conversion of Overseas Development Administration loans into grants is not registered in the year in which conversion is made. The repayment amounts are cancelled over the period of the original loan repayment dates.

Aid and Trade Projects

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many aid and trade provision projects were refused or postponed solely on financial grounds in 1993–94. [25736]

Mr. Baldry: No aid and trade provision projects were refused or postponed solely on financial grounds in 1993–94.

South Africa

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will seek an amendment to the draft negotiating mandate on future relations between the European Union and South Africa to enable South African bodies to tender for contracts under the VIII European development fund on the preferential terms available to the African, Caribbean and Pacific group states under the Lomé convention. [25612]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 23 May 1995]: There are good prospects that the negotiating mandate on future relations between the European Union and South Africa will enable South African bodies to tender for contracts under the European development fund. The idea of granting to South Africa the ACP's preferential status in EDF tenders, however, raises a number of additional issues which are still under discussion between member states in Brussels.

Population Control

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those countries in which the Overseas Development Administration has funded family planning initiatives together with the number of projects, their nature and the amount spent in each case for the last year for which figures are available. [25305]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: The table lists the countries in which ODA supported reproductive health projects in 1994 through the bilateral aid programme, together with the number of such projects, where expenditure exceeded £50,000 per project, and the total amount spent for each country. These projects aim to enable men and women to have better access to family planning; enable women to experience safer motherhood and childbirth; and to improve sexual health. In addition, ODA contributed £19,435,000 in 1994 to the United Nations Population Fund, the International Planned Parenthood Federation and special programmes of the World Health Organisation for population and reproductive health work.

DEFENCE

Flight Simulators

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent flight simulators are used to train RAF jet pilots as an alternative to flying using terrain-following radar. [25156]

Mr. Soames: Flight simulators are used for initial and continuation procedural training of crews in the use of terrain following radar; simulators are not, however, sufficiently sophisticated at present to provide a realistic alternative to low level flying training.

Gulf War Medical Assessment Programme

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the armed forces have taken part in his Department's Gulf war medical assessment programme to date; how many of these have since left the services; and for what reason. [25165]

Mr. Soames: To date, a total of 246 individuals have been medically examined as part of the Department's Gulf war medical assessment programme, 70 of whom were serving members of the armed forces at the time of their appointment. As it is not relevant to the conduct of the programme, information is not at present available on subsequent changes of status. I will write to the hon. Member when it has been collected.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, when Colonel Johnson left his post in the Gulf war medical assessment programme and for what reason; and what is the name of his replacement. [25166]

Mr. Soames: Arrangements were made earlier this year for the temporary attachment of an additional consultant, Colonel J. H. Johnston, to the Gulf war medical assessment programme in order to reduce patient waiting times. He participated in the programme between 22 February 1995 and 23 March 1995, by which time waiting times has been brought within acceptable limits. Colonel Johnston will again participate in the programme during the month of June 1995 to cover for a period of leave and other professional commitments of the resident consultant physician.

Draft Reserve Forces Legislation

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many representations to date he has received concerning the draft Reserve Forces Bill. [25781]

Mr. Soames: The draft reserve forces legislation was published on 30 March, and the consultation period continues until Thursday 15 June 1995. By Monday 22 May, some 217 written responses had been received. In addition, many of those present at the Department's series of presentations on the Bill have taken the opportunity to make comments orally.

Bosnia

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many breaches of the no-fly zone in Bosnia have been recorded in each of the last three months. [25782]

Mr. Soames: NATO published figures show that between 1 February and 30 April there were 1,283 reported violations. The monthly breakdown is as follows:

February : 399
March : 292
April : 592

A further 242 violations have been reported up to 15 May.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many breaches of the ceasefire in Sarajevo have been detected by the British army mortar locating troop in each of the last three months. [25783]

Mr. Soames: British mortar and artillery locating personnel in Sarajevo have recorded a total of 683 incidents over the last three months which have involved the firing of one or more mortar or artillery rounds. The figures are broken down as follows:

March : 63
April : 74
May : 546 (figures to 19 May)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he announced the decision not to replace Britain's contribution to UNPROFOR based in Gorazde; and if he will state the reasons for this decision. [25784]

Mr. Soames: The UN were informed in April of the Government's intention not to replace British troops in Gorazde when the present detachment's tour of duty expires in September. By then, British troops will have been in the isolated enclave for 18 months and the Government believe it is time for another UN contingent to take on the responsibility.

Corporal Neil Hughes

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the board of inquiry took place into the death of Corporal Neil Hughes of the Duke of Wellington Regiment; what was the result of the board of inquiry; what conclusions have been reached as to the responsibility for the death of Corporal Hughes; and if compensation has been made to the widow of Corporal Hughes. [25785]

Mr. Soames: A board of inquiry was not held, as all the facts relating to this matter were established during the coroner's inquest and subsequent civil police inquiries. The case was referred to the Crown Prosecution Service, which decided to take no further action. The compensation claim from the widow of Corporal Hughes has been accepted and an interim payment agreed.

Lance Corporal Robert Strong

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what factors underlay the imprisonment of Lance Corporal Robert Strong, formerly of the Parachute Regiment; where he was imprisoned; and what assistance and advice was offered to Lance Corporal Strong following the incident in which he was shot. [25787]

Mr. Soames: Lance Corporal Strong has never been imprisoned. He received treatment at the Queen Elizabeth military hospital Woolwich between February and June 1993; and prior to his medical discharge, in line with my Department's policy, he would have been given resettlement advice including information on how to make a claim for benefits.

Injuries due to Negligence

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what forms of assistance and advice are made available to members of the armed forces who have been injured as a result of the negligent discharge of weapons. [25786]

Mr. Soames: All personnel who are injured while serving in Her Majesty's forces are given appropriate treatment by the armed forces medical service, including psychiatric help if necessary. Comprehensive assistance is given to all those disabled however the injury is sustained. Assistance includes intreatment, rehabilitation, and, wherever necessary, retraining and resettlement into civilian life.

Where death or injury is attributable to service, benefits may be paid from both the Department of Social Security's war pensions scheme and from my Department's armed forces pension scheme. The definition of attributability is widely drawn; accidental death or injury in training or on duty is normally accepted as attributable to service.

Following the passing of the Crown Proceedings (Armed Forces) Act 1987 serving and former service personnel have had the same rights as those in civilian life and are able to make a claim in common law against my Department for compensation for personal accident or injury through negligence.

The procedure for anyone contemplating a claim for compensation is set out in a Defence Council instruction published each year which specifically recommends that prospective claimants approach the Royal British Legion initially as the organisation best placed to liaise with my Department's claims department.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Abortion Law

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he is yet in a position to respond to the recommendations on abortion law in Northern Ireland made by the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights. [24870]

Mr. Moss: The Secretary of State wrote to the chairman of the commission on 10 May indicating that he does not propose to suggest any changes in the law at present. A copy of the Secretary of State's letter has been placed in the Library.

Home Improvement Grants

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the budgetary allocation in respect of home improvement grants to each Housing Executive grants office since 1 April 1993. [24763]

Sir John Wheeler: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, but the chief executive has advised me that the expenditure figures for each financial year were as follows:

£ million

Office	Expenditure 1993–94	1994–95
Belfast[1]	9.6	9.3
Newtownards	2.0	1.9
Lisburn	2.2	2.5

St. Columban's College, Kilkeel

Mr. McGrady: to ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to make provisions for a special needs unit at St. Columban's college, Kilkeel, Co Down. [24775]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for making proposals to my Department to establish new special units at Catholic maintained schools rests with the education and library boards in conjunction with the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools. No proposal has been made to establish such a unit at St. Columban's college, Kilkeel.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received from local authorities regarding compulsory competitive tendering in the last two years. [25238]

Sir John Wheeler: In the last two years representations about compulsory competitive tendering have been received from Ards borough council, Ballymoney borough council, Banbridge district council, Belfast city council, Castlereagh borough council, Limavady borough council, Lisburn borough council, Newry and Mourne district council, Newtownabbey borough council and North Down borough council. These representations, which were made following the issue of draft regulations to all district councils on 12 October 1994 setting out the proposed arrangements for the second round of compulsory competitive tendering, sought an abandonment of compulsory competitive tendering or, alternatively, an increase in the "deminimis" level of £100,000 and changes to the phasing arrangements. In addition, during the Prime Minister's meeting with the mayors, chairmen and chief executives of district councils on 23 January, the mayor of Ballymena borough council advocated a moratorium on compulsory competitive tendering.

Job Losses

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many posts were lost in (a) the Northern Ireland Office and (b) agencies for which the Northern Ireland Office is responsible, listing the total lost posts agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and how many posts lost are proposed to be lost in 1995–96. [25071]

Sir John Wheeler: Information on the number of staff in the Northern Ireland Office, as published in the Supply Estimates, is as follows. Figures for 1992–93 are included to allow comparison with 1993–94.

Year	NIO	Compensation Agency	Northern Ireland Prison Service[1]	Total
1992–93	4,640	145	—	4,785
1993–94	4,730	150	—	4,880
1994–95	4,810	150	—	4,960
1995–96	1,080	150	3,590	4,820

[1] Launched as an agency in April 1995.

The figures include prison officers and are rounded to the nearest five.

Bus Companies

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to give greater commercial freedom to Ulsterbus and Citybus. [25725]

Sir John Wheeler: None.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to improve the speed of response of his Department so as to meet the commercial needs of Ulsterbus and Citybus. [25726]

Sir John Wheeler: The regulatory framework which governs the relationship between the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland and the transport companies is kept under constant review to ensure its continued effectiveness.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland nif he will make a statement on the age and quality of the fleets of Ulsterbus and Citybus relative to deregulated services in Great Britain. [25727]

Sir John Wheeler: The different methodology used in preparing such statistics in Northern Ireland and Great Britain makes comparison difficult. At March 1994 the average age of the Ulsterbus fleet was just under eight years old and that of the Citybus fleet 8.75.

In Great Britain, at December 1993, 19 per cent. of the fleet was less than four years old, 27 per cent. between four and seven years old, 20 per cent. between eight and 11 years old, leaving 34 per cent. 12 years old or over. Information as to the respective quality is not available.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many hectares of land (a) are eligible for entry into each environmentally sensitive area in Northern Ireland and (b) have been entered in each tier of each environmentally sensitive area in Northern Ireland. [25791]

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

ESA	Eligible area (hectares)	Under agreement
		Tier 1	Tier 2	Tier 3
Antrim Coast, Glens and Rathlin	34,600	9,500	780	—
Slieve Gullion	13,800	90	10	—
Mourne Mountains and Slieve Croob	29,000	5,710	180	—
West Fermanagh and Erne Lakeland	57,400	7,290	3,060	130
Sperrins	82,950	3,090	2,240	—

Crown Buildings (Fire Safety)

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to allow the Northern Ireland Fire Brigade to assume responsibility for the fire safety inspections and issue of fire certificates for Crown buildings in Northern Ireland. [25866]

Sir John Wheeler: This matter is currently under consideration.

RUC Annual Report

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will lay before the House the annual report for 1994 of the chief constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. [26386]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Copies of the chief constable's annual report 1994 have today been placed in the Library. It is a general report on the carrying out by the RUC of its functions during 1994 which is submitted to the Police Authority for Northern Ireland and transmitted to me for laying before Parliament in accordance with section 15 of the Police Act (Northern Ireland) 1970.

SCOTLAND

George Beattie Case

23. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the results of his investigations into the new evidence given to the Under-Secretary of State during the Adjournment debate on the George Beattie case on 29 March; and if he will make a statement. [24247]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The documents handed to me by the hon. Member on 29 March are being examined and relevant inquiries are in hand. The hon. Member will be kept informed of developments.

Scottish Economy

24. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to meet the Scottish TUC to discuss the Scottish economy. [24248]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend meets the Scottish TUC from time to time and officials maintain regular contacts. My right hon. Friend is therefore kept fully aware of the STUC's views on all matters concerning the Scottish economy.

33. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Scottish Council Development and Industry to discuss trends in the Scottish economy; and if he will make a statement. [24257]

Mr. Kynoch: Scottish Office Ministers and officials maintain regular contact with the Scottish Council Development and Industry to discuss economic and other issues. My right hon. Friend last met the Scottish Council Development and Industry when he addressed the annual dinner of the council's London committee on 22 March 1995.

Scottish Homes

25. Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will next meet Scottish Homes to discuss transfer of property; and if he will make a statement. [24249]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no plans to meet Scottish Homes to discuss transfer of property. He issued guidance to Scottish Homes on this matter following which it published procedures for the disposal of its stock.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 174, on Scottish Homes, when the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South can expect a reply from Sir James Mellon. [25352]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Sir James Mellon wrote to the hon. Member on 28 March and sent me a copy of his letter. I have arranged for a further copy of the correspondence to be sent to the hon. Member.

Voluntary Organisations

26. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the value of grants from his Department to voluntary organisations in each of the last three years. [24250]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Grants paid to voluntary organisations by the Scottish Office in the last three years for which information is available were £20.7 million in 1991–92, £25.7 million in 1992–93 and £21.6 million in 1993–94.

Engineering Jobs

27. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to meet the Scottish TUC to discuss the continuing loss of skilled engineering jobs in Scotland. [24251]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend meets the Scottish TUC from time to time and officials maintain regular contacts. My right hon. Friend is therefore kept fully aware of the STUC's views on all matters concerning the Scottish economy.

Waste Disposal

28. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to encourage local authorities to find alternatives to landfill as a method of waste disposal. [24252]

Sir Hector Monro: The Government favour waste management methods such as recycling and incineration with energy recovery which are higher in the waste management hierarchy than landfill. By requiring local authorities to prepare and update waste disposal plans and waste recycling plans the Government ensures they keep their waste management options under review. Together with the landfill tax which we intend to introduce, this will encourage authorities to respond to our target for recycling household waste.

Local Government Finance

29. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss local government finance. [24253]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend last met representatives of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss local government finance on 20 January. He also addressed the convention's annual conference on 10 March.

31. Mrs. Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss local government finance. [24255]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend and I are due to meet representatives of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities on 12 June as part of the normal consultation on local government finance matters.

Tree Planting

30. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set out the tree planting programme for England, Scotland and Wales for 1995–96. [24254]

Sir Hector Monro: As announced in the Government's expenditure plans, we expect about 38,000 hectares of woodland to be planted in 1995–96, including restocking.

Strengths of the Union

32. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received about maintaining the strengths of the Union; and if he will make a statement. [24256]

Mr. Lang: I have received a number of expressions of support for the maintenance of the Union.

South East Asia

34. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to visit south-east Asia to promote Scotland for inward investment and jobs; and if he will make a statement. [24258]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend intends to visit Japan later this year to promote Scotland as a location for inward investment but he has no plans at present to visit South East Asia. The benefits of Scotland as a business location are promoted within South East Asia by Locate in Scotland's representatives in Taiwan and Singapore.

Forestry Policy

35. Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a further statement about forestry policy. [24259]

Sir Hector Monro: We remain committed to the forestry policy set out in "Forestry Policy for Great Britain" and "Sustainable Forestry: The UK Programme", copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Combating Crime

36. Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet representatives of Scottish police forces to discuss combating crime.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend meets representatives of Scottish police forces from time to time, most recently on 10 February.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those capital projects within the NHS in Scotland that are currently being considered under the private finance initiative; and if he will make a statement. [24242]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: All capital projects currently being proposed in the NHS in Scotland have been considered, or are being considered, as opportunities under the private finance initiative. A list of these projects has been placed in the Library of the House.

Sports Facilities

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about improvement of sports facilities in Scotland. [24230]

Sir Hector Monro: The provision of sports facilities in Scotland has been significantly enhanced in recent years. More, however, remains to be done. The national lottery now provides a marvellous opportunity to develop a wider range of facilities to meet the nation's sporting needs.

Temazepam

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet representatives of the Advisory Committee on the Misuse of Drugs to discuss the rescheduling of Temazepam; and if he will make a statement. [24119]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no plans for such a meeting. The reply that my right hon. Friend the Lord President of the Council gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Ayr (Mr. Gallie) on 10 May, Official Report, column 756, described the immediate steps being taken to reduce the misuse of Temazepam and confirmed that careful consideration is being given to the advisory council's recommendation on rescheduling the drug.

Police (Body Armour)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to ensure that all police officers are supplied with body armour. [25143]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is for individual chief constables to take decisions about providing body armour for their officers. The Scottish Office would pay police grant in the usual way at 51 per cent. of the expenditure on any such provision.

Appeals

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many appeals against conviction and applications for pardon or the prerogative of mercy have been lodged with his office in each of the past 10 years; how long, on average, it took to process each one; how many are still outstanding; how much, on average, such cases cost in terms of time, salaries and expenses for all Government and local government authorities, including the Scottish Office, the Crown Office, procurators fiscal offices and police; and if he will make a statement. [25158]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of cases in respect of which representations were received by my right hon. Friend are as follows:

1984: 54
1985: 43
1986: 39
1987: 61
1988: 46
1989: 60
1990: 39
1991: 54
1992: 58
1993: 52
1994: 30

Representations in respect of 20 cases are at present under consideration. The average time taken to process cases received and cleared in 1994 was 55 working days. Additionally, on 1 January 1995 there were five major cases which had been under consideration for more than 12 months. Comparable figures for earlier years are not available because statistics were not kept in that form. The costs of processing cases are not available in the form requested.

Job Losses

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many posts were lost in (a) the Scottish Office and (b) agencies for which the Scottish Office is responsible, listing the total lost posts agency by agency in (i) 1993–94, and (ii) 1994–95; and how many posts are proposed to be lost in 1995–96. [25072]

Mr. Lang: The numbers of permanent and casual staff employed by the Scottish Office and each of its executive agencies in 1993–94, estimated outturn for 1994–95, and plans for 1995–96 are published in appendix 4 of my departmental report for 1995, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Staff

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what changes there have been to the number of staff in employment by grade in (a) the Scottish Office and (b) each agency for which the Scottish Office is responsible, in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96;

(2) how many staff of (a) the Scottish Office and (b) agencies for which the Scottish Office is responsible, were employed on a casual or short-term basis in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25504]

Mr. Lang: The numbers of permanent and casual staff employed by the Scottish Office and each of its executive agencies in 1993–94, estimated outturn for 1994–95, and plans for 1995–96 are published in appendix 4 of my departmental report for 1995, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. No projections broken down by grade are available.

Mental Health Guidance

Dr. Bray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he proposes to revise the code of practice for the guidance of medical practitioners and others in accordance with the requirements of the Mental Health Act (Scotland) 1984. [25877]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Under section 119 of the Mental Health (Scotland) Act 1984, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland is required to prepare, and from time to time revise, this code of practice. The original code of practice for this Act was laid before Parliament on 16 November 1989.

It is currently proposed in the Mental Health (Patients in the Community) Bill, which recently received its Third Reading in another place, that the ambit of the code of practice should be widened to include after-care services for patients subject to the proposed community care orders and existing provisions for guardianship. We intend to begin a review of the code of practice after the provisions in this Bill have entered into force; the proposed commencement date for the provisions is 1 April 1996.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many hectares of land (a) are eligible to be entered into each environmentally sensitive area in Scotland and (b) have been entered into each tier of each environmentally sensitive area in Scotland. [25795]

Sir Hector Monro: The number of hectares eligible to be entered into the schemes in each designated area is not known as eligibility depends on the individual circumstances of the agricultural business and the land on the unit. The estimated number of hectares of agricultural land in each designated area and the number of hectares which have been covered by agreements under the schemes are set out in the following table.

	Number of hectares in each designated area	Hectares covered by tier 1 agreements by 30 April 1995
Breadalbane	140,000	[1]67,966
Loch Lomond	36,875	[1]20,789
Stewartry	48,535	[1]19,626
Central Borders (formerly Whitlaw and Eildon)	28,785	[1]2,395
Machair of the Uists and Benbecula, Barra and Vatersay	16,230	[1]3,911
Central Southern Uplands	220,289	49,625
Western Southern Uplands	131,004	18,721
Cairngorms Straths	236,138	10,493
Argyll Islands	177,420	34,103
Shetland Islands	64,090	633
	1,099,366	228,262

[1] Excludes hectares covered by expired agreements under the original Schemes.

All the land entered into tier 1 agreements can be considered for tier 2 of the scheme. The precise requirements of the agreement under tier 2 will depend on the types of land and features of conservation interest on the farm or croft and will be set out in the agreed farm or croft conservation plan.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many farms (a) are eligible to have land entered into each environmentally sensitive area in Scotland and (b) have had land entered into each environmentally sensitive area in Scotland. [25796]

Sir Hector Monro: The precise number of farmers and crofters eligible to enter land into the schemes in each designated area is not known, as eligibility depends on the individual circumstances of the agricultural business and the land on the unit. However, all agricultural units will land in a designated area are eligible to apply. The number of agricultural units in each designated area and the number of farmers and crofters who have had land covered by agreements under the schemes are set out in the following table:

	Number of agricultural units in each designated area	Farmers/crofters who have had land covered by ESA agreements by 30 April 1995
Breadalbane	203	[1]91
Loch Lomond	77	[1]40
Stewartry	340	[1]134
Central Borders (formerly Whitlaw and Eildon)	190	[1]15
Machair of the Uists and Benbecula, Barra and Vatersay	789	[1]400
Central Southern Uplands	633	107
Western Southern Uplands	455	49
Cairngorms Straths	284	12
Argyll Islands	435	50
Shetlands Islands	1,350	13
	4,756	911

[1] Excludes farmers/crofters whose agreements under the original Schemes have expired.

Mink Farms

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 3 May, Official Report, column 252, if he will refuse to license any future mink farms. [25738]

Sir Hector Monro: Any future applications will be considered on their merits. There are no mink farms in Scotland.

Sandeel Fishing

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he is carrying out of the environmental impact of sandeel fishing in Shetland waters; and if he will make a statement. [25739]

Sir Hector Monro: The Scottish Office marine laboratory has an ongoing programme of research on sandeels and associated environmental issues. In 1993 it published a report entitled "Biology of Sandeels in the vicinity of seabird colonies at Shetland".

Fisheries Research Vessel

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the timetable for the invitation and assessment of tenders for the construction of a fisheries research vessel; when he expects to announce the successful bid; and if he will make a statement. [25362]

Sir Hector Monro: By the end of this year, I hope to be in a position to announce the award of the contract to build a replacement fisheries research vessel. Invitations to tender will be issued by late summer, allowing nine weeks for their submission. A similar period will be devoted to the assessment of tenders.

European Parliamentary Constituencies

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the Boundary Commission for Scotland intends to begin its review of European parliamentary constituencies in Scotland. [26582]

Mr. Lang: The Boundary Commission for Scotland has informed me that its review of the boundaries of the eight European parliamentary constituencies in Scotland will commence on 2 June 1995.

The Commission is unable to forecast at this stage how long the review is likely to take.

Local Government Employees (Political Restrictions)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what conditions the Scottish Office would require to be fulfilled before removing the political restriction of local government employees. [25395]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 23 May 1995]: Following the report of the Widdicombe committee, it was agreed that there were certain key posts in local government where it was particularly important that the postholder should be seen to be politically impartial. This remains just as valid today, and we therefore have no intention of abolishing the rules on politically restricted posts.

Rent-to-mortgage Scheme

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much the Scottish Office (a) is planning to spend in the current year and (b) has spent in previous financial years on promoting the rent-to-mortgage scheme; and how much is being and was spent during these periods on television advertising for the campaign. [25344]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 23 May 1994]: Advertising of the pilot rent-to-mortgage scheme took place in spring 1991 and spring 1992. Subsequently the right to buy and statutory rent-to-mortgage schemes have been promoted together. No decision has yet been taken on any further advertising in 1995–96. Expenditure in each financial year is as follows:

	Total £	Television Advertising £
1995–96	[1]186,000	[1]111,600
1994–95	220,000	116,600
1993–94	312,420	122,100
1992–93	nil	nil
1991–92	186,290	45,600
1990–91	194,710	64,750

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Lester: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how the private sector can be involved in European Regional Development Fund projects in the United Kingdom. [25863]

Mr. Eggar: It is Government policy to encourage private sector participation in projects partly financed by the European regional development fund. This also accords with the aims of the private finance initiative.

We have today introduced new criteria for this purpose. These arrangements will help to provide a significant boost to the regeneration of ERDF areas.

I have tabled a copy of the criteria in the Library of the House. Projects, which may include industrial, transport, environmental, tourism and other economic infrastructure, will need to be of general economic benefit to eligible areas and to meet the other conditions of ERDF grant. Companies wishing to inquire about the possibility of ERDF grant for such projects should contact the Government Office for their English region, or the Scottish Office, Welsh Office, or Northern Ireland Departments.

To encourage maximum private sector involvement, the private sector will be able to make a reasonable profit on investment. Conditions attached to grants will ensure that any excessive profits that might be derived from ERDF grants continue to be used for the general economic benefit of the area and that risks will be shared appropriately between the public and private sectors. Grant will normally be routed through a public sector participant, which will be accountable for proper project administration for grant purposes. Where this is not appropriate, grant may be paid direct to the private sector.

Regional single programming documents, agreed between the Government and the European Commission, set aggregate targets for private sector contributions, alongside totals of public expenditure and of ERDF grant.

Research Laboratories

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what targets he has set his Department's research laboratories for 1995–96. [26388]

Mr. Heseltine: In the light of the announcement I made on 14 April 1994, Official Report, columns 251-53 on the future management of the DTI's laboratories, the targets I have set the Laboratory of the Government Chemist and the National Engineering Laboratory for 1995–96 are set out below. In addition, I expect the chief executives of the laboratories, including the National Physical Laboratory, to continue to reply within 10 working days to all letters from Members of Parliament delegated to them for reply.

Primary Financial Targets

LGC Recovery of full costs from income for customer work.

NEL Recovery of full costs through "arms-length" contracts from customers.

Secondary Targets

LGC : To achieve an average rate of 93 per cent for completion of reports on analysis of (or research into) samples by the date agreed with customers for the year as a whole.

To achieve more than 87 per cent. of contract research milestones within the time scale agreed with the customer.

To maintain NAMAS accreditation for the categories of work in which the Laboratory operates, registration for Good Laboratory Practice (GLP) and Laboratory-wide registration to BS EN ISO 9001.

NEL: To increase the number of non-DTI customers who provide revenues of more than £100,000 per annum by 25 per cent.

To increase the number of hours charged to customers per staff member by 10 per cent.

To carry out post completion reviews, with customers, on 20 per cent. of all contracts valued in excess of £250,000.

Bids are currently being considered from the private sector for the contractorisation of NPL. For the time it is expected to remain an agency, its primary target is to recover its full costs from income for customer work after taking account of the special circumstances arising from the task of preparing for transfer to private management. NEL and LGC are expected to have been privatised by the end of 1995–96 and hence to cease to be agencies.

Fire Safety

Mr. Beith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to publish the report of the steering committee which reviewed responses to the report of the interdepartmental review team on fire safety legislation and enforcement. [25859]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Ministers are currently considering the Government's response to the recommendations of the interdepartmental review of fire safety legislation and enforcement, and we hope to make an announcement in the coming weeks on the way forward.

Mr. Cox: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has now received a report from the steering committee reviewing responses to the inter-departmental review on fire safety legislation and enforcement; and if he will make a statement. [25756]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave today to the right hon. Member for Berwick upon Tweed (Mr. Beith).

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the applicability of the views attributed to his Department on pages 42 and 43 of "Renewing Local Government in the English Shires" to the future of trading standards services in Cleveland after the division of those services amongst four unitary authorities as a result of local government reorganisation. [25225]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to hon. Member for Kingswood (Mr. Berry) on 22 May 1995, Official Report, columns 429–30. The same considerations apply to Cleveland as to Berkshire.

Internal Market Advisory Committee

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the specific complaints his Department has raised at the internal market advisory committee since its inception. [25594]

Mr. Needham: My Department's single market compliance unit has arranged for 14 cases to be raised at the internal market advisory committee since specific single market complaints were first placed on its agenda last year. These have covered:

restrictions on the provision of auctioneering services in France;

Italian taxation of cars over 2 litres;

Dutch waste water regulations;

requirements for tyre inflators to be tested to German standards;

requirements for stack gas analisyers to be tested to German standards;

Greek regulations on the content of soft drinks;

discriminatory provisions concerning the operation of security firms in Portugal;

Dutch requirements involving the double-testing of electric fencing; restrictions on the operation of UK qualified accountants in Greece;

Greek restrictions on the operation of a speedboat for business purposes;

restrictions on the establishment of private language schools in Greece;

Portuguese requirements concerning lighting devices on tractors;

German refusal to accredit non-German bodies to issue the GS mark;

German requirements for re-testing of samples for liquid density standards.

Overseas Posts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what evidence has resulted from major export drives as to the effectiveness of the establishment of commercial posts overseas in terms of increasing exports. [25495]

Mr. Needham: The FCO's commercial Posts play a crucial role in the delivery of the Government's export promotion drive. It would be impossible to mount major campaigns such as "Action Japan" or the "Indo-British Partnership" without the support of commercial officers overseas. The "Indo-British Partnership" has been associated with an increase of 50 per cent. in bilateral trade between the UK and India. A new office was opened in Bangalore to help prepare this initiative. Business demand for charged services has nearly tripled. During the period of "Action Japan" and its predecessor, "Priority Japan", exports to Japan have risen significantly. This trend continues as visible exports are 35 per cent. higher in the first three months of 1995 than for the same period last year. I am confident from my recent visit that the 35 Japanese specialists we have in Tokyo contribute a great deal to this success story.

Manufacturing Companies

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimates he has made of the number of companies engaged in manufacturing that have closed their United Kingdom operation and have transferred production overseas to plants owned by those companies or in which they otherwise have a stake since 1990. [25512]

Mr. Page: This information is not available.

Insider Dealing

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the application of section 5(3) of the Public Records Act 1958 to information on inside dealing under section 179 of the Financial Services Act 1986. [25510]

Mr. Heseltine: Section 179 of the Financial Services Act 1986 prohibits the disclosure of certain information obtained for the purposes of, or in the discharge of functions under, that Act. Section 179 is therefore a statutory bar on disclosure of the type referred to in section 5(3) of the Public Records Act 1958. Section 5(3), which otherwise places a duty on the Keeper of Public Records to arrange that reasonable facilities are available for public inspection of public records, does not apply to information covered by section 179. Therefore such information will not be made available in the Public Record Office.

CIS Countries

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what new steps he is taking to maximise the involvement of United Kingdom companies in the economic development of the CIS countries. [25022]

Mr. Needham: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade announced on 22 May 1995, Official Report, columns 597-99 a package of additional support measures for exporters including trade fairs, inward and outward missions and business links export services. Additional staff will be deployed on the DTI market desks and in our overseas posts and in September an additional export promoter from the private sector will join those already working in the developing CIS markets. These additional resources will help companies take advantage, including through new sector specific initiatives, of the increasing opportunities in these markets.

Local Bus Services

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each of the last 10 years the number of complaints received by the Office of Fair Trading regarding the operation of local bus services and the actions of bus companies reported to his Department. [25911]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The numbers of complaints about competition aspects of local bus operation received by the Office of Fair Trading since bus services outside London were deregulated are as follows.

	Number
1987	57
1988	58
1989	53
1990	51
1991	68
1992	90
1993	108
1994	56
Total	541

Complaints which my Department receives regarding unfair competition in the industry are referred to the Director General of Fair Trading, who has the initial responsibility for considering them.

Monopolies and Mergers Commission

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what powers he has to direct the Monopolies and Mergers Commission to reconsider its decision on a case if it appears to him that it may have been given inaccurate information; [25730]

(2) how many prosecutions there have been since 1973 under section 93(b) of the Fair Trading Act 1973. [25731]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I have no powers to direct the Monopolies and Mergers Commission to reconsider its reports. If it were found that the commission had been misled, a further reference to the commission could be considered.

I am not aware of any previous prosecutions under section 93B of the Fair Trading Act 1973.

Bird's Eye Walls Ltd.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will ensure that the report of the Office of Fair Trading on the investigation into the Bird's Eye Walls freezer exclusivity case, will be published. [25729]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Office of Fair Trading will make a statement when it has completed its investigation into the evidence given to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission by Bird's Eye Walls Ltd.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those companies in which the holder of his office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past five years. [25707]

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 22 May 1995]: The President of the Board of Trade is, by virtue of that office, the majority shareholder in British Nuclear Fuels plc and Nuclear Electric plc. There have been no instances in the last five years of companies, in which I or my predecessors have by virtue of our office been majority shareholders, being wound up.

General System of Preferences

Mr. Caborn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will ask the European Commission to bring forward proposals for the provision of the general system of preferences to agricultural produce from South Africa. [25611]

Mr. Needham [holding answer 23 May 1995]: From 1 January 1995, South Africa was granted GSP benefits for a limited range of agricultural products. The European Commission is committed, under the terms of the current GSP regulation for agricultural products, to bring forward a proposal to re-examine the scope of those benefits to enable the Council to take a decision to enter into force on 1 July 1995. Her Majesty's Government take the view that South Africa should have access to the full range of agricultural concessions available under the scheme.

RJB (Mining)

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Attercliffe (Mr. Betts) of 15 May, Official Report, column 22, on what date the decision was taken to review the status of RJB (Mining) as preferred bidder; and continue as preferred bidder. [25392]

Mr. Page [holding answer 23 May 1995]: The position of each of the preferred bidders was kept under review throughout the course of negotiations. Following the decision on proceedings against former directors of the AF Budge companies, which was made on 21 November, the Department specifically reviewed RJB (Mining) plc's status as preferred bidder for the English coal companies in the light of the consideration of the conduct of Mr. Richard Budge in the context of the failure of the AF Budge companies and the decision on those proceedings. The Department concluded on 25 November that RJB (Mining) should properly continue as preferred bidder.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Job Losses

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many posts were lost in (a) the Department of National Heritage and (b) agencies for which the Department of National Heritage is responsible, listing the total lost posts agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and how many posts are proposed to be lost in 1995–96. [25074]

Mr. Dorrell: The information in respect of the Department of National Heritage and its two agencies is as follows:

	1993–94	1994–95	[1]1995–96
DNH central Department	nil	nil	nil
Historic Royal Palaces Agency	11.5	nil	70
Royal Parks Agency	nil	nil	nil

[1] Estimate.

Churchill Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many separate items there are in the Churchill papers; and what are the professional qualifications of those persons who advised him that none of the papers to be sold was a state paper. [25153]

Mr. Dorrell: I have never been advised that none of the Churchill papers is a state paper. There are estimated to be around 1.5 million separate papers in the Churchill archive. The archive comprises both state and non-state papers. The papers which were purchased with lottery funds were the non-state papers.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 17 May, Official Report, column 270 on the value of the Churchill archive, what advice he received from each of the bodies listed, the individual historians and relevant institutions as to the appropriate monetary value of the papers. [25600]

Mr. Dorrell: My answer of 17 May related to a question about the historical significance of the papers. As to the value, the National Heritage Memorial Fund took independent advice from a different source; this was from a well respected dealer in the field of antiquarian books.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if the Churchill papers are fully catalogued. [25154]

Mr. Dorrell: An outline catalogue is available at Churchill college, Cambridge, and at the national register of archives in Chancery lane.

Work on a detailed catalogue began at Churchill college in 1991. It is expected to take a further five years to complete.

British Broadcasting Corporation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage to what extent the closure of BBC Radio CWR and other local radio stations will affect the BBC's statutory obligations in its charter. [25230]

Mr. Dorrell: The BBC's royal charter requires the corporation to provide such broadcasting services and facilities as may be required by any licence granted to, or any agreement made with, the BBC by the Secretary of State. Under the terms of the annex to its current licence and agreement the board of governors recognises that the BBC has a duty to undertake to provide a properly balanced service displaying a wide range of subject matter. Subject to meeting this obligation, it is for the BBC to decide how best to allocate its resources.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many licences have been issued to private radio stations to replace those stations that will be reduced or merged by the BBC. [25229]

Mr. Dorrell: It is for the Radio Authority to determine the pattern for licensing independent local radio stations.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what discussions he has had with the BBC management following the decisions to close BBC Radio CWR and other local BBC radio stations, in respect of the transparency of the BBC's decision-making progress. [25226]

Mr. Dorrell: None. The transparency of the BBC's decision-making process is a subject which is being reviewed in the context of discussions about its new charter and agreement.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make it his policy to demand full disclosure of the BBC's future financial plans with particular regard to (a) programme production and (b) local services. [25227]

Mr. Dorrell: The White Paper on the future of the BBC proposed that the BBC should publish objectives for each of its services and for programme production, and should undertake public consultation prior to making any material change to the nature of its services.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many local radio stations are to be merged with other radio stations; and if he will list the radio stations that will be merged or lose their licence to broadcast. [25228]

Mr. Dorrell: These are matters for the BBC and the Radio Authority. It is for the BBC to determine what local radio services it will provide and for the Radio Authority to license and oversee the development of independent local radio.

Tourism-related Regulations

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list all those tourism-related regulations that have been amended or repealed as part of the Government's deregulation initiative. [24138]

Mr. Dorrell: A complete list of regulations amended or repealed which affect the tourist industry could only be assembled at disproportionate cost, but progress has been made in several of the key areas identified during my Department's inquiry into regulatory burdens on tourism. Examples include food hygiene regulation, road signposting and the Electricity at Work Regulations. We are continuing to follow up a number of issues made to me in the course of the inquiry.

National Lottery

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the arts and sports bodies in the London borough of Ealing to which grants have been given from national lottery proceeds; what sum of money was involved in each case; and if he will make a statement. [24811]

Mr. Dorrell: There have as yet been no national lottery awards made to arts or sports organisations based in the London borough of Ealing.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will summarise the criteria used for the allocation of national lottery money in Wales. [24841]

Mr. Dorrell: The national lottery distributing bodies operating in Wales have each developed their own eligibility criteria for lottery funding, within the framework provided by the directions made under section 26 of the National Lottery etc. Act 1993, and the individual bodies' governing legislation. Copies of the directions have been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how he expects the national museums of Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales to benefit from national lottery money; and if he will make a statement. [24842]

Mr. Dorrell: The national museums of Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales are eligible for national lottery funding from the National Heritage Memorial Fund.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will consider relaxing the restrictions for the national lottery on publishing information about the district in which a winning ticket was sold. [25579]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Protection of winners' anonymity is a section 5 licence condition and therefore a matter for the director general of the national lottery. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member, placing copies of his response in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what measures he plans to enable the owners of unclaimed winning lottery tickets to come forward. [25580]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 22 May 1995]: This is an operational matter for Camelot Group plc. I have therefore asked the director general of the national lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the lottery, to write to the hon. Member, placing copies of his response in the Library of the House.

Historic Documents

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what special training is given to persons who have responsibility for assessing the historical significance of documents held by his Department. [23282]

Mr. Dorrell: Training in assessing the historical significance of departmental records is carried out under the guidance of the keeper of public records. It is provided in a number of different ways, including courses on the appraisal of records and through conferences and seminars arranged by the Public Record Office.

Rural Economy

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is his estimate of the net annual financial saving, or cost, of his Department's submission for the proposed White Paper on the Rural Economy. [24328]

Mr. Dorrell: Proposals for the rural White Paper remain subject to continuing collective consideration and discussion. The cost of measures contained in the White Paper will be taken into account in the Public Expenditure Survey.

VE Day

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to congratulate the staff of the royal parks for their part in the VE day commemorations; and if he will make a statement. [24123]

Mr. Dorrell: The VE day commemorations in Hyde park were a great success and I am conveying appropriate congratulations and thanks to all those involved in the organisation of the events, including staff of the Royal Parks Agency.

Evidence to Select Committees

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, what training his civil servants receive in preparation to give evidence to select committees with special reference to (a) watching a video, (b) written information and (c) oral information. [25577]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Training is available from the Civil Service College for those civil servants who are likely to appear in person to give evidence. A number of senior civil servants in my Department have already attended such courses.

A copy of the Cabinet Office guidance "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees" is sent to all grade 5s and above in my Department. Copies of the guidance are available in the House Libraries.

Welsh Fourth Channel

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, columns 148–50, to the right hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones) if he will state the basis for the Beastall report's conclusions that all five intermediary companies used were genuinely trading; what checks were made with Companies House and each company's auditors with respect to annual reports and accounts pertinent to that issue; and if he will make a statement. [25698]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Mr. Beastall's concern was to check that the companies involved had not been created merely as vehicles for sponsorship payments. His conclusion that they were genuinely trading was based on evidence from S4C, the proprietors of the companies and, in some cases, ABSA that they were engaged in film, video or programme production or related activities at the time that the sponsorship payments were made.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 16 May to the right hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones), Official Report, columns 148–50, what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority concerning the date on which the disciplinary action was taken against the member of S4C in relation to the Pengwyn Pinc issue; and what form the disciplinary action took. [25267]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 22 May 1995]: I have had no discussions with the chairman of the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority on this topic. The timing and form of any disciplinary action is a matter for S4C.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 16 May to the right hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones), Official Report, columns 148–50, what proposals he has for submitting a report to the Comptroller and Auditor-General; and if he will make a statement on the accountability of the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority to the Committee of Public Accounts. [25266]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 22 May 1995]: A copy of the report by Mr. John Beastall has been sent to the Comptroller and Auditor General. The chief executive of S4C is designated as the accounting officer for payments made to S4C under the Broadcasting Act 1990. He may be called upon to appear before the Committee of Public Accounts.

Tourism (EC Funding)

Mr. Hawksley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if private sector applications are eligible for moneys under European structural fund objective 5B, priority 3 measure 3.1 in the tourism sector. [24581]

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

European regional development fund grants in the tourism sector are covered in all the UK objective 5b single programming documents, although the precise priorities and measures involved vary. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Broxtowe (Mr. Lester) today, on new rules on private sector involvement in ERDF projects. Tourism projects are treated in the same way as other projects.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Governors

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 17, what steps are being taken to recruit more members of the ethnic minorities to governor grades. [25530]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 24 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the recruitment of members of the ethnic minorities to the prison governor grades.

During a voluntary survey of staff ethnic origins, four members of the governor grades indicated that they were members of the ethnic minorities. There are a further 520 members of the prison officer grades of ethnic minority origin, who have an avenue of promotion into the governor grades. We expect that the currently small number of governor grades from ethnic minority backgrounds will increase over time, as some of these officers progress through the ranks under the normal arrangements for promotion. The Prison Service is continuing to try and increase the level of recruitment to the prison officer grades from ethnic minority groups.

The Prison Service's Acceleration Promotion Scheme is attempting to recruit ethnic minority graduates by a range of means. We have taken part in a mentoring scheme with one of the London universities, which arranges for black and Asian students to shadow a manager from the ethnic minorities, and an undergraduate is shortly to be sponsored by the Prison Service through the Windsor Fellowship Scheme. Last autumn, the Accelerated Promotion Scheme's national recruitment campaign placed advertisements in ethnic minority newspapers—The Voice, The Weekly Journal, Asian Times and Eastern Eye—as well as in the national broadsheets. Advertising is also placed in careers publications aimed specifically at ethnic minority undergraduates, such as Hobsons' Racial Equality Casebook and Kaleidoscope, both of which are circulated widely among universities and community relations organisations. Attempts will be made late this year to target universities with high numbers of black and Asians students, where we hope to offer presentations outlining career options in the Prison Service, under both the Accelerated Promotion Scheme and more generally.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what number of prison governors, by grade, are women. [25531]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 24 May 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of female governors in the Prison Service.

As at 1 May 1995 there are 1,020 staff employed in governor grades, of whom 96 (9.4%) are women. Broken down by grade the numbers are as follows:

Grade	Number of women in grade (%)	Total number of staff in grade
Governor 1	2 (4.4%)	46
Governor 2	5 (6.7%)	75
Governor 3	16 (12.7%)	126
Governor 4	37 (12%)	309
Governor 5	26 (7.8%)	429
Governor 5 (APS)[1]	10 (28.6%)	35

[1]Accelerated Promotion Scheme, the Prison Service's fast-track management development scheme.

The number of female governing governors has increased steadily over the last few years.

There are now eight male establishments and four female establishments where the governing governor is a woman. These are:

Bullingdon
Bullwood Hall (f)
East Sutton Park (f)
Erlestoke
Holloway (f)
Kirklevington
Low Newton
The Mount Norwich
Pucklechurch (f)
Swinfen Hall
Woodhill

The controller at Buckley Hall, a contracted prison, is a woman.

Lotteries

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will summarise the outcome of the Schindler case concerning the United Kingdom's ban on EC lotteries before the European Court of Justice, and its practical effects. [25763]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The judgment in the Schindler case was delivered by the European Court of Justice on 24 March 1994.

The court found that the importation of lottery advertisements and tickets into a member state relates to a service within the meaning of the treaty of Rome and that the UK lotteries legislation is an obstacle to the freedom to provide this service. However, the court also found that the aims of the UK legislation were to protect the users of the service as well as consumers generally and social order, and that such aims justified the restrictions on the freedom to provide services.

The practical effect of the judgment has been the continued ability of the UK to ban advertising and promotion of lotteries not permitted by our legislation, including those operating in other member states, under section 2 of the Lotteries and Amusements Act 1976.

Job Losses

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many posts were lost in (a) the Home Office and (b) agencies for which the Home Office is responsible, listing the total lost posts agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and how many posts are proposed to be lost in 1995–96. [25075]

Mr. Howard: Changes in the numbers of posts are not recorded centrally. Consequently the information sought could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Staff in post information can be found in the annual publication "Civil Service Statistics" and in annex 4 of the Department's annual report, Cm 2508, both of which are available in the Library.

Action Against Crime Pack

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost of publishing the Action Against Crime pack; and what proportion of this represents the time spent by his officials. [25151]

Mr. Howard: For information on the cost of publication, I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms Primarolo) on 24 April, Official Report, column 385. The pack was drafted by my officials from existing material in the course of their normal duties and was not costed separately.

Prisons (Market Testing)

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on the selection of prisons for market testing. [26488]

Mr. Howard: In August last year, the Prison Service announced a shortlist of establishments which were either poor performers or had been judged to have particular scope for improvement. The Prisons Board intended to select for market testing one or two establishments from this list, but in an attempt to resolve a complaint to the central arbitration committee about this process, selection was deferred.

The central arbitration committee heard the complaint 1 February and published its determination 27 March. I will place a copy in the Library. The Prison Service is today responding to the central arbitration committee determination by providing some additional information about the basis on which the short list was prepared.

Because of this regrettable delay, the information on which the present short list was prepared is now out of date. A fresh selection process will instead be conducted in due course.

Prisoner Transfers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have been transferred from prisons in the mainland UK to prisons in Northern Ireland and Ireland over the past 10 years. [25401]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 22 May 1995]: The number of prisoners transferred from prisons in England and Wales to prisons in Northern Ireland over the past 10 years is given in the table. It is not possible for prisoners to be transferred to prisons in the Republic of Ireland because although the Irish Republic has signed the Council of Europe convention it has not yet ratified it.

Transfer of prisoners to Northern Ireland

Year	Number
1984	1
1985	4
1986	2
1987	3
1988	5
1989	17
1990	13
1991	25
1992	26

Foundation for Business Responsibilities

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans the fraud division at the Crown Prosecution Service has to investigate the affairs of the Foundation for Business Responsibilities. [24702]

The Attorney-General: I have been asked to reply.

The investigation of alleged criminal offences is a police function. The papers submitted to the CPS by the deputy leader of the opposition of Westminster city council will be referred to the police.

Derek Bentley

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the report submitted to his Department by the investigating officer on behalf of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis regarding inconsistencies in the evidence, including evidence not available to the court or the public, relating to the case of Derek Bentley. [24936]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to his question of 18 May, Official Report, column 363.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Immigration Adjudicators

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many full-time and part-time immigration adjudicators employed by the Immigration Appellate Authority are currently designated as special adjudicators to hear appeals against a refusal of asylum; and what plans he has to increase that number. [26179]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Of the 20 full-time and 91 part-time immigration adjudicators appointed by the Lord Chancellor, 20 and 57 respectively are currently designated as special adjudicators to hear appeals against a refusal of asylum. Increases in the numbers of full-time and part-time immigration adjudicators are planned during the course of 1995.

It is expected that all full-time immigration adjudicators appointed will be designated as special adjudicators. Increases in the number of part-time immigration adjudicators designated as special adjudicators will be made as they gain sufficient experience of immigration work, the number depending on the work load of the Immigration Appellate Authority.

Mrs. Kuldip Kaur

Mr. Madden: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 4 May, Official Report, column 259, concerning Mrs. Kuldip Kaur, what decision was taken by the regional adjudicator on whether her appeal may proceed out of time; and if he will make a statement. [25996]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I now understand that the Immigration Appellate Authority sent copies of the case papers to the former address of Mrs. Kaur's representatives. These were returned by the Post Office undelivered, and as Mrs. Kaur's representatives had not had an opportunity to submit their written observations, a decision was not taken by the adjudicator on 12 May.

The case papers have now been sent to Mrs. Kaur's representatives at their current address. I apologise for the delay to Mrs. Kaur's case and confirm that it is now due to be placed before the regional adjudicator on 23 June.

Legal Aid

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the day and exact time when his Department's press office released copies of the Green Paper on legal aid published on 17 May to (a) legal correspondents of the broadsheet newspapers, (b) the Bar Council, (c) the Law Society, (d) the National Association of Citizen's Advice Bureaux, (e) the National Consumer Council, (f) the Consumers' Association, (g) the Law Centres' Federation and (h) the Legal Action Group; and if he will make a statement. [26020]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor's Department's press office invited representatives of the media, including the legal correspondents of the broadsheet newspapers, to collect one copy each of the Green Paper on legal aid, embargoed for 16.00 on 17 May, from the Department's headquarters building at 11.15 on 17 May. Representatives of the Bar Council, the Law Society, the National Association of Citizen's Advice Bureaux, the National Consumer Council, the Law Centres' Federation, and the Legal Action Group received advance copies on the same basis. A copy of the Green Paper on legal aid was sent to the Consumers' Association by post on 17 May.

DEFENCE

Chinook Crash, Mull of Kintyre

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to publish the results of the inquiry into the Chinook crash on the Mull of Kintyre on 2 June 1994. [26619]

Mr. Soames: The circumstances of this tragic accident have been the subject of a most exhaustive investigation. The proceedings are now almost complete and I hope to release the findings by the middle of June. A summary will be placed in the Library of the House in the usual way.

Defence Postal and Courier Services

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to rationalise the activities of the Defence Postal and Courier Services agency. [26751]

Mr. Soames: As part of "Front Line First", my Department announced its intention to integrate departmental mail services, rationalise vehicle fleets, provide better training of all personnel and set up a strategic management structure across all three services.

These proposals were explained in a consultative document issued on 9 March 1995. No objections to the proposals were received during the consultation period, and I have therefore decided that we shall begin work on rationalising the mail and courier operations of the Department. A number of activities previously carried out at several separate locations in the centre of London will be rationalised, and concentrated at the British forces post office site, in Mill Hill, north-west London. This will involve the main MOD mail sorting operation and the Defence Postal and Courier Service terminal centred on St. Giles court, London WC2, and mail and courier vehicles currently located at Regents Park barracks.

Inglis barracks, Mill Hill is the headquarters of the Defence Postal and Courier Service agency and will absorb the additional personnel management and training commitment implicit in the rationalisation.

We will of course continue to consult staff and trade unions about the detailed implementation of this rationalisation.

Royal Marines School of Music, Deal

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department has concluded its consideration of the future of the Royal Marines school of music, Deal; and if he will make a statement. [26693]

Mr. Soames: Our proposal to transfer the Royal Marines school of music from Deal was announced by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 14 July 1994, Official Report, column 1171. A consultation document was issued on 17 October. We have considered very carefully all the representations made during the consultation period.

I can now announce that we have decided to confirm the preferred option contained in the consultative document. The Royal Marines school of music will therefore transfer from Deal to Portsmouth, by spring 1966, where it will be housed in the Royal Naval detention quarters. They will not be required for their present purpose from the autumn of this year, and can be refurbished at modest cost to adapt them for the Royal Marines school of music.

The move will result in significant savings for the Defence budget. The closure of the stand-alone site at Deal, which is far too large for its present purpose, and the removal of the school to within the perimeter of the larger naval base at Portsmouth will save about £3 million per year in support costs. No significant additional support costs will be incurred at Portsmouth where the naval base has adequate infrastructure to absorb the relatively small school of music. The case for the transfer of the Royal Marines school of music has been thoroughly discussed with all interested parties including the hon. Member for Dover (Mr. Shaw), who has represented his constituents' views with understandable vigour. Indeed, of the many measures arising as a result of the "Defence Costs Study", the decision to close the Royal Marines school of music at Deal is one taken only with the greatest regret and in view of the clear financial case. We fully recognise the warm and close relationship which has grown up between the people of Deal and the Royal Marines in an association which dates back to 1664. I know that successive generations of recruits have been grateful for the friendliness and support they have received.

Advisers

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the names of the individuals who were recruited from outside the civil service and the military to advise him on "Options for Change" and "Front Line First", respectively. [26143]

Mr. Freeman: No external advisers were recruited for "Options for Change". For external advisers on "Front Line First", I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) gave to the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) on 29 April 1994, Official Report, column 399.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his previous paid special adviser, Perry Miller, underwent security clearance. [26146]

Mr. Rifkind: Yes.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what restrictions on future employment were made when Perry Miller was recruited as his special adviser. [26142]

(2) what written agreement on the scope of employment to be undertaken by Perry Miller when he left his Department as special adviser was reached with his private sector employer. [26144]

Mr. Rifkind: None, as special advisers are at present explicitly excluded from the business appointments rules.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his unpaid adviser, David Hart, underwent security clearance. [26147]

Mr. Rifkind: Mr. Hart has been subject to the checks necessary to permit him from time to time to have access to classified information.

Trident

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assurances were provided by his Department to Devonport Management Ltd. in relation to the refitting of Trident submarines; and if he will make a statement; [26130]

(2) what is his Department's policy concerning the location of the refitting of Trident submarines; and what change there has been in his Department's policy in the last two years; [26132]

(3) what recent discussions he has had with Babcock International concerning the refitting of Trident submarines. [26131]

Mr. Freeman: It was announced by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 24 June 1993, Official Report, column 447, that, subject to satisfactory contractual negotiations, refitting of Trident submarines will be undertaken at Devonport. Contractual negotiations are continuing, the details of which are commercially confidential, and no assurances have been provided to Devonport Management Ltd. There has been no change to that policy and Babcock International has no involvement of which I am aware with the provision of nuclear facilities at Devonport.

Anti-ballistic Missile Defence System

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's policy on the development of a European anti-ballistic missile defence system. [26128]

Mr. Freeman: The UK is currently considering whether a requirement exists for ballistic missile defence and this will be informed by the programme of pre-feasibility studies which I announced in the House on 18 October 1994, at columns 239–400. This assessment will include opportunities for European collaboration.

Royal Welch Fusiliers, Gorazde

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Royal Welch Fusiliers based in Gorazde have (a) an adequate supply of fuel and (b) adequate stocks of food. [26252]

Mr. Soames: Yes, although restrictions on the movement of convoys to and from Gorazde have limited the use of fuel to essential tasks.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the date of the three most recent deliveries of mail to the Royal Welch Fusiliers based in Gorazde. [26251]

Mr. Soames: On 21 April, 28 April and 19 May.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the morale of the Royal Welch Fusiliers based in Gorazde; and if he will make a statement. [26124]

Mr. Soames: The British contingent in Gorazde is in good spirits and morale is high. Regular contact is maintained with the base and the situation is closely monitored.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the Royal Welch Fusiliers based in Gorazde are under water rationing; and if water is available for washing purposes; [26250]

(2) if the Royal Welch Fusiliers based in Gorazde are under water rationing; and if water is available for washing purposes. [26250]

Mr. Soames: In order to preserve fuel, the water purification plant at the British base in Gorazde is running at a reduced rate and consequently some rationing of purified water has been introduced. However, supplies are being supplemented with sterilised water and adequate stocks are available. Water is also freely available for washing purposes.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the (a) leave roster for the Royal Welch Fusiliers based in Gorazde and (b) backlog in the granting of leave to members of the Royal Welch Fusiliers in Gorazde; [26122]

(2) what effect recent fighting in Gorazde has had on the granting of leave to members of the Royal Welch Fusiliers in Gorazde. [26123]

Mr. Soames: Restrictions on the movement of UN personnel to and from Gorazde have caused some difficulties for the leave roster of the Royal Welch Fusiliers. There are currently some 42 personnel with a backlog of leave which they are expected to be able to take before the end of their current tour of duty.

Nimrod Aircraft

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which company is responsible for the maintenance and support of the Nimrod aircraft which crashed off the coast of Scotland on 16 May; when the contract with the company commenced; how many of his Department's aircraft are maintained by this company; who was responsible for the maintenance and support of the Nimrod aircraft before this contract came into force; and if he will list the dates and circumstances of any previous accidents involving Nimrod aircraft in the last five years. [26090]

Mr. Soames: Maintenance and servicing of RAF Nimrod aircraft is currently undertaken by RAF personnel at the Nimrod major servicing unit at RAF Kinloss. As a result of the "Competing for Quality" initiative, the work of the NMSU has been market tested and FRA Serco will assume responsibility for Nimrod servicing next month.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the conclusion of the investigation into the recent crash off Scotland of a Nimrod aircraft; if he will place a copy of the report in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [26126]

Mr. Soames: A RAF board of inquiry was convened immediately after the accident; it is not, however, expected to report for some time. A copy of the summary of the inquiry's findings will be placed in the Library of the House.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the base of the Nimrod which recently crashed off the Scottish coast; what operational duties it was carrying out at the time of the crash; and how many crew were on board the aircraft. [26089]

Mr. Soames: The Nimrod aircraft which ditched in the Moray firth on 16 May 1995 was based at RAF Waddington. It was engaged in a post-servicing air test. A total of seven crew were on board.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Nimrod maritime patrol aircraft his Department possesses; what was the total cost of purchase of the aircraft; and where the aircraft are stationed. [26125]

Mr. Freeman: There are 26 operational Nimrod MR2 aircraft, including two in use reserves plus four spares. All are stationed at RAF Kinloss. The original total cost of these aircraft is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Nuclear Test Ban Treaty

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes to his Department's policy on a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty have been made in the last four years. [26176]

Mr. Freeman: For many years, HMG have been committed to achieving the conclusion of an effective and verifiable comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty. We welcomed in August 1993 the conference on disarmament mandating an ad hoc committee on a nuclear test ban to negotiate such a treaty. We have kept our policy under close review and, for example, on 6 April this year announced in the conference on disarmament that we have now accepted that there should be no exemption in the draft treaty for tests in exceptional circumstances.

Office Accommodation

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he maintains a record of the total office area of his Department's main building on Whitehall which remains unused. [26175]

Mr. Freeman: My Department does record office accommodation which becomes temporarily vacant in main building. This record is updated on a regular basis.

Compulsory Drug Tests

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Army have taken part in compulsory drug tests; how many of these were positive drug tests and what has happened to these people; if individuals or units are selected for compulsory drug tests; which units have had compulsory drug tests; and how people are selected for compulsory drug tests. [26082]

Mr. Soames: At present, 4,420 officers and soldiers have provided specimens of urine as part of the compulsory drug testing programme. To date, 21 soldiers have tested positive; and of these, 15 have been either discharged or recommended for discharge; two are recommended to be given formal warnings, one of whom it is also recommended should be reduced in rank; two have elected for premature voluntary release; a decision on the remaining two is awaited. Units or sub-units have been selected at random, and individuals within them have been chosen by random selection of surname initial. The units and sub-units selected are as follows:

Ministry of Defence, (Army department Main Building)
Headquarters Northern Ireland
Headquarters 1st (UK) Armoured Division
Headquarters 42nd (Northern Western) Brigade
Headquarters Herford Garrison
Headquarters Lisburn Station
Headquarters Joint Support Group Northern Ireland
16 Air Defence Regiment Royal Artillery
47th Field Regiment Royal Artillery
33 Engineer Regiment Royal Engineers
1st (UK) Armoured Division Headquarters and Signal Regiment
15th Signal Regiment
16th Signal Regiment
241 Signal Squadron
253 Signal Squadron
Joint Communications Unit (Northern Ireland)
1st Battalion The Grenadier Guards
1st Battalion The Scots Guards
1st Battalion The Kings Own Scottish Borderers
1st Battalion The Queens Lancashire Regiment
1st Battalion The Highlanders
2nd Battalion The Parachute Regiment
9th Regiment Army Air Corp
5 Airborne Brigade Combat Services Support Battalion
12 Supply Regiment Royal Logistic Corp
15 Supply Regiment Royal Logistic Corp
21 Logistic Support Regiment Royal Logistic Corp
221 Explosive Ordnance Disposal Squadron Royal Logistic Corp
321 Explosive Ordnance Disposal Squadron Royal Logistic Corp
5 Field Ambulance Royal Army Medical Corp
Army Pay and Documentation Office (Northern Ireland)
Royal Military Police Training Centre Chichester
2nd Regiment Royal Military Police
74 Provost Company Royal Military Police
115 Provost Company Royal Military Police
36 Detachment Special Investigation Branch Royal Military Police
32 Army Education Centre
45 Army Education Centre
Education Services
7 Dental Group
9 Dental Group
Garrison Labour Support Unit Herford, Germany
Army Families and Welfare Services Herford, Germany
Army Careers and Information Office Herford, Germany
Station Services Office Herford, Germany

Where parts of the units only are to be tested, individuals are selected by random selection based on surname initials. The selection involves the commanding officer and the drug testing officer completing separately a matrix. One matrix lists initials and the other contains numbers. Once completed, one matrix is then placed on the top of the other, and the surname initials are listed in order of priority according to the random selection. Personnel are then tested until the number of specimens allocated for testing that day are collected. If a whole unit is to be tested, as has been the policy since the beginning of March, the unit is selected by my Department at random from those available, and all personnel in barracks on that day are tested.

Western European Union

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy concerning the creation of a WEU military satellite capability; and if he will make a statement. [26127]

Mr. Soames: The Western European Union is currently studying the possibilities of co-operation on a military satellite capability. The United Kingdom is contributing fully to that work. No decisions have yet been taken.

Nuclear Test Veterans

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's policy in respect of nuclear test veterans, and if he will make a statement. [26177]

Mr. Soames: Over a period of more than 40 years from the atmospheric nuclear tests in the 1950s and early 1960s, up to the end of 1990, there has been no overall excess of death and malignant disease among British nuclear test veterans. Out of over 20,000 veterans studies by the National Radiological Protection Board, more than 3,000 would have died, over 900 of them from cancer, if the veterans had suffered the same death and cancer rates as members of the public in the same age groups. In fact, fewer than 2,800 veterans died, fewer than 800 of them from cancer, these figures being no higher than for the matched control group in the NRPB study. These facts do not sustain a case for compensation.

Manpower Reductions

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is to be the percentage fall in the manpower strength of (a) the Army, (b) the Royal Air Force and (c) the Royal Navy between January 1990 and the completion of his Department's plans under the "Options for Change" and "Front Line First" initiatives. [26129]

Mr. Soames: The percentage fall in manpower strength of the Army, Royal Air Force and the Royal Navy on completion of MOD's plans under "Options for Change" and the "Front Line First" initiatives will depend on such factors as recruiting and turnover of personnel. Some of the "Front Line First" initiatives are still being considered. Manpower forecasts indicate that by 1995–96, manpower strengths will have fallen by 26 per cent. in the Army, 24 per cent. in the Royal Air Force and 21 per cent. for the Royal Navy since January 1990. These figures include some of the "Options for Change" measures already implemented.

Gibraltar Garrison

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the oral statement of the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad) of 20 December 1994, Official Report, column 1535, how many people have benefited from the tailored training courses provided by the Ministry of Defence for those affected by the drawdown of the Gibraltar garrison; and if he will make a statement. [26267]

Mr. Soames: To ease the impact of reductions in the garrison, the Ministry of Defence in Gibraltar provides training and retraining opportunities for its locally entered civilian staff. Courses are conducted either internally or by employing external educational authorities for vocational training. They include driver instruction, information technology, management, administration and engineering, all of which are recognised by the Gibraltar Government as valuable skills for future employment. Some 250 personnel have so far benefited from these training initiatives.

EC Explanatory Memoranda

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many explanatory memoranda on EC proposals his Department has prepared since 19 July 1993; and for how many explanatory memoranda on EC proposals compliance cost assessments have been drawn up. [25799]

Mr. Freeman: None.

Building Works

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for each piece of work subject to a building process under the auspices of (a) the Ministry of Defence and (b) agencies for which the Ministry of Defence is responsible, where work was carried out, who were the successful bidders, and which contracts were won by in-house bidders in (1) 1993–94 and (2) 1994–95 and (3) 1995–96. [25498]

Mr. Freeman: The MOD assumed responsibility for the management and procurement of its works services from the PSA in April 1990. This was a new sphere of activity for the Department for which it had no in-house capacity. To meet this requirement, MOD set up Defence Works Services to act as its intelligent customer capability.

All of the information requested is not available centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, it is possible to provide details of works contracts placed by my Department for construction projects, each costing more than £24,000, excluding VAT.

	Contracts	Value (inc. VAT) £ million
a) 1993–94	568	720
b) 1994–95	479	545
c) 1995–96	22	[1]25

Note:
[1] April 1995 only.

My Department has no in-house capability for construction contracts and therefore there are no in-house bids.

Details of MOD works requirements are published fortnightly in the "Works Services Opportunities" bulletin—an example of which has been placed in the House of Commons Library—which is widely available on subscription.

Retirements and Redundancies

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people in (a) the Defence Department and (b) agencies for which the Defence Department is responsible (i) took early retirement, (ii) took voluntary redundancy, (iii) took compulsory redundancy and (iv) were retired on medical grounds in (1) 1993–94 and (2) 1994–95; and what is the projected figure for 1995–96. [25475]

Mr. Freeman: Details of staff who left my Department early are set out in the table. Records held centrally do not distinguish between staff of individual top level budgets or agencies, or terms of redundancy. Such information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Our present plans assume that more than 2,000 staff will leave under early retirement or redundancy terms in 1995–96.

Year	Early retirement	Redundancy	Ill-health retirement
1993–94	399	2,639	1,200
1994–95	166	3,058	1,120

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual cost to his Department of staff leaving under redundancy/ early retirement schemes to incorporate (a) added years lump sum payments, (b) redundancy payments, (c) pension payments, including enhancements and (d) any other special arrangements for (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95, (iii) projected for 1995–96 and (iv) projected for 1996–97. [25663]

Mr. Freeman: The costs to my Department of early retirement and redundancies are borne from the running costs provision. A detailed breakdown of the various costs could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The total costs borne on my Department's running costs in 1993–94 and 1994–95 were £62 million and £59 million respectively. For 1995–96, the amount is estimated at £51 million. Projections for 1996–97 will be determined during the coming public expenditure survey.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many posts were lost in (a) the Defence Department and (b) agencies for which the Defence Department is responsible, listing the total lost posts agency by agency for (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and how many posts are proposed to be lost in 1995–96. [25085]

Mr. Freeman: Historical information on posts lost is not kept centrally by my Department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The total number of permanent UK-based posts which it is estimated will be lost in 1995–96 is some 6,000.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what changes there have been in the numbers of staff employed by (a) the Ministry of Defence and (b) agencies for which the Ministry of Defence is responsible, listing the changes in the number of staff agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what changes are projected for 1995–96; [25066]

(2) how many staff of (a) the Defence Department and (b) agencies for which the Defence Department is responsible, were employed on a casual or short-term basis in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96; [25482]

(3) what changes there have been in the number of staff in employment by grade in (a) his Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25555]

Mr. Freeman: The numbers of permanent and casual staff employed by my Department in 1993–94, projected outturn for 1994–95, and plans for 1995–96 are published annually in the departmental report by the Ministry of Defence, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

No projections broken down by grade are available.

Defence Export Services Organisation

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people work on the Iranian desk of the Defence Export Services Organisation. [26134]

Mr. Freeman: The DESO does not have a desk responsible specifically for Iran. Inquiries are handled by a section of three people, who are also responsible for seven other countries.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Intergovernmental Conference on Political Union

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, in respect of the intergovernmental conference on political union convened by the European Council at its meeting in Dublin on 25 and 26 June 1990, he will state (a) the date and location of each meeting, (b) the names of those representing the United Kingdom, (c) the relevant duration of each meeting and (d) which parts of the draft treaty on political union (i) were, and (ii) were not incorporated into the draft treaty on European Union signed at Maastricht on 9 and 10 December 1991.

Mr. David Davis [holding answer 7 March 1995]: Ministerial meetings were held on the following dates as part of the 1990–91 intergovernmental conference on political union:

Date	Representative	Location
1990
15 December	(Formal Opening of IGC) Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary	Rome
1991
4–5 February	Foreign Secretary	Brussels
4 March	Foreign Secretary and the right hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones)	Brussels
26 March	(Informal Foreign Ministers meeting) Foreign Secretary	Luxembourg
8 April	(Special European Council) Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary	Luxembourg
15 April	Right hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones)	Luxembourg
27–28 April	(Informal Foreign Ministers meeting) Foreign Secretary	Luxembourg
13–14 May	Foreign Secretary and the right hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones)	Brussels
3 June	(Informal Foreign Ministers meeting) Foreign Secretary	Dresden
17–18 June	Foreign Secretary	Luxembourg
23 June	Right hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones)	Luxembourg
28–29 June	(European Council) Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary	Luxembourg
29–30 July	Right hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones)	Brussels
30 September	Foreign Secretary and the right hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones)	Brussels
5–6 October	(Informal Foreign Ministers meeting) Foreign Secretary	The Hague
28 October	Right hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones)	Brussels
4–5 November	Foreign Secretary and the right hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones)	Brussels
12–13 November	Foreign Secretary and the right hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones)	The Hague
2–3 December	Foreign Secretary and the right hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones)	Brussels
9–10 December	(European Council) Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary	Maastricht

This was an on-going negotiation, none of which was finalised until the Maastricht European Council on 10 December 1991, following which the treaty on European Union was signed at Maastricht on 7 February 1992.

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy in respect of the recommendations made in the European Parliament's motion on the extension of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, adopted on 5 April, relating to (a) nuclear weapon states opening all their nuclear facilities to inspection by the International Atomic Energy Agency, (b) the creation of an international office to control plutonium and highly enriched uranium, (c) nuclear weapon states declaring that they will refrain from the first use of nuclear weapons against non-nuclear states, (d) for the conference of disarmament to begin negotiations on a nuclear weapons convention, (e) for the nuclear weapons states to agree a timetable and funding for fulfilling their obligations under article VI of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and (f) for the creation of a nuclear weapons register; and if he will list those recommendations which Her Majesty's Government (i) support and (ii) do not support.

Mr. David Davis [holding answer 4 May 1995]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs made a statement on the nuclear non-proliferation treaty review and extension conference on 16 May. Our civil nuclear facilities are subject to international safeguards. We do not support any of the other recommendations.

European Union

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which east European states he expects to be eligible for EEC membership; what timetable he envisages; and what size of fishing fleet each of these states has. [25381]

Mr. David Davis: The Copenhagen European Council in 1993 agreed that the associated countries of central and eastern Europe that so desired would become members of the European Union. Their accessions would take place once they were able to assume the obligations of membership. The present associates are Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Romania and Bulgaria. Similar association agreements are expected to be signed with the Baltic states at the 12 June Foreign Affairs Council, and another is being negotiated with Slovenia.

According to the latest FAO figures, for 1992, the Polish fishing fleet has 521 vessels, 249,079 gross tonnage; the Bulgarian, 38 vessels, 86,600 gross tonnage; the Latvian, 141 vessels, 343,236 gross tonnage; the Lithuanian, 162 vessels, 236,268 gross tonnage; the Estonian, 249 vessels, 180,921 gross tonnage; and, according to 1989 OECD figures, the Romanian fleet has 106 vessels, 237,457 gross tonnage. Figures are not available for Slovenia.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the specific contributions to the nation's security which arise from membership of the European Union which are not adequately covered by membership of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation, the Western European Union, the United Nations and Organisation of Security and Co-operation. [25770]

Mr. David Davis: The security of the United Kingdom is enhanced by the contribution that membership of the European Union makes to our prosperity. It benefits from intergovernmental co-operation under the Maastricht treaty in the fields of justice and home affairs, especially with respect to fighting cross-border crime and drug trafficking. Our participation in the common foreign and security policy enables us to exercise greater influence in foreign affairs, including relations with Russia, Ukraine and central and eastern Europe.

National Minorities

Sir Donald Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 3 March, Official Report, column 731, what further actions are necessary prior to ratification by the United Kingdom of the Council of Europe framework convention for the protection of national minorities; when he expects these actions to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [25473]

Mr. David Davis: The framework convention accords closely with our national legislation and policies on non-discrimination equality of opportunity, hence our decision in principle to ratify it. There are some technical points which we wish to consider further before ratifying.

Ms Mukhtaj Bibi

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Ms Mukhtaj Bibi, ref: GV100/21701/VT, is going to be interviewed and the United Kingdom post in Islamabad in connection with her application to enter the United Kingdom. [25990]

Mr. Baldry: I have asked the high commission at Islamabad for details and will arrange for the hon. Member to receive a substantive reply from the migration and visa correspondence unit as soon as possible.

Turkey

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it the policy of Her Majesty's Government to support the proposal of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe, in recommendation 1266–1995, that the Committee of Ministers should call on Turkey to withdraw its forces from northern Iraq and set a specific timetable for Turkey to bring its constitution and legislation in line with the principles and standards of the Council of Europe; and if he will make a statement. [25860]

Mr. David Davies: At its meeting on 11 May, the Committee of Ministers took note of the Parliamentary Assembly's recommendation 1266–1995 on

"Turkey's military intervention in norther Iraq and on Turkey's military intervention in northern Iraq and on Turkey's respect of commitments concerning constitutional and legislative reforms", and instructed its deputies to prepare a reply.

We have noted with satisfaction the announcement by the Turkish Government on 4 May that their forces have withdrawn completely form northern Iraq. We are urging the Turkish Government to take equal account of our concerns over democratisation and human rights.

Gibraltar

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reply he has received to his representation made on 19 April to Foreign Minister Carlos Westendorp about the delays on the Gibraltar-Spain border. [26260]

Mr. David Davis: None.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) pursuant to the oral statement of the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad) of 20 December, Official Report, column 1535, what courses of action Her Majesty's Government have taken as a consequence of the deliberations of the Gibraltar joint economic forum; [26268]

(2) what assistance and advice has been offered to the Gibraltar Government to expand and diversify their economy; and if he will make a statement. [26255]

Mr. David Davis: We have provided extensive advice and assistance to the Government of Gibraltar. An economic study, identifying market opportunities which could be exploited by Gibraltar, was supplied in 1993, and another dealing with the impact of MOD drawdown and ways to compensate for that in 1994. In 1994, we set up the joint economic forum to consider ways of assisting Gibraltar in the wake of that rundown. We have also negotiated considerable EC structural funds help for Gibraltar. The MOD runs a training programme.

All this took place against the background of the completion of the 1986 to 1990 development grant, following which the Gibraltar Government have not requested further UK bilateral assistance.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of the longest wait and extent of delays for pedestrians and cars in either direction on the Gibraltar-Spain border, for each day since 17 May. [26259]

Mr. David Davis: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the oral statement of the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Boothferry (Mr. Davis), of 17 May, Official Report, column 307, if he will amplify on the method by which Her Majesty's Government have stood up for the rights of Gibraltarians in the current border problems; and what is the measure of success to date. [26257]

Mr. David Davis: The oral statement of the Minister of State referred to set out the position.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the oral statement of the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad) of 20 December, Official Report, column 1534, if he has anything to add to his comments about spurious claims by the Spaniards in regard to the success rate of the Royal Gibraltar police in seizing illegal substances. [26265]

Mr. David Davis: I have nothing further to add to the remarks made by my right hon. Friend the Member for Eddisbury, except to add my own congratulations to the splendid achievements of the members of the Royal Gibraltar police. The continued achievements this year are worthy of the highest praise.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current status of the talks under the Brussels process in respect of Gibraltar; and if he will make a statement. [26254]

Mr. David Davis: The last ministerial meeting under the Brussels process took place on 20 December 1994. I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer the Minster of State, my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Grantham (Mr. Hogg), gave the hon. Member for Uxbridge (Mr. Shersby) on 10 January 1995, Official Report, column 62.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reply the United Kingdom ambassador to Spain has received following his representations on 21 April to the Spanish Foreign Minister about the delays on the Gibraltar-Spain border. [26261]

Mr. David Davis: None. I made clear in my oral statement of 17 May, Official Report, columns 300–7, the attitude of the Spanish Government to the delays at the Spain-Gibraltar frontier remains unacceptable.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the oral statement of the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad), of 20 December, Official Report, column 1533, if it is Her Majesty's Government's policy to abide by the democratically expressed wish of the people of Gibraltar, in respect of their links with the Crown. [26269]

Mr. David Davis: Yes. Our commitment remains firm, as set out in the preamble to the 1969 Gibraltar constitution.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral answer of 20 December 1994, Official Report, column 1535, what response has been received to the request that the Spanish Government substantiate their allegations that Gibraltar is a money laundering centre. [26188]

Mr. David Davis: None.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those European directives which the United Kingdom Government have requested the Gibraltar Government to enact in their legislature. [26263]

Mr. David Davis: As in any other part of the EU, the Gibraltar Government must implement all applicable EU legislation.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made by the United Kingdom Government to the Spanish Government since 17 May about the delays on the Gibraltar-Spain border; and what replies have been received. [26258]

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has made our views clear to the Spanish Foreign Minister.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the oral statement of the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad), of 20 December, Official Report, column 1532, if he will detail the protests previously made by Her Majesty's Government to Spain about border controls and delays. [26266]

Mr. David Davis: On 1 December 1994, I summoned the Spanish ambassador to express our strong concern at the intrusive and disruptive checks in question; and made clear that they should cease. We also repeatedly and vigorously protested at the highest levels to the Spanish authorities on other occasions.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has in his discussions and communications with the Chief Minister of Gibraltar, intimated circumstances where the United Kingdom Government might suspend the Gibraltar constitution or dismiss the Gibraltar Government. [26253]

Mr. David Davis: No.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the legislation, other than that derived from European directives, which the United Kingdom Government have requested the Gibraltar Government to enact in their legislature; and if he will detail the reason in each case. [26262]

Mr. David Davis: We have asked the Government of Gibraltar to enact a number of pieces of legislation relating to good government and fulfilling the UK's international obligations.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1994, Official Report, column 1535, what response has been received to the request that the Spanish Government substantiate their allegation that the co-operation of Gibraltar has been refused in respect of combating money laundering. [26189]

Mr. David Davis: None. We have asked the Spaniards twice since then at trilateral talks with Gibraltar, and have received no response.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the oral statement of the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Boothferry, (Mr. Davis), of 17 May, Official Report, column 307, what response has been received in respect of United Kingdom protests at the delays on the Gibraltar-Spain border from (a) the Schengen states, (b) the European Commission, (c) the Schengen secretariat and (d) the Schengen presidency. [26256]

Mr. David Davis: We cannot provide details of confidential discussions; but we are confident that our concerns are fully understood by all those to whom we have spoken.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what quantity of illegal substances has been seized by the Royal Gibraltar police in each of the past two years. [26264]

Mr. David Davis: In 1993, approximately 1.5 tonnes were seized or found. In 1994, over 2 tonnes were seized or found.

Western Sahara

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what protests have been made to the Moroccan Government over the arrests of Polisario supporters on 11 and 12 May during a peaceful demonstration; and if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the Western Sahara. [26270]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The UN is investigating the incident and will report to the Security Council. We continue to support the efforts of the UN Secretary-General to bring about an early resolution of the dispute concerning the Western Sahara in accordance with the UN's settlement plan.

Armenia

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date he now expects a British embassy to be established in Armenia; and if he will make a statement. [25983]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We expect our ambassador, Mr. David Miller OBE, to arrive at post in Yerevan by the end of July.

Iran

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's policy on the export of arms to Iran; and what changes there have been to it there have been in the last two years. [26135]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There have been no changes to our policy on arms exports to Iran since it was announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on 1 March 1993. We continue to apply the following criteria in considering applications for the export of licensable goods to Iran:

(i) With two exceptions we should not approve licences for any goods or technology on the military or atomic energy lists—schedule 1, part 3, groups 1 and 2—of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1992, as amended. The exceptions are:

  (a) goods essential for the safety of civil aircraft and air traffic control systems;

  (b) radioactive material in the form of sources for medical equipment and deuterium labelled compounds for medical use.

(ii) We should not approve licences for any equipment, including the exceptions to the complete ban mentioned above, where there was knowledge or reason to suspect that it would go to a military end-user or be used for military purposes.

Existing export licences, approved under the old guidelines, will remain valid. We shall support efforts among supplier countries, in particular the G7 and our European partners, to promote a harmonised approach to effective controls on the export of dual-use goods to countries of particular concern.

TRANSPORT

Smoked Glass Windows (Cars)

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce legislation to prohibit motorcars having smoked glass in their side and rear windows. [25408]

Mr. Norris: No. Regulation 32 of Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986 already prohibits, with certain limited exceptions, the fitment of excessively dark or smoked glass in the windows of motorcars first used on or after 1 June 1978.

British Rail Employees (Statutory Rights)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if former employees of British Rail working for a new railway contractor following the privatisation of British Rail will be entitled to statutory redundancy pay and statutory sick pay based upon their cumulative employment under both employers. [25806]

Mr. Watts: Provided a move from one employer to another is part of a transfer of an undertaking where employees are transferred with their existing contracts of service to the new undertaking—that is, a transfer to which the provisions of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 apply—then continuity of employment is maintained. This means that employment with both employers counts towards any statutory or contractual entitlements which have a minimum qualifying period or are based on length of service.

Road Accident Victims (Compensation)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will review the Road Traffic Acts with a view to providing scope for compensation for the victims of driving offences. [26190]

Mr. Norris: There are no plans for such a review.

Motor Cycle Tests

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many motor cycle testing stations there are in (a) Bradford and (b) Leeds; what is the current waiting list at each of these stations; how many test inspectors are employed at each station; how many hours and on what days each station holds tests; what contingency arrangements are to be introduced if motor cyclists are unable to be tested before the expiry of a provisional licence; and if he will make a statement; [26138]

(2) what action he is taking to facilitate motor cyclists living in (a) Bradford and Leeds and (b) other parts of West Yorkshire to take any tests they are required to take without undue delay. [26137]

Mr. Norris: These are operational matters for the Driving Standards Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from B. I. Herdan to Mr. Max Madden, dated 25 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your questions about motorcycle tests in Bradford and Leeds.

The Agency offers motorcycle tests at the centres at Wibsey, Bradford and Horsforth, Leeds. At these centres local demand is such that current waiting times are 2 and 9 weeks respectively. These include test slots provisionally reserved by Approved Training Bodies where payment is required not later than 10 clear working days before the day of the test. Earlier dates may therefore become available at Horsforth if provisionally reserved slots are not taken up, or there are cancellations, and the centre is within reasonable travelling distance of Wibsey where current demand is not so great. There is one motorcycle examiner at each centre who conducts tests three days a week. At Wibsey this is on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and at Horsforth on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. These involve full daily programmes of 8 tests a day.

Where there is a specific need for an earlier test date, for example the expiry of a provisional licence, our Regional Office in Newcastle which currently deals with the books for West Yorkshire always endeavours to make additional programmes available to meet this need. This will obviously depend on the examiner resources available at the time and the method of notice given by the candidate.

Lorry Registration

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what evidence he has that United Kingdom lorry firms are registering their vehicles elsewhere in the European Union; and what loss of revenue is involved. [26027]

Mr. Norris: I know of no such evidence.

A13

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the latest date when the construction of the new A13 road between the Heathway-Thames avenue and Mardyke-Wennington sections must commence before compensation or penalty payments may be invoked by the promoters of the channel tunnel rail link route; and if he will make a statement. [26026]

Mr. Watts: The competition to select the private section promoter is still under way, and the details of the contract between the promoter and the Secretary of State are not yet finalised. However, the environmental statement for the hybrid Bill assumed that these sections of the A13 would be completed before the relevant part of CTRL construction commenced.

Taxis (Smoking Ban)

Mr. Bendall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the Government's policy on allowing licensed taxi drivers to ban smoking in their cabs; and what plans the Government have to allow them to do so. [26184]

Mr. Norris: Taxi drivers may request passengers not to smoke in their cabs.

The courts, in interpreting the compellability law, have ruled that the fact that an intending passenger was smoking was not a "reasonable excuse" for the driver to refuse to carry him or her.

The Government have already announced in "The Health of the Nation" White Paper that they propose to change the law to allow a taxi driver to designate his or her cab as a "no smoking" one and then to refuse passengers that are smoking. This proposal awaits a suitable legislative opportunity.

Driving Tests

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his letter M/PSO/5928/95 of 1 May, when he expects to complete his assessment of hazard perception tests and to reach decisions about heavy elements in driving tests as required by the second EC directive on driver licensing. [25761]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 24 May 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer that I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Eltham (Mr. Bottomley) on 23 May, Official Report, columns 567–68.

Double Glazing Grails

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what grants his Department provides for double glazing of residential properties adjacent to motorways where noise levels are unreasonably high. [25033]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 23 May 1995]: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 25 May 1995:

The Minister for Railways and Roads, John Watts, has asked me to reply to your recent question about the provision of double glazing adjacent to motorways where noise levels are unreasonably high.

The Highways Agency does not provide specific grants for double glazing of residential properties.

Owners of properties eligible under the Noise Insulation Regulations 1975 are offered a provision of insulation or grant in lieu in accordance with the relevant specifications set out in Schedule 1 of the Regulations. The regulations specify secondary glazing of existing windows or exceptionally a new replacement double window.

Bus Services (Complaints)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by traffic area office for each of the last five years the number of complaints received from members of the public regarding the operation of local bus services. [25912]

Mr. Norris: The available information is given in the attached table.

Number of complaints received by Traffic Area Offices from the general public since 1990

Traffic Area	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95

Road Scheme Acquisitions

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport under what Acts and statutory instruments road scheme acquisitions have or will have been made of (a) housing north and south of the A40 Western avenue in the London borough of Hammersmith and (b) housing on the north side of the A13 Newham way west of its intersection with the A112 Prince Regent land; and in respect of each scheme (i) what are the costs of housing acquisitions and compensations, (ii) what is the total cost of the scheme, (iii) what statutory procedures are outstanding and (iv) what are the firm dates of commencement and completion. [24481]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Nigel Spearing, dated 25 May 1995:

I have been asked to write to you with the information you requested in your question in the house about the trunk road improvement schemes at A40 Western Circus and A13/A112 Prince Regent Land junctions.

The Secretary of State for Transport acquires properties for road construction under the Highways Act 1980, the Acquisition of Land Act 1981 and the Compulsory Purchase Act 1965 and, in planning blight cases, under the Town and Country Planning act 1990. He pays compensation for the properties acquired under the Land Compensation Acts 1961 and 1973.

The Highways Agency, on behalf of the Secretary of State, requires (a) houses north and south of the A40 for the trunk road improvement scheme at Western Circus in the Borough of Hammersmith and (b) houses north of A13 Newham Way to the west of A112 Prince Regent Land for the improvement of the A13/A112 junction.

(1) The total cost of the housing and compensation for these properties is estimated for (a) at £3.1 million and for (b) £3.4 million.

(ii) The total estimated costs of the schemes are (a) £48 million and (b) £40 million; including costs already incurred of £10 million and £3 million respectively.

(iii) The statutory procedures for (a) are complete, and for (b) are awaiting a decision by the Secretaries of State whether the scheme should proceed, following the public inquiry held last year. The outstanding statutory procedures for (b) are:

the A13 Trunk Road (A112 Prince Regent Lane Junction Improvement, The Trunk Road and Slip Roads) Order 19;

the A13 Trunk Road (A112 Prince Regent Lane Junction Improvement, Side Roads) Order 19;

the A13 Trunk Road (A112 Prince Regent Lane Junction Improvement) Compulsory Purchase Order (No.) 19; and the proposal to issue a certificate of exchange land; entitled, The Open Space Land at Canning Town Recreation Ground, former Beckton Lido Site and Prince Regent Lane Playing Field.

(iv) The main construction of the A40 Western Circus scheme is planned to start in the first quarter of 1996; a firmer date for start of works will not be available until tenders for the project have been assessed. The improvement scheme for the A13/A112 junction will proceed to construction after the statutory procedures are completed, provided resources are available.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Export Licences

Mr. Bennett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) under which military list specifications, as specified in group 1 of part III of schedule 1 of Statutory Instrument 1992 No. 3092 goods for export to Argentina were refused five export licences in 1993; [25751]

(2) goods for export to China were refused three export licences in 1993. [25752]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The goods in question were classified under ML5, ML9 and ML10 in respect of Argentina and ML5, ML11 and ML15 in respect of China.

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 30 March, Official Report, column 777 if the exporters of goods with potential defence applications were required in every case to obtain end user certificates for the export of goods licensed under the military list. [25697]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Where military list goods were to be exported to an overseas Government Department, no end-user certificate was required by the DTI export licensing unit, though a copy of the contract or purchase order was requested.

For military list exports to companies and private consignees, exporters were required to submit sufficient information to enable the ELU to assess the export licence application. The guidance note on filling out an export licence application said that exporters should supply an end-user certificate, or an end-use statement or an international import certificate, but this was not insisted upon in all cases.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the companies to which export licences were granted for the export of electronic batons in 1991. [25614]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 22 May 1995]: No licences were granted for these goods in 1991.

Iraq (Export Credit Guarantees)

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 30 March, Official Report, column 777, if BMARC received support from the Export Credits Guarantee Department for contracts with Iraq between 1985 and 1990. [25684]

Mr. Ian Taylor: No.

Instruments of Torture

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will further regulate the sale of equipment which can be used, and has been designated, for use against persons in repressive conditions. [25693]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 22 May 1995]: It is not feasible to control the export of the many innocuous goods that can be misused for torture. Exports of weapons, security and para-military police goods are controlled under the terms of the Export of Goods (Control) Order. Licences are granted only after careful consideration of the political and military implications of the proposed sale, with particular attention paid to the human rights record of the proposed recipient country. The Department would not knowingly give any support to promote sales overseas of torture equipment. I see no need for further regulation.

The regulation of firearms sales within Great Britain is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Regional Airports

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent economic assessment he has made of the economic benefits of regional airports to regional economies. [24977]

Mr. Eggar: The Department of Trade and Industry has not made any such recent economic assessment. The Department is aware of a recent study by the Civil Aviation Authority entitled "The Economic Impact of New Air Services", which examines the impact of new long haul services from Manchester and Birmingham airports. This contains useful references to other similar studies.

Consultants

Ms Hodge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the level of expenditure on consultancy by (a) his Department and (b) agencies for which his Department is responsible for (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25542]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 10 February 1995, Official Report, column 429, which shows the fees paid by the Department for general consultancies for 1993–94. Corresponding provisional outturn figures for 1994–95, budget figures for 1995–96 and a breakdown of the 1993–94 figure between the Department and its agencies are detailed in the following table.

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Department	3,345	4,445	[1]—
Executive Agencies	1,429	1,734	1,584
Total	4,774	6,179	1,584

Note:
[1] The Department's allocation for 1995–96 will be set shortly in the light of the outcome of MINIS 95.

Retirements and Redundancies

Ms Hodge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many staff of (a) the Department of Trade and Industry and (b) agencies for which the DTI is responsible (i) took early retirement, (ii) took voluntary redundancy, (iii) took compulsory redundancy and (iv) were retired on medical grounds in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25416]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The figures requested are shown in the following table. The 1995–96 projections represent current estimates which may be modified during the course of the year. In preparing these tables, redundancies have been taken as covering those cases which involve early severance on redundancy.

Ms Hodge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the annual cost to his Department of staff leaving under redundancy/early retirement schemes to incorporate (i) added years lump sum payments, (ii) redundancy payments, (iii) pension payments, including enhancements and, (iv) any other special arrangements for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95, and projected for (c) 1995–96 and (d) 1996–97. [25635]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Most of the costs to the Department of early retirement and redundancies are borne from the Department's running costs provision. A detailed breakdown of the various costs could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The total costs borne by the Department in 1993–94 and 1994–95 were £13,498,000 and £13,515,000 respectively. For 1995–96, the amount is estimated at £3,634,000. Projections for 1996–97 will be determined during the coming public expenditure survey.

Contracting Out

Ms Hodge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what work has been contracted out (a) by his Department and (b) by agencies for which his Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what is projected for 1995–96. [25541]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The following areas of work have been contracted out under the "Competing for Quality" programme. For those areas where work is shown as under way in 1995–96, contracting out will be dependent on the Department or agency receiving bids which offer value for money compared with keeping the activity in-house.

(a) Areas of work contracted out by the Department in:

(i) 1993–94

Central Training
Offshore Geology
Stationery Supply
Translation

(ii) 1994–95

IT Services
Accounts Services Agency

Work is under way to contract out the following in 1995–96:

Services Management Division Building Management
National Physical Laboratory

In addition, the following areas of work were contracted out in part under partnership arrangements between the private sector and in-house staff in 1994–95:

Mail and Messengers
Reprographics
Central File Store
Internal Audit
Oil and Gas IT Services

(b) Areas of work contracted out by agencies for which the Department is responsible in:

(i) 1993–94

Patent Office
Various Support Services

(ii) 1994–95

Radiocommunications Agency
Ships Radio Licensing

Work is under way to contract out the following in 1995–96:

Companies House
London Office and satellites
Edinburgh Office
Cardiff Office; range of activities
Insolvency Service
Official Receivers' Administrative Functions
Patent Office
Various support services
Radiocommunications Agency
Various Support Services

Regional Challenge

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will give details of the cost of the launch of regional challenge and the cost of administering it; and if he will make a statement. [25701]

Mr. Eggar: The cost to Government Departments of the launch of regional challenge has been less than £10,000. The challenge will be administered within the normal running cost budgets of the various Departments and Government offices responsible for structural funds administration.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if moneys from European Union sources will be used to fund regional challenge. [25702]

Mr. Eggar: Yes. Regional challenge is a competition for grants from the European regional development and social funds.

Petrol

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of the total sales of petrol in the United Kingdom are now accounted for by the sale of unleaded and super unleaded fuel. [26013]

Mr. Page: In the first quarter of 1995, premium unleaded petrol and super unleaded petrol accounted for 56.3 per cent. and 4.7 per cent. respectively of total sales of petrol in the United Kingdom. Thus, 61 per cent. of total petrol sales were unleaded.

Fire Safety

Mr. Pike: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the review team's report regarding fire safety legislation and enforcement matters arising from the deregulation proposals has now been considered; and when he expects to be able to make a statement on the outcome. [26245]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith) on 24 May 1995, Official Report, column 643.

Import and Export Controls

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade to what extent the emergency powers contained in the Import, Export and Customs Powers (Defence) Act 1939 have been made permanent by subsequent amending legislation. [25511]

Mr. Heseltine: The judgment handed down by the Court of Appeal on 22 May confirmed on all counts the continuing validity of the powers to control imports and exports in the Import, Export and Customs Powers (Defence) Act 1939, and in the orders made under that Act. The Import and Export Control Act 1990 made the powers in the Act permanent.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if the special status of nuclear power stations that guarantees that they run continuously to provide base load electricity will be reviewed as a result of privatisation; [25284]

(2) by what authority nuclear power stations are empowered to provide their maximum output whenever available to base load electricity supply. [27277]

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 22 May 1995]: For safety reasons, Nuclear Electric's plants are permitted by the National Grid Company to offer a level of flexible operation less than that of other generating plant. In Scotland, arrangements dealing with SNL's access to the Scottish distribution system are covered by the Nuclear Energy Agreement between SNL and Scottish Power and Hydro-Electric.

I understand that Nuclear Electric and the National Grid Company are in discussion about ways in which the flexibility of their plant can be increased without in any way compromising rigorous standards of safety.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what restrictions will be imposed on the new privatised nuclear company from diversifying into building gas-fired power stations. [25291]

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Decisions on new generating plant will be a commercial matter for the privatised companies, subject to meeting the appropriate regulatory requirements.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 25 May. [24806]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 25 May. [24807]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with Ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library the correspondence between Nelson Mandela and himself on the issue of Lockerbie. [25952]

The Prime Minister: No. It is not my normal practice to do so.

Wild Mammals (Protection) Bill

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Prime Minister, what amount of correspondence he has received requesting that extra parliamentary time be given to the Wild Mammals (Protection) Bill. [26133]

The Prime Minister: I have received a substantial number of representations on the Wild Mammals (Protection) Bill.

Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Prime Minister by what date he expects to decide whether Her Majesty's Government's submission to the reflections group of the inter-governmental conference should be placed before Parliament either as a White or Green Paper. [25390]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 22 May 1995]: I have made it clear that Parliament will have a full opportunity to discuss the issues relating to the intergovernmental conference before that conference gets under way. Precisely when the conference will start is not yet clear. Meanwhile the Government are examining in detail what the British position should be. The purpose of the study group is explanatory. My hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs will represent the Foreign Secretary. We do not intend to make a single written submission, although we naturally contributed to the Council submission which has been published as Command Paper 2866. Parliament will be kept informed of the study group's progress.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Large Narcissus Fly

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what research her Department has carried out into methods of controlling the large narcissus fly; [24740]

(2) what research her Department has carried out into the effect of the large narcissus fly on daffodil crops; [24741]

(3) how much money has been spent on research into methods of controlling the large narcissus fly in each year for the last five years; [24742]

(4) what plans her Department has to fund research into alternative methods of controlling the large narcissus fly. [24743]

Mr. Jack: The large narcissus fly is widely recognised as representing a serious problem for commercial bulb production. Consequently, our research has focused on methods of control. This has included studies of the efficacy of insecticides; the susceptibility of narcissus varieties to the fly; and the effects of a range of growing practices. The Department's spend on this strategic research, on behalf of the industry, since 1991 was as follows:

1991–92 : £32,000
1992–93 : £34,000
1993–94 : £35,000
1994–95 : £36,000

In April 1995, the Department established a new, four-year project estimated to cost £40,000 in 1995–96, investigating the relationship between the large narcissus fly and the chemicals emitted by narcissus plants. The identification of such chemicals may offer some opportunity for attracting flies to decoy plants and then destroying them, repelling flies from narcissus crops or for breeding varieties resistant to attack by the fly.

New Zealand Flatworm

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the areas in which the New Zealand flatworm has now been observed; and what guidelines he has issued to growers and gardeners in those areas; [25203]

(2) what steps he is taking to deal with the spread of the New Zealand flatworm and its threat to the United Kingdom worm population; [25205]

(3) what discussions he has held with his New Zealand counterpart as to how the New Zealand flatworm is dealt with in its native habitat with particular reference to its predators. [25204]

Mrs. Browning: The Government have sponsored research which shows that the New Zealand flatworm has been found in certain areas of the United Kingdom. These findings have been sporadic and have largely been confined to private gardens, allotments and some garden centres and the flatworm is not considered likely to pose a major threat to the agricultural and horticultural industries in the United Kingdom. A code of practice is planned to supplement information and advice already provided by the Agricultural Departments to industry and the public. This advice emphasises the need to avoid spreading the New Zealand flatworm. Since 1992, it has been an offence in Great Britain under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 to release flatworms, or allow them to escape, into the wild. It is understood from contacts in New Zealand that in its natural environment a number of factors combine to maintain a balance between the flatworm and the native earthworm population.

Tuberculin Testing

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the qualifications he will require to allow lay personnel to carry out tuberculin testing under veterinary direction. [24954]

Mrs. Browning: My Department is consulting with the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons on this matter. If and when an order is made to allow lay personnel to carry out tuberculin testing, the necessary qualifications will be published.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from Compassion in World Farming on the lawfulness of restrictions on (a) the export of calves for rearing in veal crates and (b) the export of all live farm animals; and if he will make a statement on them. [24984]

Mrs. Browning: Compassion in World Farming wrote to my right hon. Friend on 4 April advising him to consider the lawfulness of restrictions of this type. My right hon. Friend wanted, before replying, to have the advice he had sought from lawyers on the legal opinion, commissioned from Gerald Barling QC by the RSPCA, which argued that a ban on the export of calves would be legal. My right hon. Friend's conclusions in the light of that legal advice were set out in his reply of 22 May to the hon. Member for Nuneaton, (Mr. Olner), column 456, and conveyed to CIWF in a letter which he sent on the same date. The letter also explained that he saw no reason to change his view that a ban on the export of all live farm animals would be incompatible with European law, as well as with the Government's policy.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for how long the MV Northern Cruiser carrying livestock trucks from Dover to Boulogne on Friday 12 May was delayed outside Boulogne; what was the cause of delay, when he was informed of the delay by the boat's operators; whether, as a result of the delay, any of the animals went without being offered food and water for more than 15 hours; if any prosecutions are to be brought; and if he will make a statement. [25581]

Mrs. Browning: We have not at present received any information which suggests that an offence occurred under the Welfare of Animals during Transport Order 1994, in relation to the voyage of the Northern Cruiser on 12 May 1995.

Retirements and Redundancies

Ms Hodge: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the annual cost to his Department of staff leaving under redundancy/early retirement schemes to incorporate (a) added years lump sum payments, (b) redundancy payments, (c) pension payments, including enhancements and (d) any other special arrangements for (i) 1993–94 (ii) 1994–95, (iii) projected for 1995–96 and (iv) projected for 1996–97. [25665]

Mr. Waldegrave: The cost to the Department, including its agencies, of early retirements and redundancies are borne from the Department's running costs provision.

A detailed breakdown of the various costs could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The total costs borne on the Department's running costs in 1993–94 and 1994–95 were £7 million and £9 million respectively. For 1995–96, the total amount is estimated at £7 million. Projections for 1996–97 will be determined during the coming public expenditure survey.

Vessel Engine Capacity

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of whether the engine capacity registered by (a) British, (b) Spanish and (c) Dutch vessels under the multi-annual guidance targets is accurate; what steps are taken to check this in each country; and if he has asked the Commissioner to verify registered capacities under the programme. [25385]

Mr. Jack: It is the European Commission's responsibility to ensure that member states comply with Community obligations, and for member states authorities to ensure proper administration in relation to their own vessels. In the United Kingdom, it is the responsibility of the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to ensure that the details entered on a vessel's certificate of registry accurately reflect that vessel's characteristics. The characteristics of the engine of each vessel on the UK register are obtained by a surveyor approved by the Marine Safety Agency before registration of the vessel takes place.

Where specific instances of discrepancies arise or are brought to my attention, they are taken up with the Commission or, in the case of a UK-registered vessel, with the Marine Safety Agency.

Eastern European Fishing Fleets

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on the size of the fishing fleets of Bulgaria, Poland, Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia; and what historic fishing rights each of these nations can claim in British or European waters before the Fishing Limits Act 1976. [25382]

Mr. Jack: The latest year for which information on the size of nations' fishing fleets is available is 1992, showing the following:

Country	Number of vessels	Size
Bulgaria	38	[1]86,600 GRT
Poland	521	249,079 GRT
Latvia	141	343,236 GRT
Lithuania	162	236,268 GRT
Estonia	249	180,921 GRT

Source: FAO fleet statistics.
[1] GRT = gross registered tonnage.

Before the Fishery Limits Act 1976, British waters extended only to 12 miles. None of the above countries fished within our 12 mile limits, nor have they claimed historic fishing rights within the British fishing limits established in 1976. The EU currently has reciprocal fishing agreements with Poland and the three Baltic states, but these are confined to the Baltic sea. We have no record of Bulgarian vessels having fished in waters around the United Kingdom.

Coarse Fish Close Season

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research into the likely effects of the ending of the coarse fish close season his Department has considered. [25595]

Mr. Jack: We have not commissioned any special research into the likely effects of ending the coarse fish close season. However, in coming to a conclusion on a recent proposal from the National Rivers Authority to dispense with the coarse fish close season on lakes, ponds and reservoirs, we took account of opinions expressed by a wide range of expert bodies. We also noted that in those parts of England and Wales in which the close season had already been dispensed with, there was no evidence that this had an adverse effect on either fisheries or fish.

Bovine Immunodeficiency

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what survey he has made of research into BIV being undertaken in other countries. [25857]

Mrs. Browning: In September 1994, senior veterinarians from the Veterinary Investigation Service, and the virology department of the Central Veterinary Laboratory carried out a study tour of North America, where research into bovine immunodeficiency-like virus has been undertaken for a number of years. Discussions were held with the veterinary regulatory authorities in Washington and Ottawa and with veterinarians and research workers at the National Animal Disease Centre, Ames, Iowa; the National Cancer Institute, Frederick, Maryland; the Louisiana State university; the Animal Disease Research Institute, Ottawa; Ontario Veterinary college, Guelph; and the veterinary laboratory services, Ministry of Agriculture and Food, Guelph, Ontario.

The veterinary regulatory authorities in the USA and Canada confirmed that they had no concerns whatsoever over food safety with respect to BIV and were unaware of any concern by the public health authorities with regard to BIV. They also confirmed that there was no scientific evidence that the lentivirus in question caused immunodeficiency in cattle.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of whether it has been proved that the BIV organism is destroyed by normal dairy pasteurization. [25855]

Mrs. Browning: Judging from the similarities with other lentiviruses, we would expect that bovine immunodeficiency-like virus would get into milk but that pasteurisation would kill it. We are carrying out experimental work at the Department's Central Veterinary Laboratory to investigate this hypothesis.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what research is being conducted into BIV and cross infection to humans. [25852]

Mrs. Browning: None. Bovine immunodeficiency-like virus infection of cattle has been known for a long time. There is no evidence that it affects humans, whether through contact with animals, through drinking milk or eating meat or indeed when injected into the body, as happened, accidentally, to two US researchers who suffered no ill effects. Experimental efforts in the USA to grow the virus in human cells have failed. It is characteristic of these types of viruses to be highly species specific.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what number and percentage of United Kingdom herds are infected by BIV. [25856]

Mrs. Browning: A limited laboratory investigation was carried out by the Central Veterinary Laboratory in 1990. Several hundred cattle sera, from a considerable number of cattle herds spread throughout Great Britain, were tested as part of a programme to develop a diagnostic test for bovine immunodeficiency-like virus. Approximately 10 per cent. of the samples tested were serologically positive for BIV using the tests being developed at that time. This level of infection is consistent with what has been found in other countries but the investigation was not structured nor were the results validated and for that reason it is not possible to estimate with any precision what is the actual level of incidence of BIV infection in the United Kingdom.

A full-scale survey would currently be inappropriate, particularly in the absence of a specific and sensitive test suitable for widespread application.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many hectares of land (a) are eligible for entry into each environmentally sensitive area in England and (b) have been entered into each tier of each environmentally sensitive areas in England. [25793]

Mr. Waldegrave: The information for environmentally sensitive areas in England is as follows:

	Eligible area in hectares	Area currently under agreement in hectares

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farms (a) are eligible to have land entered into each environmentally sensitive area in England and (b) have had land entered into each environmentally sensitive area in England.

Mr. Waldegrave: Records are not kept of the number of farms in each designated environmentally sensitive area in England which are eligible to enter the scheme.

The number of agreements in each ESA in England is as follows:

	Number
Stage I ESAs (launched in 1987)
Broads	740
Pennine Dales	716
Somerset Levels and Moors	888
South Downs	213

French Pig Sector (Illegal Aid)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in relation to his representations to the EU for the recovery of illegal aid to the French pig sector. [25742]

Mr. Jack: After sustained pressure from the United Kingdom, the European Commission finally initiated article 93(2) procedure against two schemes in the pigmeat sector in April 1994. The two schemes were a FF30 million scheme for relieving pig producers of the high cost of commercial loans already taken out and a reduced rate loan arrangement through Stabiporc using Government funds, and Government guarantees for loans given by commercial banks and other organisations.

The Commission's decisions announcing that it had found elements of both schemes to be illegal and requiring the repayment of the illegal aid were published on 8 and 10 November and 23 December 1994. The French Government are required to advise the Commission of steps they have taken to recovers the illegal aid.

I understand that the Commission is in dialogue with the French Government. We shall persist with our pressure on the Commission to ensure that the French Government recover the aid which was illegally paid.

Sheep Slaughter (France)

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reports he has received on the recent slaughter in Paris of sheep exported from Britain; what assessment he has made of compliance with the EU directive on the slaughter of animals; what representations he has made to the French Government in the light of the article; and if he will make a statement. [25800]

Mrs. Browning: The allegations in a daily newspaper about the slaughter of sheep in Paris have been discussed with officials of the French Ministry of Agriculture. I am advised that such slaughtering elsewhere than in a slaughterhouse is illegal under French law, although the European directive on the protection of animals at slaughter permits it, subject to certain conditions. I understand that the French Government are discussing this matter with the relevant organisations and therefore, neither my right hon. Friend nor I believe that it is necessary to make representations to them on this matter.

Farm and Conservation Grant Scheme

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what expenditure has been saved as a result of the ending of the farm and conservation grant scheme; and if that saving has been redirected to other areas of MAFF expenditure. [25744]

Mr. Jack: No decision has yet been made to discontinue the farm and conservation grant scheme. An official working group reviewing the development of environmental land management schemes in England has proposed that the F and CGS should not continue as a separate scheme in England after February 1996, but that capital grants for conservation purposes should then be integrated into the countryside stewardship scheme. The working group's proposals were published for public consultation on 18 May. Current expenditure on conservation grants under the F and CGS in England amounts to £4 million in a full year.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those companies in which the holder of his office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past five years. [25703]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 22 May 1995]: None.

Water Level Management Plans

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what steps his Department took to consult representatives angling organisations before publishing the procedural guide for operating authorities entitled water level management plans; [23103]

(2) for what reasons no angling organisations are included in the list of useful contacts and addresses in annex II of his Department's guide water level management plans. [23104]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 11 May 1995]: The main purpose of the procedural guide to which my right hon. Friend refers is to help flood defence authorities to draw up water level management plans in areas of conservation importance so as to balance the needs of flood defence, economic activity, and conservation. Such plans are prepared at local level and the guide emphasises the importance of consultations with all those affected, including recreational and sporting interests, during the preparation of a water level management plan for a particular area.

Although representative angling organisations were not consulted prior to publication of the Ministry's procedural guide, such organisations should be consulted by local flood defence authorities when individual plans are in preparation. Annex II of the guide is not intended as an exhaustive list of all those who should be consulted, but to meet my right hon. Friend's point representative angling organisations and other recreational and sporting interests will be added when the guide is next reprinted.

EDUCATION

Area Cost Adjustment

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list for each education authority (a) not in receipt and (b) in receipt of area cost adjustment for the last year that figures are available. [25953]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requesed is set out in the attached lists.

Complaints

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what policy and procedures exists for dealing with complaints against her Department by members of the public; when the policy was last updated; what time limit and target for dealing with such complaints her Department has; and what follow-up procedure exists where complainants are not satisfied with her Department's response to a complaint. [26224]

Mr. Boswell: Any complaint about the conduct of a member of the Department would be dealt with under the Department's agreed disciplinary procedures. These are set out in its terms and conditions handbook, which was revised in 1994 and made available to all staff. If a complainant remains dissatisfied with the handling of a complaint, it is open to them to take further action through the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration.

Information Technology Teachers

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many qualified information technology teachers there were in secondary schools in each year since 1979; and what proportion of the total number of teachers in this subject they represent. [25772]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is available only for 1984, 1988 and 1992 from the secondary school staffing surveys. In those years, the number of full-time teachers who were teaching information technology, including computer studies, in maintained secondary schools in England and who had a post A-level qualification in information technology was as follows:

Year	Number of IT teachers (000)	Number with an IT qualification (000)	Percentage with qualification
1984	9.4	2.3	24
1988	12.1	3.1	26
1992	10.4	2.8	27

The total number of full-time teachers with an information technology qualification, including those not teaching IT, in each year was:

Year	All teachers with an IT qualification (000)
1984	4.1
1988	6.4
1992	7.1

It should be noted that the definition of information technology has changed slightly over the years, so the figures quoted may not be strictly comparable.

SOCIAL SECURITY

VAT on Fuel (Compensation)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, what is the total cost of the compensation for VAT on fuel given annually to women aged between 60 and 65 years. [24948]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list, by town or city and region, all his Department's research trials, conducted since 1990, aimed or associated with trials testing procedures to prevent the fraudulent encashment of instruments of payment, giving (a) the cost of each trial, (b) the target population, (c) the period of trial, (d) other joint/collaborative agencies and (e) schemes involving incentive payments to participants. [24985]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This information is laid out by geographical area since January 1994, the first date for which information is available. No specific target population was sought, since this was not an important factor in any of the trials.

Retirements and Redundancies

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many staff of (a) the Department of Social Security and (b) agencies for which the DSS is responsible (i) took early retirement, (ii) took voluntary redundancy, (iii) took compulsory redundancy and (iv) were retired on medical grounds in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25420]

Mr. Hague: The information is not readily available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The available information is in the table.

	Retirement on medical grounds		Compulsory redundancy		Other early retirement/voluntary redundancy
	1993–94	1994–95	1993–94	1994–95	1993–94	1994–95

Information Technology Services Agency	15	27	0	0	50	246
Resettlement Agency	2	0	64	41	15	15
War Pensions Agency	—	14	0	0	—	2

Notes:
No projections are available for 1995–96.
[1] The number of retirements and redundancies in the executive agencies are included in the departmental figures.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the annual cost to the Department of staff leaving under redundancy/early retirement schemes to incorporate (i) added years lump sum payments, (ii) redundancy payments, (iii) pension payments including enhancements and (iv) any other special arrangements (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95, and projected for (c) 1995–96 and (d) 1996–97. [25638]

Mr. Hague: The costs to the Department of early retirement and redundancies are borne from the Department's running costs provision.

A detailed break-down of the various costs could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The total costs borne on the Department's running costs in 1993–94 and 1994–95 were £23.975 million and £17.903 million—provisional—respectively. For 1995–96, the amount is estimated at £22.607 million. Projections for 1996–97 will be determined during the coming public expenditure survey.

Motability

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures are in place to ensure the best use of public money by Motability and its associate companies and charities and that those bodies are accountable to his Department; and if he will make a statement. [25947]

Mr. Hague: Motability is an independent charity which receives grant in aid from the Department for all its administration costs and part of its grant-making provision. A comprehensive financial agreement exists between the Department and Motability which has been drawn up in accordance with Government accounting procedures. This gives Motability the responsibility for ensuring it obtains good value for money in its dealings with suppliers to the scheme.

Contracting Out

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what work has been contracted out (a) by his Department and (b) by agencies for which his Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) the projected figures for 1995–96. [25657]

Mr. Roger Evans: The value of work previously carried out by civil servants and contracted out by the Department and each of its agencies in 1993–94 and 1994–95 is shown in the tables. In 1995–96, we will be examining running costs of some £166 million with a view to contracting out. We will examine a further £27 million with a view to inviting in-house bids, together with bids from the private sector, in market tests. We cannot predict in advance of the market tests the value of work that will be contracted out.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for each piece of work subject to a bidding process under the auspices of (a) his Department and (b) agencies for which his Department is responsible (i) where work was contracted out, who were the successful bidders and (ii) which contracts were won by in-house bidders in (1) 1993–94, (2) 1994–95 and (3) 1995–96. [25651]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Department and its agencies procure a wide range of goods and services by competitive tender. I have provided information showing the outcomes of competitive tenders of work carried out by civil servants and a copy has been placed in the Library.

Consultants

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the level of expenditure on consultancy by (a) his Department and (b) agencies for which his Department is responsible for (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25644]

Mr. Hague: The available information is in the table. Information on projected levels of expenditure for 1995–96 is not available.

Family Credit

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps his Department are taking to inform family credit claimants of the extra money they are entitled from July for working full time. [25808]

Mr. Roger Evans: We plan to undertake extensive publicity to inform people about the new premium for working 30 hours or more a week on family credit and the associated extra help in housing benefit, council tax benefit and disability working allowance. People already receiving family credit or disability working allowance will receive a new claim pack shortly before their renewal claim is due to be made. The claim pack will advise them of the new premium.

We plan also to provide information to advisors of people likely to be affected to inform them of the new premium.

Notes:

1. Because approval for expenditure on the campaign cannot be given until regulations have been laid, we cannot be explicit at this stage on the form the advertising will take.

2. The new claim pack is planned to be available a few days in advance of the change.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of family credit claims from employees currently take five working days to be dealt with from the time of the claim being received by his Department; and if he will give the figures for each working day up 30 working days. [25807]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of family credit is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 25 May 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the clearance times of claims made by employees to Family Credit.

The table below details the information that you have requested. Such figures are produced on a monthly basis and I have therefore provided information for the month ending 30 April 1995 which is the latest full month available. HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum Seekers

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, columns 185-88, if he will publish a breakdown of the location of asylum seekers as at 10 May listed as 'other' in table 3 of the answer. [25810]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: This information is not readily available as comprehensive statistics are not currently compiled on all the places of detention of persons who have sought asylum. For this reason, only the main places were separately identified.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, columns 185-88, when he now expects to phase out the detention of asylum seekers in prisons and police cells. [25811]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The plans to expand and improve the detention accommodation for which the immigration service is responsible will reduce the need to hold immigration detainees in prisons and police cells in the future.

There will, however, always be a need for some immigration detainees to be accommodated in prisons, either because of known violent tendencies or because of a need for closer supervision than can be provided in immigration detention centres. Similarly, there will be a continuing need to use police cells for the initial detention of immigration offenders detected within the United Kingdom.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum-seekers have been removed to Sweden on safe third country grounds since 26 July 1993; and how many of those so removed have been returned to the United Kingdom by the Swedish authorities. [26174]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The available information identifies 29 persons who had been refused asylum in the United Kingdom on safe third country grounds having been removed to Sweden since 26 July 1993. Of these, four have been returned to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for asylum are currently outstanding. [26180]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: As at 31 April 1995, there were 57,610 applications for asylum outstanding in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 15 February, Official Report, column 695, to the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan), if he will identify the evidence which indicates that in the bulk of cases the asylum application is not made immediately after leave to enter or remain has been granted, but shortly before it is due to expire. [25692]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: An analysis of the available information for 1994 suggests that some 60 per cent. of asylum applications made by in-time visitors had not been made within one month of arrival in the United Kingdom, and about 40 per cent. had not been made within three months.

Immigration Officers

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase the establishment of immigration officers at Leeds–Bradford airport; and if he will make a statement. [26139]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 31 March, Official Report, column 860. As part of the routine review of staffing and work load levels, the complement of immigration officers at Leeds–Bradford has recently been increased by one.

Eurostar

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for asylum have been made by individuals arriving at Waterloo railway station on board Eurostar trains since January. [26181]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Between 1 January 1995 and 24 May 1995, a total of 148 applications for asylum were made by passengers arriving at Waterloo international terminal on Eurostar trains.

Detention Costs

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 18 May, Official Report, column 364, what was the total amount of detention costs reclaimed from carrying companies in (a) the most recent financial year for which information is available, (b) 1994 and (c) 1995 to date. [26273]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The total amount of detention costs reclaimed from carrying companies in the financial year 1994–95 is £674,538.51. The total for 1994 is £597,125.21, and the total for this year to 23 May is £289,136.07.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 8 March, Official Report, column 181, if he will make a statement on the parameters applying to filing systems under the draft data protection directive; and if he will make a statement on the implementation of the data protection directive. [26448]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: In implementing the directive in respect of manual data, member states must have regard to the definition of a "personal data filing system" contained in article 2. Subject to this, the directive allows member states some flexibility in determining precisely the types of manual records to which the directive should apply. Once the final form of the directive is known, we shall be consulting widely on how these and other provisions should be implemented in United Kingdom law.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the new offence of procuring unregistered disclosures, under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994; and what discussions he has had with the Data Protection Registrar in relation to this offence. [26449]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: On the information available to me, I believe that the new offence, which was brought into force in February this year, has had a positive effect upon the unacceptable activities at which it was aimed. The Data Protection Registrar has kept Home Office officials closely informed of her plans for enforcing the offence.

Equine Crime Unit

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to enhance the work and performance of the Metropolitan equine intelligence unit; and if he will make a statement. [25596]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 May 1995]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that he plans to make more resources available to the equine crime unit, including personnel and information technology. The unit is now based in New Scotland Yard.

Immigration

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce application forms for use by foreign nationals wishing to apply for leave to remain in the United Kingdom. [26623]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Application forms will enable the Immigration Department to provide a more efficient service to applicants at a lower cost to the public purse. Genuine applicants will receive a speedier decision while those not entitled to further leave to stay will be refused more quickly, strengthening the immigration control. From 5 June, application forms for requests for limited leave to remain will be available from the application forms unit of the Immigration Department. Forms for settlement applications are in preparation. The scheme will not include applications under European Community law or applications for asylum. The operation of the scheme will be reviewed later this year following which we envisage making the use of application forms compulsory.

Departmental Performance

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what performance indicators and performance targets there are for measuring the performance of his Department in (a) answering letters from members of the public and (b) answering telephone calls from members of the public; how performance is monitored; and what are the latest figures for performance measured against the target set. [26234]

Mr. Howard: Individual units and agencies are required to set clear targets for the time taken to deal with correspondence from the public and to monitor performance against those standards. The targets set range from five to 30 working days. Some parts of the Department use computerised tracking systems to monitor performance, and others take samples periodically. No records are however kept centrally of performance against targets.

There is no similar system of targets for answering telephone calls in most parts of the Department, but standards relating to courtesy and helpfulness have been laid down.

Complaints

Ms. Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what policy and procedures exist for dealing with complaints against his Department by members of the public; when his Department last updated its policy; what time limit and target for dealing with such complaints his Department has; and what follow-up procedure exists where complainants are not satisfied with his Department's response to a complaint. [26218]

Mr. Howard: There are various arrangements for dealing with complaints in different parts of the Department. These involve a range of time limits and targets. For example, the UK Passport Agency aims to deal fully with all problems raised within 15 working days, or to acknowledge them within five working days if they are not straightforward, and the Immigration and Nationality Department aims to respond within eight weeks of receiving a complaint.

The IND complaints system is monitored by an independent Complaints Audit Committee, which ensures that procedures are working effectively. The leaflets on complaints procedures produced by the Passport Agency and by IND make it clear that complainants who are not satisfied with the response they receive can raise the matter with the Home Office Minister responsible for the service, or with the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration.

Contracting out

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for each piece of work subject to a bidding process under the auspices of (a) the Home Office and (b) agencies for which the Home Office is responsible where work was contracted out, who were the successful bidders; and which contracts were won by in-house bidders in (i) 1993–94; (ii) 1994–95; and (iii) 1995–96. [25523]

Mr. Howard: The table set out, for 1993–94 and 1994–95, the results of those "Competing for Quality" exercises in the Home Office, including the Prison Service, which proceeded to competition.

Activity	Result
(i) 1993–94—Prison Service
Court Escort and Custody Services—Metropolitan Area	Contract awarded to Securior Services
Doncaster Prison	Contract awarded to Premier Prison Services
Manchester Prison	In-house win
(ii) 1993–94—rest of Home Office
Statistical Data Collection	In-house win
Internal Audit	In-house win
Immigration and Nationality Department Security Guards	In-house win
(iii) 1994–95—Prison Service
Buckley Hall Prison	Contract awarded to Group 4
Court Escort and Custody Services—East Anglia, the North West and North Wales	Contract awarded to Group 4
Facilities Management at the Prison Service College, Newbold Revel	In-house win for administration, works and ground maintenance. Contract awarded to Taylorplan Services for catering and housekeeping
IT Helpdesk	Contract awarded to Serco
(iv) 1994–95—rest of Home Office
Central Typing Services	In-house win
Records Storage and Retrieval	In-house win
Administrative Computer Services	Contract awarded to Sema Group plc
Central Training Services	In-house win
Central Reprographics and Design and Illustration Services	Service Level Agreement awarded to Her Majesty's Stationery Office (HMSO)
Central Office Keeping and Messengerial Services	In-house win
Immigration and Nationality Department Typing Services	In-house win
Immigration and Nationality Department Messengerial and Reprographic Services	In-house win
Immigration and Nationality Department File Management	Contract awarded to Britannia Data Management (BDM)

No contracts or service level agreements have yet been awarded as a result of "Competing for Quality" exercises in 1995–96.

The estimated annual savings figures arising so far from the "Competing for Quality" programme since April 1992 are £19 million for the Prison Service and £11 million for the rest of the Home Office.

A substantial number of competitions also take place outside the "Competing for Quality" programme, mainly to meet requirements for a wide range of specialist services. Information on the results of these competitions is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Dangerous Dogs Act

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what has been the total cost so far of keeping dogs held under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 in kennels; and if he will make a statement; [25671]

(2) what has been the total cost so far of the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991; and if he will make a statement. [25670]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Information on the cost to the police, local authorities, the Crown Prosecution Service, and the courts of operating the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 is not held centrally.

Staff

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what changes there have been in the number of staff employed by (i) the Home Office and (ii) each agency for which the Home Office is responsible in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96; [25496]

(2) what changes there have been in the number of staff in employment by grade in (a) his Department and (b) each agency for which his Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96; [25632]

(3) how many staff of (a) the Home Office and (b) agencies for which the Home Office is responsible, were employed on a casual or short-term basis in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95 and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25514]

Mr. Howard: The numbers of permanent and casual staff employed by my Department and each of its executive agencies in 1993–94, projected outturn for 1994–95, and plans for 1995–96 are published in my Department's annual report, a copy of which is in the Library. No projections broken down by grade are available.

Contracting Out

Ms. Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what work has been contracted out by (i) his Department and (ii) by agencies for which the Department is responsible in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and projected for 1995–96. [25521]

Mr. Howard: Details of work contracted out by my Department and agencies for which my Department is responsible for the specified years, are as follows:

1993–94

i. Court Escorts— Greater London (Area 3).

ii. HMP Doncaster

iii. Education services in some prison establishments following the Further and Higher Education Act.

iv. HMP Reading (staff and inmate catering).

1994–95

i. Campsfield House Immigration Detention Centre

ii HMP Buckley Hall

iii. Banking Services

iv. Court Escorts—East Anglia (Area 4).

v. Court Escorts—Merseyside, Greater Manchester, North Wales (Area 6).

vi. Legal Services—Fire Service College.

vii.Radio link installation and maintenance—Police Department.

viii.Immigration and Nationality Department—File storage and retrieval services.

ix. Building support services—Forensic Science Service

x. Administrative Computer Services.

xi. IT Helpdesk.

Projected work— 1995–96

i. Court Escorts—South West, South Wales (Area 1).

ii. Court Escorts—South, South East (Area 2)

iii. Court Escorts—West Midlands, Mid Wales (Area 5).

iv. HMP Bridgend—Design, Construct, Manage and Finance.

v. HMP Fazakerley—Design, Construct, Manage and Finance

viii. HMP Brixton—Staff Catering

ix. HMP Wealstun—Staff catering and prison shop.

x. HMP Highpoint—Prison Shop

xi. Transport for Police Staff College Bramshill.

Information on low-value work that has been contracted out during the period specified is not recorded centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Talbot Bail Hostel

Mr. John Morris : To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the report on the Port Talbot bail hostel will be published. [25406]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Early in the summer.

Trespassers

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions the police have used their discretionary power to direct trespassers to leave land since 8 November 1994. [25539]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Lewis Probation Centre

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received, and what consultations he has had, concerning the closure of Lewis probation centre, Neville street, Riverside, Cardiff; and what proposals he has to fund alternative specialist provision. [25601]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: My right hon. and learned Friend has received no representations concerning the decision of the South Glamorgan probation committee to relocate its probation centre, with Home Office capital grant support, from Lewis street to Westgate street, Cardiff.

Fire Safety

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to reform the legislation in respect of Crown buildings which require a fire certificate but are not obliged to apply for one; and if he will make a statement; [25861]

(2) when he expects to lay before the House the Fire Precautions (Places of Work) Regulations to be made under section 12 of the Fire Precautions Act 1971. [25862]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Action on both these issues will depend on the outcome of the Government's consideration of the recommendations of the interdepartmental review of fire safety legislation and enforcement on which we hope to make an announcement shortly.

Mentally Ill Offenders

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many places were available in secure units for mentally ill offenders (a) in 1990 and (b) in the latest year for which figures are available. [26081]

Mr. Bowis: I have been asked to reply.

In 1990, there were 572 places in medium secure units. By March 1995, this had increased to 792. The completion of our centrally funded building programme, to which we have allocated more than £47 million between 1991 and 1995, will take the total to over 1,150 by the end of 1996. There are also about 450 places in interim secure psychiatric units, many of which are of medium secure standard, and others which are funded by health authorities in independent sector facilities.

In addition, there are about 1,600 places in the three special hospitals at Ashworth, Broadmoor and Rampton. The number of secure places in local hospitals is not recorded centrally but is estimated at about 2,000.

There were no purpose-built NHS medium secure places in 1979, despite the fact that the Glancy committee had recommended them in its 1974 report.

WALES

Industrial Development

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his oral answer of 24 April, Official Report, columns 504-5, concerning Government grants and locational incentives, if he will ensure that no jobs are lost in the food processing industry in Wales as a direct displacement arising from grant-aided new jobs being created in the same industrial sector in Northern Ireland. [24950]

Mr. Redwood: When applications for assistance are being assessed displacement is always considered and the same criteria apply throughout the United Kingdom. The hon. Gentleman has written to me about a particular case and I will reply to him as soon as possible.

Water Treatment Directive

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list those areas of the Welsh coastline that have been designated (a) less sensitive and (b) high natural dispersion areas under the urban waste water treatment directive, 91/271/EEC; and if he will make a statment; [25991]

(2) what criteria has been used to designate those areas of the Welsh coastline as less and high natural dispersion areas under the urban waste water treatment directive, 91/271/EEC; and if he will make a statement; [25993]

(3) what plans he has to reclassify the Severn and Afan estuaries as coastal waters under the urban waste water treatment directive, 91/271/EEC, and what practical effect reclassification will have on existing or future sewage discharges in these estuaries [25992]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 18 May 1994 by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Environment and Countryside, columns 511-12.

The criteria for identifying high natural dispersion areas—otherwise known as less sensitive areas—are set out in annex II B of the urban waste water treatment directive. A map showing all the areas identified in England and Wales as high natural dispersion areas was placed in the Library of the House. Maps defining, for the purposes of the directive, the outer limits of estuaries, including the Severn and Afan, are available for inspection at the National Rivers Authority's principal offices. The Government have no plans to redefine these limits.

Staff

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what changes there have been in the numbers of staff employed by (a) the Welsh Office and (b) agencies for which the Welsh Office is responsible, listing the changes in the number of staff agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what changes are projected for 1995–96. [25060]

(2) what changes there have been in the number of staff in employment by grade in (a) his office and (b) each agency for which his office is responsible in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96 [25625]

(3) how many staff of (a) the Welsh Office and (b) agencies for which the Welsh Office is responsible, were employed on a casual or short-term basis in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25490]

Mr. Redwood: The numbers of permanent and casual staff employed by my Department and Cadw in 1993–94, projected outturn for 1994–95 and plans for 1995–96 are published in my Department's annual report, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many posts were lost in (a) the Welsh Office and (b) agencies for which the Welsh Office is responsible, listing the total lost posts agency by agency in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and how many posts are proposed to be lost in 1995–96. [25082]

Mr. Redwood: This information is not held centrally.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff of (a) the Welsh Office and (b) agencies for which the Welsh Office is responsible (i) took early retirement, (ii) took voluntary redundancy, (iii) took compulsory redundancy and (iv) were retired on medical grounds in (1) 1993–94 and (2) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25479]

Mr. Redwood: The information is set out as follows:

	Welsh Office			Cadw
	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Early Retirement	4	39	16	—	1	—
Redundancy	9	25	—	—	—	—
Ill Health	19	28	3	3	3	1
	32	92	19	3	4	1

These figures include those who chose redundancy as an alternative to employment at other locations. Projected figures are not available.

TREASURY

Debt Management

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on Government debt management. [26624]

Mr. Nelson: Yes. The current tax rules for gilts and bonds inhibit the development of new types of gilts and bonds and make the introduction of an official gilt strips market impossible. They also offer scope for tax avoidance and hence necessitate lengthy and complex anti-avoidance legislation.

The Inland Revenue has therefore today published a consultative document outlining a much simpler system, under which all returns on gilts and bonds would be taxed as income. This would also provide a consistent framework for the taxation of new types of bonds and gilts.

Reform on these lines is a necessary precondition for the introduction of an official gilt strips market. The Bank of England is today publishing a consultative document on the introduction of a strips market.

The consultative period will end on 30 June and the Government will make an announcement shortly afterwards on how they intend to proceed.

Copies of both consultative documents have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Environmental Satellite Accounts

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has set a date for the establishment within the Central Statistical Office of a new unit to develop a pilot system of environmental satellite accounts linked to national accounts. [25293]

Mr Nelson: The Central Statistical Office is in the course of establishing the unit which will carry out this development.

Real Net Capital Stocks

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide estimates of real net capital stocks by industry at 1990 replacement cost for each year since 1979. [25197]

Mr. Nelson: Estimates of real net capital stock by industry at 1990 replacement cost are unavailable.

Estimates of gross capital stock by industry at 1990 replacement cost are shown in table 14.8 of "United Kingdom National Accounts", a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Sterling-dollar Exchange Rate

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the change in the real exchange rate of the dollar to the pound in terms of relative export unit values for manufactures in the second quarter of 1994 compared to the first quarter of 1980; and what estimate he has made of the effect of this change on the balance of trade between (a) the United States of America and (1) the world and (2) the United Kingdom and (b) the United Kingdom and (1) the United States of America and (2) the world. [25675]

Mr. Nelson: The sterling-dollar real exchange rate in terms of export unit values for manufactures can be calculated from data available on the Central Statistical Office database, which can be accessed through the Library of the House.

The balance of trade between countries depends on a variety of factors, including price and non-price competitiveness, domestic demand, and overseas demand, none of which are easy to isolate.

Retirements and Redundancies

Ms Hodge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the annual cost to the Treasury of staff leaving each Department under redundancy or early retirement schemes, to incorporate (a) added years lump sum payments, (b) redundancy payments, (c) pension payments, including enhancements and (d) other special arrangements for (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95, (iii) projected for 1995–96 and (iv) projected for 1996–97. [25471]

Mr. Nelson: The costs of early retirement and redundancies are borne from individual Departments' running costs provision in respect of their own staff. But in the case of individuals leaving the civil service in the period 1 October 1994 to 31 March 1997, Departments will bear 20 per cent. of such costs, with the remaining 80 per cent. being covered by the Treasury, through the civil superannuation vote, as announced in the civil service White Paper (Cm 2627).

For 1994–95, the cost to the civil superannuation vote of the 80:20 central funding scheme was £26.9 million. Provision for £150 million has been taken in main estimates for 1995–96. Projections for 1996–97 will be determined during the coming public expenditure survey.

Contracting Out

Ms Hodge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for each piece of work subject to a bidding process under the auspices of (a) the Treasury and (b) agencies for which the Treasury is responsible (i) who the successful bidders were when work was contracted out and (ii) which contracts were won by in-house bidders in (1) 1993–94, (2) 1994–95 and (3) 1995–96. [25559]

Mr. Nelson: The table shows the work subjected to competition by the Treasury under the "Competing for Quality" initiative, who won the contracts and in which year.

Successful Bidders

Contract	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Library Services	In house Team	Nil	Nil
Internal Audit	Touche Ross Price Waterhouse	Nil	Nil
Security Guarding	Nil	SAFE	Nil

Mortgage Holders (Compensation)

Mr. Wray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to compensate mortgage holders unable to meet their mortgage costs owing to rises in interest rates. [24222]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 24 May 1995]: The Government have no such plans. Home ownership is very affordable in the UK: less than one third of the total increase in base rates since September 1994 has been passed through by building societies to average variable mortgage rates. Even allowing for that increase, the overall reduction in mortgage interest rates since October 1990 has resulted in a net saving of £130 per month for the average mortgage holder. Fixed-rate mortgages are available for borrowers who want certainty about the level of their mortgage payments over a given period.

Taxation

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will publish estimates for the revenue cost/yield in 1996–97 and for a full year of levying a new top rate of tax of (a) 30 per cent., (b) 35 per cent., (c) 45 per cent., (d) 50 per cent., (e) 55 per cent., (f) 60 per cent., and imposing it on incomes above (i) £27,825, (ii) £30,000, (iii) £40,000, (iv) £50,000, (v) £60,000, (vi) £70,000, (vii) £80,000, (viii) £90,000, (ix) £100,000 and, (x) £110,000 (xi) £120,000, (xii) £130,000, (xiii) £140,000 and, (xiv) £150,000, and assuming that where the new top rate is lower than 40 per cent., the 40 per cent. band is abolished, and where it is higher, the 40 per cent. band remains in place; [23349]

(2) if he will provide estimates for the revenue cost or yield in 1995–96 and for a full year of levying a new top rate of tax of (a) 30 per cent., (b) 35 per cent., (c) 45 per cent., (d) 50 per cent., (e) 55 per cent. and (f) 60 per cent. and imposing it on incomes above (i) £27,825, (ii) £30,000, (iii) £40,000, (iv) £50,000, (v) £60,000, (vi) £70,000, (vii) £80,000, (viii) £90,000, (ix) £100,000, (x) £110,000 (xi) £120,000, (xii) £130,000, (xiii) £140,000 and (xiv) £150,000 assuming that where the new top rate is lower than 40 per cent., the 40 per cent. band is abolished, and where it is higher, the 40 per cent. band remains in place. [23975]

Sir George Young [holding answer 9 May 1995]: To provide all of the details sought could be done only at disproportionate cost. Therefore, the table gives available estimates showing the variation in revenue costs over the specified ranges of tax rates and bands of taxable income. These estimates do not allow for any behavioural changes that might result from the introduction of the new tax rate.

£ billion

Lower limit taxable income £	Full year revenue cost (-)/yield (+) at 1995–96 levels[1] Higher rate 30 per cent.	45 per cent.	60 per cent.
24,300	–4.7	2.4	9.3
50,000	–6.2	1.0	3.9
70,000	–6.5	0.7	2.7
100,000	–6.8	0.5	1.9

[1] The figures include consequential effects on the yield of capital gains tax.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue yield in 1995–96 and in a full year of introducing an alternative minimum tax of (a) 20 per cent., (b) 25 per cent., (c) 30 per cent. and (d) 35 per cent. at the levels of income of (i) £50,000, (ii) £60,000, (iii) £70,000, (iv) £80,000, (v) £90,000, (vi) £100,000, (vii) £110,000, (viii) £120,000, (ix) £130,000, (x) £140,000 and (xi) £150,000. [24365]

Sir George Young [holding answer 16 May 1995]: The table gives available estimates showing the variation in revenue yields over the specified ranges of tax rates and thresholds of gross income up to £100,000. Reliable estimates are not available for higher thresholds of gross income.

Gross income	Full year revenue yield at 1995–96 levels Rate of minimum tax 20 per cent.	25 per cent.	30 per cent.	35 per cent.
Over £50,000	15	60	510	2,030
Over £70,000	10	20	100	700
Over £100,000	5	10	40	250

Note:
The estimates do not take account of any behavioural effects which might result from the introduction of the new arrangements.

VAT (Tour Operators)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will delay the introduction of VAT on tour operators total margin until he has reviewed the equity of the exemption of operators with an in-house travel capacity; and if he will make a statement. [24760]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 17 May 1995]: No. The proposed changes which bring the VAT scheme for tour operators into line with a judgment of the European Court of Justice were announced by Customs and Excise last October, over 14 months before the implementation date of 1 January 1996. While I recognise that some concern has been expressed about possible distortions of competition, there are differing views within the industry and this is one of several complex issues which does not relate solely to the 1 January 1996 changes and which can be addressed only in the longer term and in full consultation with industry representatives. It will therefore be included in a wide-ranging review of the tour operators' margin scheme which Customs proposes to begin next month.

I am satisfied that, in the meantime, the changes must be made, and a Treasury order will be laid before the House.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from (a) the Association of Independent Tour Operators and (b) other small companies in the outbound travel industry to his VAT changes to tour operators margin scheme; and if he will make a statement. [25590]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Association of Independent Tour Operators and others have raised several concerns about the proposed changes to the tour operators' margin scheme. The changes, which were announced by Customs and Excise last October and will be implemented on 1 January 1996, bring the scheme into line with a judgment of the European Court of Justice. Many, but not all, wish to see the implementation of the changes delayed.

Some concern has been expressed about possible distortions of competition. This is one of several complex issues connected with the scheme which do not solely relate to the 1 January 1996 changes and which can be addressed only in the longer term and in full consultation with industry representatives. Customs propose to begin just such a wide-ranging review of the scheme next month.

There will also be further contacts between Customs and Excise and the Association of Independent Tour Operators to discuss the position, but I am satisfied that the changes must be made, and a Treasury order will be laid before the House.

Leeds/Bradford Airport

Mr. Madden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when a flexible anti-smuggling team of Customs and Excise was first established at Leeds/Bradford airport; and how many Customs and Excise staff are based permanently at the airport; how many people arriving at the airport have telephoned requesting to declare goods for excise charges to be levied; and if he will make a statement. [26140]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Flexible anti-smuggling teams were introduced by Customs at Leeds/Bradford airport in early 1992. There are no Customs staff based permanently at the airport. Local Customs management estimate that about six telephone calls per month are made to declare goods for which excise charges are to be levied.

There are no Customs-free ports or airports. Over recent years, Customs enforcement strategy has progressively moved away from a static presence at all ports and airports towards more flexible checks operated by fast response teams targeted at both areas and times of highest risks. At major ports and airports these anti-smuggling teams are based on site, the smaller places being covered by mobile anti-smuggling strategy, which encompasses both anti-smuggling and fiscal controls, there are some locations where passengers can telephone Customs if they have anything to declare for fiscal purposes. This facility is not a part of anti-smuggling controls.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the absence of permanent Customs and Excise staff at Leeds/Bradford airport. [26141]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Since 1 January 1994, two representations have been received referring specifically to concerns about the absence of permanently based Customs staff at Leeds/Bradford airport, and a further representation expressed concern about airports, including Leeds/Bradford, which have no permanently based staff.

Developing Countries (Debt)

Miss Lestor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the total stock of existing and estimated debt outstanding to the United Kingdom by developing countries for each year from 1990 to 2000; [22674]

(2) if he will list by country the total stock of existing and estimated debt outstanding to the United Kingdom by developing countries for each year from 1900 to 2000. [22677]

Mr. Nelson: The figures for the Export Credit Guarantees Department are not readily available. To assemble them manually would incur disproportionate costs. Figures for outstanding ECGD debt stock as at 31 March 1995 are below. For the ODA figures, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to her by the Under-Secretary of State for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 10 May 1995, Official Report, column 463.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Departmental Committees

Mr. Forman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list all the departmental committees of inquiry which have been established since November 1990, and in each case the date of establishment and the name of the chairman. [23145]

Mr. David Hunt: I list in the table those inquiries of which I am aware. I assume that "departmental committee of inquiry" should include any ad hoc inquiry set up by a Minister or Ministers bringing in expert or lay opinion and chaired by someone from outside Government to investigate either a specific event or a more general issue.

I have not included inquiries set up routinely in pursuance of responsibilities under a statutory requirement, for example public inquiries held under planning legislation.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Children's Play Funds

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage in what areas of children's play funds will be available to bid for in the coming year. [25771]

Mr. Sproat: Bids will be invited in the near future for funds to carry out work in the areas of information dissemination, playwork education and training, and play safety.

National Vocational Qualifications

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the centres and the sports concerned in the awarding of national vocational qualifications. [25043]

Mr. Sproat: Thirty-three sports were included in a pilot project to establish national vocational qualification centres.

These are:

archery association football athletics badminton basketball bowls canoeing cricket cycling dinghy sailing exercise and fitness fencing gymnastics
hockey judo mountaineering movement and dance netball orienteering rowing
rugby league
rugby union skiing squash sub aqua surfing swimming
table tennis target shooting tennis trampolining
volleyball

Currently, there are 12 fully approved centres in the following sports:

association football
swimming hockey gymnastics tennis basketball
karate yachting

A number of other centres are in line for approval by the end of this year.

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) how many national vocational qualifications have been awarded in martial arts; [25042]

(2) what assessment he has made of the progress of awarding national vocational qualifications for martial arts. [25041]

Mr. Sproat: National vocational qualifications will not be awarded in the category "martial arts". There are eight different recognised martial arts, each with varying styles and techniques and each has to be treated separately in its preparation for NVQ centre approval. Details of awards in the eight recognised martial arts are not available.

Contracting Out

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what work has been contracted out (a) by his Department and (b) by agencies for which his Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) projected for 1995–96; [25661]

(2) for each area of work subject to a bidding process under the auspices of (i) his Department and (ii) agencies for which his Department is responsible where work was contracted out who were the successful bidders; and which contracts were won by in-house bidders in (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) 1995–96. [25518]

Mr. Dorrell: Details of work contracted out for the first time which would previously have been carried out in-house by (i) my Department and (ii) the two agencies for which I am responsible in (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) 1995–96 are given in the table below. Only one of the tenders was subject to an in-house bid, which was successful.

Archaeological Sites

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if it remains Her Majesty's Government's policy to legislate, as parliamentary time permits, to implement proposals for new controls for archaeological sites. [24723]

Mr. Dorrell: The Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979 is the primary legislation in operation to safeguard ancient monuments and archaeological remains in England, Wales and Scotland. Proposals to update and improve the 1979 Act will be included in the Heritage Green Paper which I intend to publish later this year.

Consultants

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the level of expenditure on consultancy by (i) his Department and (ii) agencies for which his Department is responsible for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) projected for 1995–96.

Mr. Dorrell: My Department's expenditure on consultancy for the years 1993–94, 1994–95 and the forecast expenditure for 1995–96 is as follows:

	DNH £	Agencies £
1993–94	1,547,125	4,456,430
1994–95	1,145,996	2,470,325
1995–96(est)	761,000	2,430,921

Staff

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) how many staff of (a) the Department of National Heritage and (b) agencies for which the Department of National Heritage is responsible, were employed on a casual or short-term basis in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96; [25508]

(2) what changes there have been in the number of staff employed by (i) his Department and (ii) each agency for which his Department is responsible in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25497]

Mr. Dorrell: The numbers of permanent and casual staff employed by my Department and its two executive agencies—the Royal Parks agency and the Historic Royal Palaces agency—in 1993–94; projected outturn for 1994–95; and plans for 1995–96 are published in my Department's annual report, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. No projections broken down by grade are available.

Majority Shareholdings

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list those companies in which the holder of his office is a majority shareholder which (a) are currently in existence and (b) have been wound up in the past five years. [25712]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 22 May 1995]: In my capacity as Secretary of State for National Heritage, I am not a majority shareholder in any companies which are either (a) currently in existence or (b) have been wound up in the past five years.

EMPLOYMENT

Staff

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many staff of (a) the Department of Employment and (b) agencies for which the Department is responsible (i) took early retirement, (ii) took voluntary redundancy, (iii) took compulsory redundancy and (iv) were retired on medical grounds in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1994–95. [25414]

Miss Widdecombe: The information is not readily available in the form requested. The total number of staff who left on voluntary early retirement schemes in 1993–94 and 1994–95 were 1,909 and 1,884 respectively. The total number of staff who left on ill health retirement in 1993–94 and 1994–95 were 291 and 328 respectively. It is too soon to project the likely outcomes for 1995–96.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the annual cost to his Department of staff leaving under redundancy/early retirement schemes to incorporate (i) added years lump sum payments, (ii) redundancy payments, (iii) pension payments, including enhancements and (iv) any other special arrangements for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95, and projected for (c) 1995–96 and (d) 1996–97. [25636]

Miss Widdecombe: The cost to the Department of early retirement and redundancies are borne from the department's running costs. A detailed breakdown of the various costs could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The total costs borne on the Department's running costs in 1993–94 and 1994–95 were £61.87 million and £25.7 million respectively. It is too soon to project the costs to be borne for 1995–96 or 1996–97.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many staff of (a) the Department of Employment and (b) agencies for which the Department is responsible, were employed on a casual or short-term basis in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what is the projected figure for 1995–96; [25413]

(2) what changes there have been in the number of staff in employment by grade in (a) his Department and (b) each agency for which his Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25626]

Miss Widdecombe: The numbers of permanent and casual staff employed by the Department and the Employment Service agency in 1993–94, estimated outturn for 1994–95, and plans for 1995–96 can be found in annexe A table iii of the Department's annual report, Cm 2805, a copy of which is available in the Library. No projections broken down by grade are available.

Job Vacancies

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, column 160, what consideration he has given to instructing jobcentres to refuse the acceptance of job vacancies with age restrictions in all circumstances where the employer cannot prove that age limits are essential to the performance of the job. [25804]

Miss Widdecombe: The Government are not convinced that refusing to accept vacancies with age restrictions would persuade many employers to change their attitudes. Those employers who currently insist on imposing age restrictions may choose to fill their vacancies by other means. We are concerned that any movement away from using jobcentres would have a harmful effect on the job prospects of the unemployed, especially those who are disadvantaged.

Minicab Drivers

Mr. Bendall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many operations against benefit fraud by minicab drivers have been mounted by the Employment Service since January 1991; how many investigations were carried out; how many minicab drivers were found to be claiming social security benefits; what was the value of the benefits saved; and what was the cost of the operation. [26182]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. G. Johnson to Mr. Vivian Bendall, dated 25 May 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your question about investigations by Employment Service (ES) Inspectors into mini cab drivers since 1991.

Unfortunately, the information you requested is not available.

Over the last 18 months (the period for which details concerning individual investigations is kept) ES Inspectors have carried out over 400,000 investigations covering all areas of the economy. However case files are held under clients' names and not by occupation or industry.

Experience has shown that benefit fraud is more prevalent in certain areas of employment, mini cab driving being one. My inspectors have and will continue to target these areas. Often it has been legitimate licensed taxi drivers and their trade associations who have provided information for my inspectors to act on.

Although I am unable to supply the information you seek on the investigation of mini cab drivers, the table below shows the performance of the ES Inspectors over the last three years.

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Total number of staff	1,343	1,343	1,343
(investigators)	(780)	(780)	(780)
Gross savings[1]	£71.15 million	£80.12 million	£92.1 million
Cost of fraud operation	£26.44 million	£26.84 million	£27.5 million
Net savings	£44.71 million	£53.28 million	£64.6 million
Investment return[2]	£2.69	£2.99	£3.35
Number of sign-offs[3]	61,129	67,426	78,231

[1] This figure is calculated by multiplying the weekly amount of benefit saved by 22. The 22-week figure was identified by the Department of social Security research and represents the average number of weeks claimants would have remained on the register if they had not been investigated by fraud staff.

[2] Pounds of benefit saved for ever £ of cost.

[3] Number of clients withdrawing their claims to benefit after investigation by ES inspectors.

I hope this is helpful.

Workstart

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many unemployed people will be taking part in the new workstart pilot schemes running in (a) the west midlands and (b) the north-west. [25805]

Miss Widdecombe: The new workstart pilots, which pay a subsidy to employers who recruit very long-term unemployed people, began last month in the west midlands conurbation, Greater Manchester and Cheshire.

No targets have been set for the number of people who will participate on the individual workstart pilots. However, 5,000 places are available for the pilots as a whole.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps his Department is taking (a) to evaluate the workstart pilot scheme in the west midlands in which a subsidy for placing an unemployed person is negotiated with an employer on an individual basis and (b) to monitor the workstart pilot scheme in the north-west in which the use of a subsidy varies according to the duration of a client's unemployment; and when he expects to publish the results of his evaluations. [25809]

Miss Widdecombe: Information on the workstart pilots is being collected in three ways: routine management information; a database which will contain details of participants' characteristics and a survey of employers.

A final report will be available in late 1996.

Information Technology

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what studies have been commissioned by Her Majesty's Government into the impact on employment over the next decade from information technology; and if he will make a statement. [25984]

Miss Widdecombe: Several studies have been commissioned into the future impact on employment of information technology:

The Government's technology foresight programme has examined a wide range of technology developments which will underpin improvements in the UK's wealth creating capacity. This has included the IT sector and developments of new IT-based businesses.

Several Government Departments co-funded the "Britain in 2010" study which included an assessment of the impact of new technology on jobs.

The Department of Trade and Industry has commissioned a feasibility study into the impact of telecommunications and computer applications on the international mobility of jobs.

A major study of teleworking, carried out for the Employment Department in 1992, highlighted the ways in which this new form of working can create employment opportunities.

A recent study for the Department of Trade and Industry highlighted the potential of telework for increasing the competitiveness of British industry.

Advances in IT play a key role in helping to increase productivity and enhance the competitiveness of British industry, contributing to employment growth and improving living standards. IT has facilitated the growth of new forms of working such as telework, which give more people the opportunity to participate in the labour force, help businesses to retain skilled workers and increase employment opportunities in remote areas.

Allerton Outreach Team

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what further funding he has authorised to support two staff and running costs of the Allerton outreach team in Bradford; and if he will make a statement. [25987]

Miss Widdecombe: The original Employment Service source of funding for the Allerton outreach team has been absorbed into the single regeneration budget and the Employment Department no longer has a direct involvement in funding this project, which is managed by Bradford council.

However, for 1995–96, the Bradford and district training and enterprise council has made available £10,000 towards the cost of an outreach worker. I understand that the balance of the cost is being met by Bradford council. The TEC has also arranged for up to £10,000 of guidance vouchers to be available for Allerton's residents. I do understand that a trainee under the training for work programme continues to provide a second team member. A full range of ED programmes are available to help unemployed people in Bradford including the residents of Allerton.

Disabled People

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what response he received from the National Advisory Council on Employment of People with Disabilities to his consultation on Government measures to tackle discrimination against disabled people with regard to (a) the remit of the new advisory body proposed in the consultation document, (b) additional functions which the new advisory body might undertake, over and above those proposed in the consultation document, (c) infrastructure and resources for the new advisory body and (d) exclusion of small firms from the new statutory requirements proposed in the consultation document; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the response of the National Advisory Council on Employment of People with Disabilities. [26084]

Miss Widdecombe: The Government have published a full analysis of the responses to the consultation exercise entitled "A Consultation on Government Measures to Tackle Discrimination Against Disabled People: An Analysis of the Responses", and a copy of this has been placed in the Library. Our general policy is not to publish particular responses to the consultation document.

The National Advisory Council on Employment of People with Disabilities advised my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. The council's advice was sought on the employment and training implications of the consultation proposals. NACEPD's advice is provided direct to Ministers or to officials, and its views are subsequently made known publicly through periodic reports on its activities. Such a report is not due yet, so I have arranged for a copy of NACEPD's response to the consultation document to be placed in the Library.

Public Bodies

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which non-departmental public bodies within the responsibility of his Department are subject to scrutiny by (a) the ombudsmen, (b) the National Audit Office, (c) the Audit Commission and (d) other monitoring officers; which are covered by citizens charters; in which performance indicators apply; and in which members are liable to surcharge. [23969]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 15 May 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Cannock and Burntwood (Dr. Wright) on 25 April 1995, Official Report, column 477. In addition to the executive non-departmental public bodies listed in that reply, the Department sponsors the following NDPBs:

The National Advisory Council on the Employment of People with Disabilities;

Committees for the Employment of Disabled People, around 60 local committees;

Supported Employment Consultative Group;

Race Relations Advisory Group.

These advisory bodies are convened to advise the Department on the impact of Government employment policies on people with disabilities and ethnic minorities. They have no grant in aid are supported within the Department's running costs. None of them provides a service direct to the public. They are therefore all potentially subject to scrutiny by the National Audit Office but not by the Parliamentary Commissioner or the Audit Commission. None is covered by citizens charters or performance indicators. In none of the NDPBs for which the Department is responsible are the members liable to surcharge and none is subject to scrutiny by monitoring officers other than those referred to above and those carrying out normal audit functions.

SCOTLAND

Former Ministers

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what rules and regulations are laid down by his office regarding former Ministers taking up appointments with companies with which they have been involved while Ministers. [23053]

Mr. Lang: No specific rules or regulations are laid down by my office. Existing guidance is contained in paragraph 105 of "Questions of Procedures for Ministers", a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Departmental Property

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what have been the total capital and recurring costs of improvements and replacements in relation to the fabric, decoration, carpeting and facilities of (a) Dover house, (b) Bute house and (c) Alhambra house in each year since 1979. [24103]

Mr. Lang: The information available for each full financial year for which detailed records are held by the Scottish Office is as in the table. Works in previous years were carried out by the Property Services Agency and my Department does not hold information from which these buildings could be identified separately:

Building	Year	Capital £	Maintenance £

Dover house and Bute house are both grade A listed buildings. Alhambra house was vacated by the Scottish Office in November 1994.

Giant Hogweed

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he plans to require the owners of land to which the public may have access to eradicate heracleum mantegazzianum; if he will give local authorities a duty to control heracleum mantegazzianum; and if he will make a statement about the dangers associated with this plant. [24083]

Sir Hector Monro: There are no plans to bring forward legislation to impose new duties in relation to heracleum mantegazzianum on landowners or local authorities. Heracleum mantegazzianum contains large amounts of sap whose toxins can cause painful blistering, and humans coming into contact with the plant may require medical treatment.

Health Boards

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to alter the boundaries of health boards; and if he will make a statement. [24975]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Minister of State is considering, in consultation with relevant interests, whether adjustments should be made in the small number of cases where the boundaries of the new local authorities intersect those of health boards.

Retirements and Redundancies

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff of (a) the Scottish Office and (b) agencies for which the Scottish Office is responsible (i) took early retirement, (ii) took voluntary redundancy, (iii) took compulsory redundancy and (iv) were retired on medical grounds in (1) 1993–94 and (2) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25503]

Mr. Lang: The information requested is set out in the table below. Staff numbers for the Scottish Prison Service are shown separately.

	1993–94	1994–95	Projected 1995–96
(a) The Scottish Office
(i) Early retirement	35	30	25
(ii) Voluntary redundancy	47	144	100–200
(iii) Compulsory redundancy	—	—	—
(iv) Medical grounds	26	19	20
(b) Agencies
(i) Early retirement	3	4	2
(ii) Voluntary redundancy	3	12	6
(iii) Compulsory redundancy	1	—	1
(iv) Medical grounds	3	31	6
(c) Scottish Prison Agency
(i) Early retirement	50	160	150
(ii) Voluntary redundancy	3	3	[1]—
(iii) Compulsory redundancy	—	—	—
(iv) Medical grounds	80	60	60

[1] None expected.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the annual cost to his Department of staff leaving under redundancy/early retirement schemes to incorporate (i) added years lump sum payments, (ii) redundancy payments, (iii) pension payments, including enhancements and (iv) any other special arrangements for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95, (c) projected for 1995–96 and (d) projected for 1996–97. [25470]

Mr. Lang: The costs to the Department of early retirement and redundancies are borne from the Department's running costs provision.

A detailed breakdown of the various costs could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The total costs borne on the Scottish Office running costs in 1993–94 and 1994–95 were £900,000 and £1.5 million respectively. For 1995–96 the amount is estimated at £1.6 million.

For the Scottish Prison Service the total costs borne in 1993–94 and 1994–95 were £900,000 in each year and for 1995–96 the amount is estimated at £800,000.

Projections for 1996–97 will be determined during the coming public expenditure survey.

Consultants

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the level of expenditure on consultancy by (a) his Office and (b) agencies for which his Office is responsible for (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) projected for 1995–96. [25645]

Mr. Lang: The information requested is currently not held centrally and is therefore not available. Steps are, however, being taken to establish a central record of such information. I shall write to the hon. Member with the information requested as soon as it becomes available and place a signed copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Contracting Out

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for each piece of work subject to a bidding process under the auspices of (a) his Department and (b) agencies for which his Department is responsible (i) where work was contracted out, who were the successful bidders and (ii) where contracts were won by in-house bidders in (1) 1993–94, (2) 1994–95 and (3) 1995–96. [25656]

Departmental Performance

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what performance indicators and performance targets there are for measuring the performance of his Department in (a) answering letters from members of the public and (b) answering telephone calls from members of the public; how performance is monitored; and what are the latest figures for performance measured against the target set. [26232]

Mr. Lang: Where members of the public write to Ministers and the reply is made on their behalf by departmental officials, there is a target of 20 days for doing so. In 1994, 14,846 such replies were issued—76 per cent. within the target of 20 days.

Where members of the public write direct to departmental officials, the setting of targets for the issue of replies is a matter for individual divisions and units. There is no centrally laid down target and no central collection of performance figures by individual divisions and units.

The target for answering telephone calls to the Scottish Office central inquiry unit is an average of 10 seconds. Weekly performance is monitored electronically. During a recent 10-day period, 14,208 calls were handled. The average response time was 11 seconds.

Complaints

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what policy and procedure exist for dealing with complaints against his Department by members of the public; when his Department last updated its policy; what time limit and target for dealing with such complaints his Department has; and what follow-up procedure exists where complainants are not satisfied with his Department's response to a complaint. [26216]

Mr. Lang: My Department provides a wide range of services to the public. A single department-wide complaints procedure would not be appropriate. Our complaints procedures are tailored to the particular circumstances of the service provided and the needs of the users. A comprehensive review of our complaints procedures was carried out in 1992. Time limits for dealing with complaints were introduced. They vary from service to service. Most of our complaints procedures provide for complainants to refer their complaint to a more senior level if they are dissatisfied. If the matter is not resolved to the complainant's satisfaction he or she can ask a Member of Parliament to refer the matter to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration.

Belvidere Hospital

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the names of all the bodies which have any responsibility for all or part of the services provided at Belvidere hospital, Parkhead, Glasgow; and to which organisation the hospital belongs. [26186]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Glasgow Royal Infirmary University NHS trust, The Southern General Hospital NHS trust and the West Glasgow Hospitals University NHS trust have responsibility for the services provided at Belvidere hospital.

Greater Glasgow health board is in discussion with the Glasgow Royal Infirmary University NHS trust over the transfer of the assets of the hospital to that trust.

Glasgow City Council

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the electorate for each of the new unitary authority wards in the Glasgow city council area as at 6 April. [26187]

Mr. Kynoch: The electorate for each of the new unitary authority wards for the city of Glasgow council at the latest available date, 15 February 1995, are given in the table:

NHS Numbers

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give an undertaking that the new NHS number will be used only with respect to the provision of health-related services; and if he will make a statement. [26399]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no proposals to reissue the NHS number in Scotland where a community health index number has been in use for many years. We have no plans to use the community health index number for anything other than health-related purposes.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when his Department will issue the new Scottish unitary authorities with their indicative budgets for 1995–96. [25332]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 23 May 1995]: My right hon. Friend intends to lay a report before the House, in accordance with section 24 of the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Act 1994, in the autumn specifying the amounts which he will use as the baseline for considering capping action in 1996–97. However, in recognition of the shadow councils' need to have early knowledge of the amounts for the purpose of beginning to prepare budgets for 1996–97, my right hon. Friend hopes to be able to issue his proposed figures by about the end of June.

The Convention of Scottish Local Authorities is being fully consulted about the preparation of the figures and those existing local authorities which are being disaggregated have agreed to have discussions with relevant shadow councils about the appointment of their 1995–96 budgets to the new council areas.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of (a) applications for trust status which have been turned down by the Scottish Office, (b) applicants involved and (c) amounts of money spent by the national health service management executive in supporting these unsuccessful applicants for each year since 1991–92. [25329]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 23 May 1995]: Four applications for trust status have been rejected. These were as follows:

Princess Margaret Rose Orthopaedic Hospital
Lothian College of Nursing and Midwifery
Forth Valley Healthcare
Western Isles Health Unit

The costs incurred by the NHS in supporting these applications amounted to:

1991–92: £50,000
1992–93: £69,730
1993–94: £195,000

The application made by Forth Valley Healthcare was subsequently re-submitted and accepted as a conjoint application with the Royal Scottish National Hospital and Community NHS trust to form Central Scotland Healthcare NHS trust.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the correspondence addresses and the names of the executive and non-executive directors of the NHS trusts established in April. [25345]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 23 May 1995]: The executive and non-executive directors of the NHS trusts established in April are as follows:

Non-domestic Rates

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much the Scottish Office estimates will be raised through the imposition of non-domestic rates charges on empty properties during the financial year 1995–96. [25338]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 23 May 1995]: It is estiamted that the additional rates income due to changes in unoccupied property relief will be £23.5 million in 1995–96. This was taken fully into account in determining the level of the unified business rate for 1995–96, so there is no additional burden on business ratepayers in aggregate as a result of this measure.

Official Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many official visits on ministerial business each Minister in his Department undertook during the last 12 months to each parliamentary constituency in Scotland. [25339]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 23 May 1995]: To list visits made to each Scottish constituency in the last 12 months would involve disproportionate costs. However, since 20 May 1994, Scottish Office Ministers have made a total of 313 visits to Scottish constituencies.

Planning Applications

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was (a) the number of planning application refusals considered by the Scottish Office and (b) the number of planning application refusals which were overturned by the Scottish Office for each year since 1979–80 and for each planning authority. [25342]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 23 May 1995]: This information is available only by calendar year. The answer to part (a) of the question is as set out. The answer to part (b) regarding the number of planning applications which were overturned by the Scottish Office for each year since 1979 is also set out, but it is not possible to break this down for each planning authority.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the procedures that operate in the Lanarkshire health board area for inspecting nursing homes; and if he will make a statement. [25484]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 May 1995]: The Nursing Homes Registration (Scotland) Act 1938, as amended, places the responsibility for the registration and inspection of nursing homes on the local health board. The Scottish Office Home and Health Department has issued model guidelines for the registration and inspection of nursing homes for elderly people, for people with dementia, for people with a learning disability and for homes providing acute services. All health boards are expected to follow this national guidance.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will visit Orchard house nursing home to assess the quality of care provided for the elderly residents at that home. [25486]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 May 1995]: My right hon. Friend understands that an inquiry by Lanarkshire health board into the standards of care at Orchard house nursing home has been under way for some months, and is expected to report to the board in early June.

Lanarkshire Health Board

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details as to the length of service, salary and qualifications of the Lanarkshire health board's senior nursing officer. [25483]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 May 1995]: Such information is not held centrally. The hon. Member may therefore wish to pursue his query with Lanarkshire health board.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by English county and Scottish region Forestry Commission woodland currently offered for sale, under offer or proposed for sale within the next six months; and if he will state for each piece of woodland its size and the steps which have been taken to ensure that public access on foot is permitted after any sale takes place. [24619]

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 18 May 1995]: The information is as follows:

a. Access agreement has been concluded.
b. Local authority declined to enter an access agreement.
c. Local authority is considering whether to enter an access agreement.
d. A third party with an interest has declined to enter an access agreement or restrictions in the Commission's title prevented the offer of an access agreement.
e. Sale commenced before the introduction of the arrangements for access agreements.

Advance notification of areas being considered for sale is given in the "Estates Gazette" in respect of all woodlands of more than five hectares, together with any other land having a known conservation, recreation or amenity interest. Copies of the "Estates Gazette" are held in the Library of the House.

Entrepreneurship

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his policy for the encouragement of entrepreneurship in Scotland; and what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of this policy. [22651]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 9 May 1995]: Entrepreneurship is essential to the continued competitiveness of the Scottish economy. The Government have in place a range of initiatives aimed at encouraging young people to consider a career in business, supporting such careers with an appropriate training infrastructure and providing assistance and advice on the creation and development of small businesses. Specific initiatives include the recent publication of a new framework for action for the development of improved education/industry links; the business birth rate strategy operated by Scottish Enterprise, which is aimed at increasing the number of business start-ups in Scotland; and the promotion by Scottish Enterprise of 1995 as "The Year of the Entrepreneur"—a concept which acts as a framework for a series of events and presentations aimed specifically at encouraging entrepreneurship. More generally, all local enterprise companies are pursuing policies aimed at promoting business activity and entrepreneurship throughout Scotland. The effectiveness of this policy is evidenced by the continuing success of the Scottish economy, both domestically and in terms of its export performance.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Roger Levitt

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Attorney-General (1) what discussions he has had about the Roger Levitt case since 21 May; [26281]

(2) when plea bargaining began in the case of Roger Levitt. [26246]

The Attorney-General: Since 21 May, I have discussed the case with officials simply for the purpose of preparing answers to parliamentary questions. I refer my hon. Friend to my earlier written answers on the 9 December 1993, and 17 December 1993 at columns 332–33 and 1045–46 respectively, which explained the events that led up to Mr. Levitt's plea.

Butte Mining

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Attorney-General what consultations he has had with the director of the Serious Fraud Office concerning the investigation into the company affairs of Butte Mining. [26592]

The Attorney-General: I frequently meet the director of the Serious Fraud Office for discussions about matters of departmental interest, including casework. It is my policy not to divulge the subject matter of such meetings or operational details of current investigations.

"Tomorrow's Job" Investigation

Mr. Madden: To ask the Attorney-General how many reports have been referred by the Metropolitan police to the Crown Prosecution Service from the "Tomorrow's Job" investigation; how many have been referred to him by the Crown Prosecution Service; and what action he has taken. [25986]

The Attorney-General: The police have forwarded one interim report to the Crown Prosecution Service which specifically arises out of their inquiries concerning "Tomorrow's Job". The Crown Prosecution Service is considering this report and will submit it to me if it concludes that proceedings may be justified against any person for an offence requiring my consent.

Crown Prosecution Service Report

Mr. Madden: To ask Mr. Attorney General on what date the Crown Prosecution Service referred to him a report, concerning a printer, received by the Crown Prosecution Service last August from the Metropolitan police; and what action he is taking in this matter. [25988]

The Attorney-General: Papers relating to the case to which the hon. Member refers were submitted to me by the Crown Prosecution Service on 13 April 1995. I requested and am awaiting a more detailed analysis of the relevant material.

"Red Watch"

Mr. Madden: To ask Mr. Attorney General when the Crown Prosecution Service received from the Metropolitan Police the third issue of "Red Watch"; and what action has been taken by the Crown Prosecution Service. [25989]

The Attorney-General: The publication "Red Watch" is a part of the "Combat 18" magazine issue No. 3. The Metropolitan police supplied the Crown Prosecution Service with a copy of that magazine on 20 January 1995, for information only. A police report and the evidence gathered in the investigation into the publication of "Combat 18" magazine issue No. 3 has been delivered to the Crown Prosecution Service on 6 April 1995 and a prosecution is under consideration.

Disciplinary Proceedings

Mr. Straw: To ask the Attorney-General how many solicitors employed by the Crown Prosecution Service since 1987 have been the subject of disciplinary proceedings by the Law Society (a) before their employment with the Crown Prosecution Service commenced and (b) during their employment with the Crown Prosecution Service. [25994]

The Attorney-General: The information sought by the hon. Member could be definitively obtained only by a trawl of the personal files relating to all solicitors currently employed, as well as those previously employed. That exercise would involve disproportionate costs.

A review by the Department, with the assistance of the Law Society had identified (a) three solicitors who were the subject of disciplinary proceedings before their employment commenced with the Crown Prosecution Service, whom one remains in the employment of the Crown Prosecution Service, with the agreement of the Law Society. The other two ceased to be employed in 1989. The answer to (b) is that two solicitors have been the subject of disciplinary proceedings during their employment with the Crown Prosecution Service, but neither has had their practising certificate withdrawn. Both are still employed by the Crown Prosecution Service.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Global Environment Facility

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who is Her Majesty's Government's representative on the council of the global environment facility; and what arrangements have been made for his or her accountability to Parliament. [24724]

Mr. Baldry: The executive director for the United Kingdom's constituency in the council of the Global Environment Facility is Mr. David Turner, head of environment policy department in the Overseas Development Administration. The Government are accountable to Parliament for expenditures under the global environmental assistance programme through the Minister for Overseas Development.

Countdown 2000

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Overseas Development Administration has to assist the Leprosy Mission for the Countdown 2000 campaign. [25876]

Mr. Baldry: The Overseas Development Administration is not directly involved in the Countdown 2000 campaign, but has supported the Leprosy Mission's work in developing countries for some years and will continue to do so. Current funding involves programmes in Bangladesh, Indonesia and Chad.

Family Planning

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the amounts spent by the Overseas Development Administration in the overall sum spent on family planning on (a) advertising and information, (b) abortion and abortifacients,

(c) barrier methods of contraception, (d) chemical methods of contraception and (e) sterilisation. [25310]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: The table lists the relevant bilateral commitments in 1994:

£ million

Family planning component	1994 Commitment
Abortion and abortifacients	nil
Barrier methods (condoms)	3.339
Chemical (hormonal) methods	7.12

Notes:
1. Support for voluntary surgical contraception, as one of a variety of methods of contraception available, has been an element of commitments for projects in previous years. There were no such commitments in 1994.
2. All the projects in question provide information about family planning and the range of contraceptive methods available. Such information is provided as part of an overall service to clients and is not separately costed.

Mr. David Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what records his Department keeps of instances or reports of coercive family planning overseas. [25304]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 May 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 23 May at column 514.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Waste Disposal

11. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the future provision for waste disposal in Northern Ireland. [24631]

Sir John Wheeler: Arrangements for the disposal of waste will be determined by district councils, taking into account the specific needs of their areas, the costs to the community and the requirement for proper environmental safeguards.

Bodies (Information)

12. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he raised with the Sinn Fein delegation in his bilateral talks the question of the fate of those killed by the Provisional IRA who are still unburied; and if he will make a statement. [24632]

Mr. Acnram: Yes. During yesterday's meeting in exploratory dialogue with Sinn Fein I raised this important issue and called upon it to use its influence to ensure that the families of the bereaved were given such information as the IRA had about their fate and the whereabouts of their bodies.

Peace Process

13. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made by the Secretary of State in his discussions with the Dublin Government on the peace process. [24633]

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend last met the Tanaiste at the intergovernmental conference in Dublin on 28 April; the Prime Minister and the Taoiseach met in the margins of the VE ceremonies in Moscow. On both occasions, the progress of the peace process and the right ways of advancing it were discussed.

17. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a further statement on the progress of the exploratory dialogue and substantive talks which he is conducting with political parties in Northern Ireland. [24637]

Mr. Ancram: Exploratory dialogue with the loyalists and Sinn Fein continue on the basis set out in the reply I gave the hon. Members for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) and for Falkirk, West (Mr. Canavan) earlier today.

As for substantive talks, my right hon. and learned Friend has invited the four main parties to discuss with him bilaterally the issues on which there would need to be agreement if there is to be a comprehensive settlement. So far, a meeting has been held with the Ulster Unionist party, and meetings with the alliance and SDLP are currently being arranged. The DUP has regrettably not responded formally to my right hon. and learned Friend's invitation—at least not at this stage.

19. Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about latest progress in the peace negotiations. [24639]

Mr. Ancram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Members for Walsall, North, (Mr. Winnick) for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) and for Falkirk, West (Mr. Canavan) earlier today.

Irish Medium Schools

15. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what new proposals he has to improve the work of Irish medium schools. [24635]

Mr. Ancram: Improvements in the work of Irish medium schools are primarily a matter for their boards of governors. All grant-aided Irish medium schools can avail themselves of the extensive curriculum advisory and support services provided by the education and library boards.

Northern Ireland-Scotland Co-operation

16. Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met the Secretary of State for Scotland to promote trade, tourism and greater co-operation between Northern Ireland and Scotland. [24636]

Sir John Wheeler: My right hon. and learned Friend meets the Secretary of State for Scotland frequently to discuss matters of common interest.

Private Lee Clegg

18. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received about the case of Private Clegg in the last three months; and what response he has made to them. [24638]

Sir John Wheeler: Private Clegg's case has generated very great interest, including a number of petitions and over 4,000 individual letters from the public. Approximately half the correspondents have been sent replies.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

20. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to restructure the Royal Ulster Constabulary. [24640]

Sir John Wheeler: None at present. The Government published proposals for reform of the tripartite structure in 1994. The Police Authority and the RUC are currently conducting public consultations on policing services. The RUC is engaged in a detailed consultation process, both within the force and externally, which will identify future policing strategy. Any change to the structure of the RUC will be based on careful professional evaluation of policing needs, and take into account the consultation processes.

Terrorist Disarmament

21. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made over the handing over and destruction of terrorist arms and explosives in Northern Ireland. [24641]

Sir John Wheeler: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton).

Abortion

22. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many right hon. and hon. Members representing Northern Ireland constituencies have made representatives (a) supporting and (b) opposing extension to the Province of the Abortion Act 1967. [24642]

Mr. Ancram: In the last three years, no Northern Ireland Member has made representations supporting the extension of the Abortion Act 1967 to Northern Ireland. Seven Northern Ireland Members have made representations to Ministers expressing their opposition to the extension of the Act.

Police (Seat Belts)

23. Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if police officers will now wear seat belts in cars. [24643]

Sir John Wheeler: The Royal Ulster Constabulary will keep its policy on the wearing of seat belts under review, but it must continue to be a matter of judgment as to whether or not a police officer wears a seat belt according to the prevailing circumstances and assessment of the security risk.

Benefit Applications

24. Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are taken to apply the parity of treatment arrangement between Northern Ireland and Great Britain to ensure equality of treatment between identical social security benefit applicants residing in Northern Ireland and Great Britain. [24644]

Mr. Ancram: Although social security benefits are available in Northern Ireland on the same basis as they are in Great Britain, Northern Ireland has its own social security legislation and the independent adjudication authorities are obliged to apply this in deciding on applications for benefit having regard to the particular circumstances of the applicant only. The statutory appeal procedures can be invoked if the applicant is dissatisfied with the decision in their case.

Inward Investment

25. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what effort are being made to attract inward investment into the Province. [24645]

Mr. Ancram: The Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland acting through the Department of Economic Development has overall responsibility for attracting inward investment to Northern Ireland. It has representative offices in Great Britain, Germany, the United States and Asia. In light of a more positive business climate in Northern Ireland, the IDB plans substantially to increase its overseas representation. Already, an office has been opened in Atlanta, Georgia and a person has been appointed in Singapore to research and to identify foreign investment potential.

26. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the level of inward investment in Northern Ireland since the ceasefires. [24646]

Mr. Ancram: Investment inquiries have risen dramatically since the ceasefires to 743 in the six months ended 31 March compared to 189 in the corresponding period last year. First-time visits also rose from 146 in 1993–94 to 163 in 1994–95. However, because of the long lead time on decisions by companies about their internationally mobile investments, it will be some time before the practical benefits of the ceasefires are seen in terms of much needed additional jobs on the ground.

Industrial Disputes

27. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the number of days lost in industrial disputes in Northern Ireland. [24647]

Sir John Wheeler: In Northern Ireland the number of days lost due to industrial disputes has fallen significantly in recent years. It fell to a record low of nine days per 1,000 employees in 1994 from an average of 76 days over the previous 10-year period.

Irish Constitution

28. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met the Taoiseach to discuss articles of the Irish constitution. [24648]

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend last met the Taoiseach at a memorial ceremony at Islandbridge on 28 April. The purpose of the ceremony was to pay tribute to those Irish people who fought and died in the British forces in the last war.

The Irish constitution and any possible changes to it are a matter for the Irish Government, Parliament and people. "A New Framework for Agreement" sets out the Irish Government's commitment to remove any jurisdictional or territorial claim of legal right over the territory of Northern Ireland contrary to the will of its people.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will seek to persuade the Government of Ireland to declare that they have no selfish, political economic or strategic interest in Northern Ireland. [25954]

Mr. Ancram: The Irish Government have made it clear that, as part of a wider agreement, they will introduce and support changes in the Irish constitution. The Taoiseach has said that those changes would remove any jurisdictional or territorial claim of legal right over the territory of Northern Ireland contrary to the will of its people.

Energy Costs

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he next expects to meet the Northern Ireland Chamber of Commerce to discuss energy costs in the Province. [24649]

Sir John Wheeler: There are no plans for such a meeting.

Police Complaints

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will lay before Parliament copies of the annual report of the Independent Commission for Police Complaints for Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Patrick Mayhew: The commission's report for 1994, which is the seventh annual report to be produced by the commission since its establishment in 1988, was laid before Parliament on 26 April. The report sets out the purpose and values of the commission. It provides details of the commission's work during the year in supervising the investigation of complaints against the police and of its role in disciplinary proceedings.

The report shows clearly the valuable work which is carried out by the commission in ensuring that complaints against the police are dealt with independently and in effective manner.

I am grateful to the chairman and members of the commission for the important work they do to sustain and increase public confidence in the police complaints system.

Tape-recorded Interviews

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last discussed the tape recording of interviews with suspects with the Chief Constable of the RUC; and what plans he has to bring practice in Northern Ireland into line with that elsewhere in the UK. [24634]

Sir John Wheeler: My right hon. and learned Friend and I have regular meetings with the Chief Constable.

Tape recording of interviews under the Police and Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1989 follows guidelines similar to the English PACE codes. I intend to replace these guidelines in a revised set of codes for Northern Ireland in early 1996.

Housing Executive

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the existing Housing Executive developments which have been transferred for management purposes to housing associations. [25923]

Mr. Ancram: A number of housing executive properties in the streets listed have been transferred to housing associations for management purposes:

South Region (Portadown)
Corcain park
Millington park
Moeran park

North-east Region (Coleraine)
Glenvarra drive

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the Housing Executive new build schemes which will be transferred to housing associations for implementation and management. [25924]

Mr. Ancram: The new build schemes, which it has been agreed will transfer from the Housing Executive to housing associations for implementation and management, are as follows:

Maphoner road, Mullaghbawn, phase 2, Co Armagh
Ballygowan road, phase 2, Banbridge, Co Down
Bowtown road, phase 5, Newtownards, Co Down
Camphill, Newtownbutler, phase 6, Co Fermanagh
Ballyekelly, phase 1, Co Londonderry
Burnside road, Coleraine, Co Londonderry
2–20 Charleville street, Belfast

Market Testing

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what considerations underlay the requirements on health authorities to submit quarterly reports on competitive tendering; and what consideration was given to adopting the English model of an annual report. [25239]

Mr. Ancram: The White Paper "Competing for Quality" requires all UK health Departments to monitor and report annually on progress by their agent bodies in market testing. The Department of Health and Social Services has therefore adopted this process. In addition, the Department has asked for the co-operation of boards and trusts in providing interim quarterly updates of the same information as is contained in the annual returns, to assist in responses to inquiries and to meet the reporting requirements of the efficiency unit.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what instructions his Department has issued to health boards and health trusts regarding competitive tendering. [25236]

Mr. Ancram: Health and social services boards and trusts have been advised that they must implement Government policy set out in the White Paper "Competing for Quality". In addition, and in keeping with the NHS in Great Britain, there is a management requirement to market test the specific services of domestic, laundry and catering.

RUC Drug Squad

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the average number of officers of the Royal Ulster Constabulary in the drug squad in each of the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement about the presence of illegal drugs in Northern Ireland. [24957]

Sir John Wheeler: Every operational RUC officer is aware of the drugs issue and is a resource in combating drugs offences within Northern Ireland. At sub-divisional level, there are some 70 officers operating within 30 drugs liaison units whose sole responsibility is to address the problems of drug offences at a local level.

The headquarters drugs squad itself over the past 10 years has had on average 36 officers, arising from 34 in 1985 to a present strength of 44 officers, including the recent upgrading to Detective Superintendent of the post of head of drugs squad.

Northern Ireland, like other parts of the UK and Europe, does have an identifiable problem in the availability of illegal drugs, although it does not yet suffer the widespread abuse of drugs found elsewhere. One indicator of the availability of illegal drugs is the rate of seizures by the RUC; the Chief Constable's report for 1994 gives full details of drug seizures by the RUC and other agencies, which show a clear upward trend.

The Government, together with the RUC and other agencies, both statutory and voluntary, are committed to a robust multi-agency approach to tackle effectively all aspects of the drugs problem in Northern Ireland.

Sheep Subsidy

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many farmers receive the subsidy of £39.80 per head for sheep which are neither kept for breeding lambs nor for having their wool shorn; and if he will make a statement on the practice of keeping non-productive sheep for the purpose of collecting the sheep subsidy. [24958]

Mr. Ancram: To be eligible for sheep annual premium, animals need only be females at least 12 months of age or have given birth to a lamb. Northern Ireland statistics on this scheme do not identify the purposes for which eligible animals are kept.

Retirements and Redundancies

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual cost of his Department of staff leaving under redundancy/early retirement schemes to incorporate (i) added years lump sum payments, (ii) redundancy payments, (iii) pension payments, including enhancements and (iv) any other special arrangements for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95, (c) projected for 1995–96 and (d) projected for 1996–97. [25469]

Sir John Wheeler: For staff leaving the Northern Ireland Office and other Northern Ireland Departments these costs are accounted for as non-departmental running costs, exempt, until 31 March 1994. From 1 April 1994, these costs are accounted for as departmental running costs as in the home civil service.

A detailed breakdown of the various costs could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The total costs in respect of officers leaving the Northern Ireland Office and the other Northern Ireland Departments in 1993–94 and 1994–95 were £10,900,000 and £7,082,000 respectively.

The planning of early retirements which will take place in 1995–96 are still at an early stage, and for this reason it is not possible to provide projected costs although there is estimates provision for £3,000,000 expenditure at this time. Projections for 1996–97 will be determined during the coming public expenditure survey.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, how many staff of (a) the Northern Ireland Office and (b) agencies for which the Northern Ireland Office is responsible (i) took early retirement, (ii) took voluntary redundancy (iii) took compulsory redundancy and (iv) were retired on medical grounds in (1) 1993–94 and (2) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25501]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is as follows:

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
(i) Took early retirement
NIO (excluding agencies)	2	1	0
Agencies	1	0	0
(ii) Took voluntary redundancy
NIO (excluding agencies)	13	12	0
Agencies	0	0	15
(iii) Took compulsory redundancy
Agencies	0	0	0
(iv) Were retired on medical grounds
NIO (excluding agencies)	11	15	n/a
Agencies	1	2	n/a

It is not possible to forecast the number of retirements on medical grounds.

Belvoir Park Hospital

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what hospital costs and what increase in revenue costs have been anticipated as a result of the decision by the Eastern area health board to remove the infectious diseases service from Belvoir Park hospital; [24963]

(2) if the fixed costs of the infectious diseases service at Belvoir Park hospital, following its closure, will be transferred to the other service at Belvoir hospital; what will be the consequences for all area boards and general practitioner fundholders who purchase cancer treatment services at Belvoir hospital; and to what extent these consequences were taken into consideration by the Eastern area health board prior to its decision to close down the infectious diseases service at Belvoir hospital; [24966]

(3) if he will make available the option appraisals and business case which identified benefits against the costs involved in the transfer of the infectious diseases service from Belvoir Park hospital; [24968]

(4) if the Eastern area health board consulted with the Northern and Southern area health boards prior to the decision by the Eastern board to close the infectious diseases service at Belvoir Park hospital; what representations he has received from the Northern and Southern health boards; and to what extent these area health boards presently use the infectious diseases service at Belvoir Park hospital; [24964]

(5) to which hospital the infectious diseases service at Belvoir Park hospital will be transferred; and what is the target date for completion of this transfer. [24967]

Mr. Ancram: The Eastern health and social services board's original proposal concerning the transfer of the infectious diseases service was incorporated in its acute hospital services strategy, published in November 1993 after consultation with wide range of groups and individuals including the other three boards. The Under-Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridgeshire, North-East (Mr. Moss), has not had any representations from any of these boards about this proposal. The latest figures available show that in 1993–94 354 patients from the Northern board and 336 from the Southern board used this service at Belvoir Park.

My noble Friend Baroness Denton approved the board's strategy in March 1994. After detailed investigation and further consideration of the proposal for infectious diseases the board has now decided that the service should be split and that it should be provided by the Royal Group of Hospitals trust and the Ulster, North Down and Ards Hospital trust. A steering group is to be established to take this forward and to complete the transfer by June 1996. It is hoped to do so on a revenue neutral basis. Any capital requirements linked to the transfer will be for the two trusts to meet, within available resources, and in the face of competing priorities.

With regard to fixed costs, when a service is transferred from one provider to another, the original provider is expected to reduce so far as possible any fixed costs associated with that service over a reasonable period of time.

Finally, any option appraisal and business case in support of the decision are a matter for the Eastern board and the chairman has been asked to write to the right hon. Gentleman.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of infectious diseases used the service at Belvoir Park hospital in each of the past 10 years; and how many of these cases each year had to be sent to an intensive care facility at another location. [24965]

Mr. Ancram: The table shows the number of cases treated in the infectious diseases speciality in Belvoir Park hospital in the last 10 years. Information on the number of cases transferred to an intensive care facility at another location is not available.

Government Cleaning Contracts

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if Government cleaning remains on the approved list for tenders for contracts in the health sector in Northern Ireland. [25237]

Mr. Ancram: The health and personal social services in Northern Ireland do not operate an approved list system.

Housing, South Down

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what steps have been taken to replace the remaining Orlit dwellings in the constituency of South Down; [25325]

(2) how many Orlit dwellings have been replaced with new build in the constituency of South Down since 1 April 1987 to 31 March 1995; and how many have still to be replaced. [25326]

Mr. Ancram: These are matters for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, but I have been advised by the chief executive that 163 Orlit dwellings have been replaced in the period 1 April 1987 to 31 March 1995 in the South Down constituency. A further 42 Orlit dwellings remain in Housing Executive ownership. The replacement of these dwellings at the end of their useful economic lives depends on a number of factors including housing need in the areas where the dwellings are sited. The Housing Executive has programmed for eight of these dwellings to be replaced in 1996–97.

Police Body Armour

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to ensure that all police officers are supplied with body armour. [25144]

Sir John Wheeler: The Royal Ulster Constabulary has provided body armour for its members since 1972. It is on issue at every station and is available to all officers.

Job Displacement Criteria

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will ensure that the same rules are applied with regard to job displacement criteria when industrial development grants are paid to create additional manufacturing capacity in Northern Ireland, as are applied to projects in Wales, Scotland and England; and if he will make a statement. [25004]

Mr. Ancram: The rules applied in Northern Ireland regarding job displacement criteria are exactly the same as those applied in all other parts of the United Kingdom.

International Fund for Ireland

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has made to the United States Government about the importance of Congress (a) maintaining and (b) increasing support to the International Fund for Ireland. [25728]

Sir John Wheeler: The Government are very supportive and appreciative of the work of the International Fund for Ireland. Ministers use every opportunity, both at home and abroad, to express the Government's appreciation of the generous international contributions to the fund, in particular the donations made by the United States. We are most grateful to President Clinton for his continuing support and look forward to Congress ratifying an increased US donation of $30 million in 1996 and 1997.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many farms (a) are eligible to have land entered into each environmentally sensitive area in Northern Ireland and (b) have had land entered into each environmentally sensitive area in Northern Ireland. [25792]

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

ESA	Eligible farms	Under agreement (25 April 1995)
Antrim Coast, Glens and Rathlin	1,200	229
Slieve Gullion	808	1
Mourne Mountains and Slieve Croob	1,846	321
West Fermanagh and Erne Lakeland	2,815	303
Sperrins	2,170	37

Roads, South Down

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to improve the roads infrastructure within the constituency of South Down. [25748]

Mr. Ancram: In addition to a substantial programme of maintenance work, a number of minor improvement schemes will be carried out on the A2, A7, A22, A25, A50, B1, B2, B7 and B8 routes in the 1995–96 and 1996–97 financial years. Work on the Church street/Scotch street scheme in Downpatrick is programmed to start in the current financial year subject to the completion of the statutory processes.

Ambulance Response Times

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many emergency calls for ambulances there have been in (a) Craigavon, (b) Newry and Mourne, and (d) Down districts from January 1995 to 30 April 1995; what has been the (i) longest, (ii) shortest and (iii) average time before the dispatch of an ambulance; and what has been the (1) longest, (2) shortest and (3) average time between the receipt of the call and the arrival of the patient at hospital. [24500]

Sir John Wheeler: This information is not available in the format requested. The table shows how many emergency calls were received by the Eastern ambulance trust and the Southern health and social services board during the quarter 1 January 1995 to 31 March 1995. Activation times, defined as the time from receipt of an ermgency call until an ambulance is on its way, and response times, defined as the time from receipt of an emergency call until the arrival of an ambulance with the patient, are also shown. Information on the time from the receipt of an emergency call to the arrival of the patient at hospital is not collected centrally.

Board/trust	Total number of emergency calls received	Total number of emergency calls activated within 3 minutes	Total number of emergency calls responded to within
			8 mins	18/21mins
Eastern	6,819	5,726	3,355	6,493
Southern	1,345	1,168	[1]667	[1]1,255

Notes:
Information is not collected centrally below board/trust level.
Abortive calls have been excluded.
[1] The response time was not recorded for one emergency call.

Race Relations

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on his proposals for race relations legislation and his proposals for consultation thereon. [24600]

Mr. Ancram: Following a period of public consultation, in response to a question from the hon. Member for Torfaen (Mr. Murphy) on 27 April 1995, Official Report, column 705, my right hon. and learned Friend made clear his intention to introduce race relations legislation to Northern Ireland by means of an Order in Council.

A draft proposal for an Order in Council will be published and comments sought in due course.

HEALTH

Staff

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many posts were lost in (a) the Department of Health and (b) agencies for which the Department of Health is responsible, listing the total lost posts agency by agency in (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95; and how many posts are proposed to be lost in 1995–96; [25077]

(2) what changes there have been in the numbers of staff employed by (a) the Department of Health and (b) agencies for which the Department of Health is responsible, listing the number of staff agency by agency in (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95; and what changes are projected for 1995–96; [25065]

(3) what changes there have been in the numbers of staff in employment by grade in (a) her Department and (b) each agency for which her Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96; [25630]

(4) how many staff of (a) the Department of Health and (b) for which the DOH is responsible were employed on a casual or short-term basis in (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25421]

Mr. Sackville: The number of permanent and casual staff employed by my Department and each of its executive agencies in 1993–94, projected outturn for 1994–95, and plans for 1995–96 are published in my Department's annual report, a copy of which is in the Library. No projections broken down by grade are available.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff of (a) the Department of Health and (b) agencies for which the Department of Health is responsible (i) took early retirement, (ii) took voluntary redundancy, (iii) took compulsory redundancy and (iv) were retired on medical grounds in (1) 1993–94 and (2) 1994–95; and what were the projected figures for 1995–96. [25516]

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Department of Health
Early retirement	105	33	137
Voluntary redundancy	0	104	237
Compulsory redundancy	0	54	0
Retired on medical grounds	38	37	0
Medicines Control Agency
Early retirement	5	5	2
Voluntary redundancy	0	3	0
Retired on medical grounds	1	2	1
National Health Service Estates
Early retirement	6	1	7
Voluntary redundancy	0	3	9
Compulsory redundancy	0	1	0
Retired on medical grounds	0	0	1
National Health Service Pension Agency
Early retirement	15	6	37
Voluntary redundancy	0	4	24
Retired on medical grounds	0	0	5
Medical Devices Agency
Early retirement	0	0	16
Voluntary redundancy	0	3	7
Retired on medical grounds	0	0	0

Notes:

The Medical Devices Agency did not become an Agency until 27 September 1994 and the figures quoted for it represent the numbers leaving from that date. Figures relating to staff leaving prior to the Agency launch are included in the figures for the Department of Health.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the annual cost to the Department of staff leaving under redundancy/early retirement schemes to incorporate (i) added years lump sum payments for (ii) redundancy payments, (iii) pension payments including enhancements and (iv) any other special arrangements for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and projected for (c) 1995–96 and (d) 1996–97. [25639]

Mr. Sackville: The costs to the Department of early retirement and redundancies are borne from the Department's running costs provision.

A detailed breakdown of the various costs could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The total costs borne on the Department's running costs in 1993–94 and 1994–95 were £4.51 million and £6.51 million respectively. For 1995–96, the amount is estimated at £2.73 million. Projections for 1996–97 will be determined during the coming public expenditure survey.

Notes:

1. Figures include ongoing costs of redundancies/early retirements from previous years.

2. Costs shown for 1993–94 and 1994–95 include moneys paid to paymaster to offset costs of redundancies/early retirements in future years.

3. Costs take into account Treasury contribution, from 1 October 1994 to 31 March 1997, of 80 per cent. of costs of reducing staff numbers in that period.

Hospital providers

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much as a percentage and in real terms hospital provider prices have changed in each of the last two years for providers serving Warwickshire residents, identifying each hospital provider's individual price change. [25206]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Mental Disorder

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contribution she expects her Department to make to the committee of specialists recently appointed by the Committee of Ministers to the Council of Europe to consider revision of Committee of Ministers' recommendation No. R(83)2 on the legal protection of persons suffering from mental disorder placed as involuntary patients following recommendation 1235(1994) of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe; and if she will make a statement. [25327]

Mr. Bowis: I understand that the members of this committee have not yet been appointed. We are currently considering how we can most effectively contribute to its work.

Contracting Out

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) for each piece of work subject to a bidding process under the auspices of (a) her Department and (b) agencies for which her Department is responsible (i) where work was contracted out, who were the successful bidders and (ii) which contracts were won by in-house bidders in (1) 1993–94, (2) 1994–95 and (3) 1995–96; [25652]

(2) what work has been contracted out (a) by her Department and (b) by agencies for which the Department is responsible in (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) projected for 1995–96. [25527]

Mr. Sackville: Available information of all contracts awarded, as part of the Department's "Competing For Quality" market-testing programme, will be placed in the Library.

Detailed information of contract awards can be found in the "Market Testing Bulletin". This is issued monthly, and copies are available in the Library.

Medicines Commission

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the occasion in the last five years upon which the Medicines Commission has reviewed the functions of the Committee on the Safety of Medicines and of the Medicines Control Agency; and if she will publish the findings of the reviews. [25608]

Mr. Sackville: The Committee on the Safety of Medicines, together with all other committees established under section 4 of the Medicines Act 1968, reports with respect to the performance of its functions to the Medicines Commission on an annual basis. These reports are available in the Library.

The functions of the Medicines Control Agency are not within the remit of the Medicines Commission.

Dental Services

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the estimated percentage of the population with tooth decay, giving the figures for (a) the total United Kingdom population and (b) those aged one to 10 years; [25365]

(2) what is the estimated number of cases amongst those aged one to 10 years of (a) tooth decay and (b) tooth extraction due to tooth decay. [23569]

Mr. Malone: The table shows the proportion of children in England aged from 0 to 10 years with permanent teeth which are actively decayed, filled or missing due to decay. In young children, it is difficult to establish whether a tooth has been lost naturally or through decay. The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys adult dental survey, 1988, shows that in England, 43 per cent. of dentate adults in the survey had decayed or unsound teeth. For further explanation of decay in primary teeth and levels of adult tooth decay, I refer the hon. Member to the following OPCS publications—"Adult Dental Survey (1988)" and "Children's Dental Health in the United Kingdom (1993)". These publications are held in the Library. Information relating to Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many cases of tooth decay were treated in the United Kingdom in (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1990 to 1995; [23566]

(2) what is the estimated cost of treating tooth decay for (a) the NHS and (b) patients for (i) 1994–95 and (ii) 1990 to 1995. [23568]

Mr. Malone: Information is not available about the cost of treating tooth decay or the number of cases. The total costs of the general dental service in England and the total number of adult courses of treatments are shown in the table. Since 1990, the majority of treatment for children has been paid for on a capitation basis and courses of treatment are not separately identifiable. Information relating to Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

[1] The cost of figures for 1994–95 are provisional.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been deregistered from NHS dental treatment; and how many NHS dentists have given up NHS dental work entirely since July 1992. [26292]

Mr. Malone: Since July 1992, 891,554 patients have been deregistered by their dentists for reasons other than retirement. In the same period, a total number of 426 dentists removed their names completely from the dental list for reasons other than retirement. The number of dentists contracted to provide national health service general dental services has, however, increased in the period by over 2 per cent.—15,745 on 31 March 1995 compared with 15,426 on 30 June 1992—and, over the same period, there have been some 33 million additions to NHS dentists' lists. These additions include patients moving from one dentist to another and patients re-registering with the same dentist after a gap.

Heart Disease

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) cases of heart disease and (b) deaths due to heart disease were recorded for (i) 1994–95 and (ii) 1990 to 1995. [23567]

Mr. Sackville: The number of finished consultant episodes for hospital in-patients suffering from heart diseases is published in "Hospital Episode Statistics" which are available from 1988–89 to 1993–94. Copies of the publications are available in the Library.

The table shows the number of deaths due to heart disease—ICD[1] codes 390–429—in England and Wales, 1990–93.

1990: 173,453

1991: 174,447

1992: 169,539

1993: 178,963

This information is not yet available for 1994 and 1995.

[1] International Classification of Diseases, 9th Revision.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated cost to the NHS of treating heart disease for (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1990 to 1995. [23570]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Yellow Card Scheme

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her Department's latest estimate of the percentage of adverse drug reactions which are reported by general practitioners via the yellow card system. [25520]

Mr. Sackville: The percentage of all adverse drug reactions reported by general practitioners is not known, as there is no means of knowing the total number of adverse drug reactions. A recent survey found that 77 per cent. of general practitioners have used the yellow card reporting scheme. Of 17,635 reports received in 1994 through the scheme, approximately 63 per cent. originated from general practitioners. Most of the remainder were reported by hospital doctors and pharmaceutical companies.

Committee on the Safety of Medicines

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will consider inviting a consumer representative to sit on the Committee on the Safety of Medicine to complement the medical experts. [26243]

Mr. Sackville: The Committee on the Safety of Medicines is an expert scientific advisory body, and as such members need to have relevant and appropriate expertise. Members do not represent organisations, but contribute by their individual expertise and judgment to the advice given by the body to the licensing authority.

Chelation Therapy

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been undertaken into chelation therapy; what consideration has been made to make it available within the national health service on a non-discretionary basis; and if she will make a statement. [25591]

Mr. Sackville: None.

As with all other forms of treatment, it is for local purchasers to decide in the light of available resources and competing priorities, on the purchase of the most appropriate forms of treatment to meet the assessed health needs of their population.

GP Fundholding

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research she has commissioned to evaluate general practitioner fundholding against joint commissioning; [25920]

(2) what evidence she has evaluated to the effect that general practitioner fundholding is more cost effective than joint commissioning. [25921]

Mr. Malone: As independent studies have shown, general practitioner fundholding has been a major success since 1991 in improving services for patients. Over 41 per cent. of the population is now registered with a fundholding GP. Joint commissioning is a subsequent development which involves both fundholding and non-fundholding general practitioners working in partnership with health authorities to plan and purchase services. We will be developing our research programme to assess these developments, including the full evaluation of the 51 total purchasing sites, over the coming months.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioner fundholding practices per family health service authority are currently in dispute, arbitration or subject to appeal over one or more of their budgets; and if she will make a statement. [25932]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many first, second, third and fourth wave fundholders have since left the scheme. [26199]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally. Indications are that the small number of fundholders who have left the scheme have done so largely because of changes in the practice partnership.

Hospital Closures

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list all hospitals with overnight beds closed in each year since 1979. [25922]

Mr. Malone: Information on closures of hospitals has never been collected centrally in the form requested.

Special Hospitals

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are to grant trust status to Ashworth hospital on Merseyside, Broadmoor hospital in Berkshire and Rampton hospital in Nottinghamshire; and if she will make a statement. [26200]

Mr. Bowis: I expect to be making a statement shortly about future management arrangements for the special hospitals.

Mental Health

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines are in place for the management and multi-agency response to the initial onset of an acute psychiatric emergency occurring in the community; and if she will make a statement. [25931]

Mr. Bowis: The Mental Health act code of practice provides guidance to practitioners on the steps to be taken if a patient requires emergency psychiatric assessment in the community. Copies of the code are available in the Library.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if her Department has, within the past year, made strategic recommendations on how best to allocate mental health expenditure in relation to needs for services. [26075]

Mr. Bowis: The annual priorities and planning guidance for the national health service sets the broad direction for the planning and delivery of health services for the coming year. The guidance for 1995–96 identifies mental health as a priority for the medium term. It is the responsibility of district health authorities to prepare local health strategies and purchasing plans to address the national priorities whilst also taking full account of local health needs. A copy of the guidance for 1995–96—EL(94)55—is available in the Library.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the organisations that were involved in her Department's consultation process prior to the publication of the Mental Health (Patients in the Community) Bill. [26019]

Mr. Bowis: The information will be placed in the Library.

Local Pay

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many local pay offers from NHS trusts to nurses, midwives and professions allied to medicine have been connected to changes in employment and working conditions in the current pay round; and if she will make a statement. [25937]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally. Terms of local pay offers are a matter for employers.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to address the specific health needs of different ethnic minority groups; and if she will make a statement. [25938]

Mr. Sackville: We are totally committed to ensuring that people from ethnic minorities should benefit fully from the national health service. The reforms we have introduced into the NHS require health authorities to assess the health needs of their local population and to deliver the services to meet these needs. To improve information about the use of health services by people from ethnic minorities from 1 April 1995 it is mandatory to record the ethnic group of patients who use in-patient or day-case services. This data will enable purchasers and providers to examine the uptake of services, monitor standards and identify any gaps in service provision.

Since 1989, we have made available £3 million to provide funding for projects to improve access to health services and information for ethnic minorities. The projects are now related specifically to "The Health of the Nation" key areas and to the rights and standards outlined in the patients charter. The patients charter is available in 11 ethnic languages and has been widely distributed.

We have also established the ethnic health unit as part of the NHS Executive. The aim of the unit is to promote good practice in the NHS, support managers in developing links with local communities and to build ethnic health into the mainstream work of the NHS. The unit has funded many local initiatives to improve services to ethnic minorities.

Child Abuse

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the social services departmental inspectorate last inspected Newcastle city council social services department; when it next intends to do so; what specific advice has been given to Newcastle social services department in respect of the issues raised in the Hunt report into a multiple child abuse case in Newcastle; and what assessment she has made of the adequacy of remedial action taken to deal with the shortcomings identified by the Hunt report. [26206]

Mr. Bowis: The social services inspectorate has undertaken a number of inspections relating to different services provided by Newcastle city council's social services department, the most recent in January this year.

Mr. Hunt's report following his independent inquiry into multiple abuse of children in nursery classes raised issues for several local authority departments and the area child protection committee as well as the Newcastle city council social services department. I am advised that the recommendations requiring immediate action have now been implemented and inspectors from my social services inspectorate are continuing to monitor progress.

Oculogenital Clinic, Moorfields Eye Hospital

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if statutory consultation requirements were met in relation to the decision by Moorfields Eye hospital to close its oculogenital clinic. [25962]

Mr. Sackville: The decision on whether to consult is a matter for the local health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Roland Everington, chairman of Camden and Islington health authority, for details.

Air Pollution

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations she has had in the last year with other Ministers and Departments concerning combating the levels of air pollution and its effect on health; and if she will make a statement. [25960]

Mr. Sackville: Ministers in the Department of Health hold frequent meetings with other Ministers to discuss a variety of matters, which will sometimes include the effects of air pollutants upon health. On this issue we are advised in particular by the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Air Pollution Episodes.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will specify the air-borne pollution most damaging to health as indicated by Her Department's research into the causes of asthma and links with air pollution. [26602]

Mr. Sackville: Levels of air pollution vary considerably from place to place and at different times, and there is no one pollutant which is consistently the most damaging. The effects on individuals are determined by the duration of exposure as well as the level of pollution, and sensitivity to pollutants may also vary between individuals. The Department of the Environment's air quality information line—0800 556677—provides information on the levels of pollutants.

Sex Change Operations

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost to public funds of a sex change operation carried out on the NHS. [26017]

Mr. Sackville: As there are a wide range of patient conditions and particular treatment needs, it is not possible to state, with certainty, how much a sex change operation costs.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current waiting list for sex change operations. [26016]

Mr. Sackville: For waiting list purposes, sex change operations are included in the plastic surgery speciality. It is not possible to identify sex change operations data separately.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many sex change operations (a) from male to female and (b) from female to male, have been carried out under the national health service in each year since 1990. [26018]

Mr. Sackville: Data on sex change operations data are not recorded separately from data on other plastic surgery operations.

GP Lists

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans her Department has to ensure that general practitioners tell patients the reason why they have been struck off family doctor lists. [26079]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Stockport (Mrs. Coffey) on 2 March, column 647.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans her Department has to overhaul the rules regarding the deregistration of patient from general practitioners' practice lists. [26070]

Mr. Malone: None.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 16 March, Official Report, column 707, when she will publish data for 1993 on patients removed from general practitioner lists. [26083]

Mr. Malone: It is planned to include the available information in the health service indicators package due to be published later this year.

Remedial Training for Doctors

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was spent on remedial training of (a) general practitioners and (b) hospital doctors in each regional health authority in each of the last 10 years. [26208]

Mr. Malone: Remedial training is not separately identified within the overall cost of postgraduate and continuing medical education in the national health service.

Residential Care

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in England aged over 64 years live in (a) private residential homes, (b) private nursing homes, (c) local authority part III homes and (d) national health service nursing homes; and, of these, how many have the cost of their care paid wholly or partly by (i) their local authority, (ii) their health authority, and (iii) the Department of Social Security; and how many pay for their care wholly from private sources. [25971]

Mr. Bowis: At 31 March 1994, there were 142,000 and 53,600 long-stay residents aged over 64 in private residential homes and local authority part III homes respectively. A further 37,000 people were in residential homes provided by the voluntary sector. An estimated 132,000 beds were occupied by people over 64 years in nursing homes registered under section 23 of the Registered Homes Act 1984. Information on national health service nursing homes is not available centrally.

The numbers of long-stay residents aged over 64 in residential or nursing homes whose costs are met wholly or in part by the local authority are shown in the table.

No information is available centrally on the numbers of people whose costs are met wholly or in part by their health authority nor on numbers who pay for their care wholly from private sources. Information on numbers supported wholly or in part by the Department of Social Security is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

Long-stay residents aged over 64 in residential or nursing homes whose costs are met wholly or in part by their local authority, England at 31 March 1994.

Numbers

Sector	Residential homes	Nursing homes
Private	21,900	20,600
Local authority	51,500	—
Voluntary	6,800	1,100

In Vitro Fertilisation

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to ensure that in vitro fertilisation treatment is provided on the NHS by the Cornwall health authority. [26161]

Mr. Sackville: It is the responsibility of each individual health authority to determine its provision of infertility treatment in the light of local needs and the availability of resources. The hon. Member may wish to contact Dr. Stanley Dennison, chairman of the Cornwall and Isles of Scilly health authority for details.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to ensure that in vitro fertilisation treatment is provided on the NHS by every health authority. [26162]

Mr. Sackville: Local health authorities are responsible for the provision of local health services, including the provision of infertility services. Decisions about the resources to be made available for these services must be left to individual health authorities as they are in the best position to determine priorities in the light of local needs and circumstances.

Departmental Performance

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what performance indicators and performance targets there are for measuring the performance of her Department in (a) answering letters from members of the public and (b) answering telephone calls from members of the public; how performance is monitored; and what are the latest figures for performance measured against the target set. [26235]

Mr. Sackville: The Department has an explicit aim to answer all letters from members of the public within 28 days. This is included in departmental business plans, and monitored as part of local management responsibilities.

The majority of telephone calls received from members of the public relate to the national health service and are passed initially through the Department's public inquiry office. Questions that cannot be answered by the inquiry office are passed to relevant parts of the Department for reply. As with written communications, performance targets are set internally and achievement against those targets monitored by local management.

Asthma

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her estimate of the number of people currently diagnosed as asthmatic. [25955]

Mr. Sackville: There are no comprehensive data on the number of people with a diagnosis of asthma. However, it has been estimated that the prevalence of asthma sufficiently severe to require regular medical supervision is from 4 to 6 per cent. in children and about 4 per cent. in adults. More information is given in "Asthma: An Epidemiological Overview", published on 22 March, copies of which are available in the Library.

Preventive Medicine

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement outlining her Department's latest initiatives in preventive medicine. [26014]

Mr. Sackville: The Government launched "The Health of the Nation" strategy in July 1992 as a long-term strategy emphasising disease prevention and health promotion. The strategy involves a wide range of partners both within and outside Government. Already, we are seeing results. For 19 of the 24 targets where data are available, movement is in the right direction.

Psychiatric Beds

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) long-stay and (b) acute psychiatric beds there were in each regional health authority and district health authority in (i) 1979, (ii) 1990 and (iii) the last year for which figures are available. [26080]

Mr. Bowis: Information is not available in the form requested. The available information for 1979 has been published in "SH3 National and Regional Summaries (DHSS Hospital Statistics) 1979" and for later years in "Bed availability in England", copies of which are available in the Library. Because of changes in the classifications of beds and health authority boundaries over the period, figures are not strictly comparable.

Complaints

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what policy and procedures exist for dealing with complaints against her Department by members of the public; when the policy was last updated; what time limit and target for dealing with such complaints her Department has; and what follow-up procedure exists where complainants are not satisfied with her Department's response to a complaint. [26219]

Mr. Sackville: The majority of complaints received by the Department from members of the public relate to the national health service.

Complaints relating specifically to the Department are handled as any other correspondence, and are subject to performance targets set and monitored by local departmental management.

Any member of the public who is dissatisfied with how the Department has dealt with his complaint may ask a Member of Parliament to submit the complaint to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration for investigation and review.

Residential Homes

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in England aged over 64 years and living in (a) private residential homes, (b) private nursing homes, (c) local authority residential homes and (d) national health service nursing homes have spouse living elsewhere. [25972]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Malaria Prophylaxis

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to make all malaria prophylaxis available over the counter in United Kingdom pharmacies. [26076]

Mr. Malone: There are no plans to change the status of those malaria prophylactics which are prescription-only medicines.

University College Hospital

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds of each type will be lost under the proposed reorganisation of University College London hospital. [26315]

Mr. Malone: Camden and Islington health authority is consulting on those proposals. Details are set out in the public consultation document issued on 24 April.

Swindon Health Care

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps he is taking to ensure sufficient in-patient accommodation will be available for Swindon and district between the closure of the Princess Alexandra hospital in 1996 and the refurbishment of the Princess Margaret hospital; [26305]

(2) what steps she is taking to ensure the health care needs of Swindon and district are met following the closure of the Princess Alexandra hospital 1996. [27307]

Mr. Sackville: These are matters for the Wiltshire and Bath health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman, Mr. Alastair Service CBE, for details.

Minor Injury Units

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence she has of the effect of the replacement of accident and emergency centres with trauma centres and minor injuries units on the level of deaths. [26309]

Mr. Sackville: We set up a pilot trauma centre at the North Staffordshire Hospitals NHS trust in 1990. This followed a report from the Royal College of Surgeons on the management of patients with major injuries that found that one in every five deaths from major trauma was potentially preventable. The pilot has been evaluated by the medical care research unit at the university of Sheffield and we expect to receive its findings in the summer.

There is, however, a considerable body of scientific evidence showing that patients with major injuries receive more effective care in large, appropriately staffed, accident and emergency centres, backed up by the main hospital specialties. A review of the literature on the relationship between the size of accident and emergency departments and clinical outcomes prepared by my Department is available in the Library.

Studies of minor injury units have shown them to be effective in treating patients with minor conditions. The studies also found that nearly all patients use minor injury units appropriately.

Fluoridation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which water companies add fluoride to the water supply; and which have chosen not to do so. [26572]

Mr. Malone: United Kingdom companies which are currently operating—or have at some point operated—fluoridation plant include:

Severn Trent Water
South Staffordshire Water
East Worcestershire Waterworks Company (now part of severn Trent)
North East Water
North West Water
Welsh Water
Yorkshire Water
Anglian Water
Colne Valley Water Company

It is for a health authority, following extensive public consultation, to submit a request to the water undertakers to fluoridate the water supply on behalf of the local population. Yorkshire Water decided recently not to agree to fluoridate the regions's water supply. The fluoridation of water supplies accords with Government policy and underpins the objectives of the oral health strategy.

Blood-lead Levels

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what continuous monitoring of blood-lead levels in children is carried out by her Department; if she will publish the results for the last three years for which such information is available; and if she will make a statement; [26591]

(2) what evidence she has evaluated to indicate that blood-lead levels in children have reached levels (a) potentially affecting the central nervous system and (b) causing other effects damaging to health; and if she will make a statement; [26606]

(3) if she will publish the latest available figures her Department has evaluated on the contribution of air-borne lead to children's blood-lead levels; [26604]

(4) if she will list the latest available figures her Department has evaluated on the contribution to children's blood-lead levels caused by (a) petrol, (b) food and (c) lead water pipes. [26607]

Mr. Sackville: Since 1974, it has been the policy of successive Governments to contain and reduce exposure to lead wherever practicable, particularly in those circumstances where people are most exposed.

Monitoring programmes have shown a continuing fall in blood-lead levels in children and adults since the early 1970s as controls on sources of lead exposure have been introduced. Since action has been taken to reduce exposure from a wide range of sources including petrol, drinking water, air, food, industrial emissions, paint, cosmetics, ceramic glazes and toys, the contribution made to blood-lead levels by any one source is difficult to estimate and will vary with location and age of the person.

Continuous monitoring of children's blood-lead levels is not carried out in the United Kingdom. However, lead will be determined in blood samples collected for the 1995 health survey for England from a sample of adults and children aged 11 and over.

Meals on Wheels

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on meals on wheels by each authority in each of the last 10 years, expressed in 1995 prices. [25764]

Mr. Bowis: The information, expressed in 1994–95 prices, will be placed in the Library. The figures should be treated with caution as local authorities differ from year to year in their respective treatment of administrative and other overhead costs. Year-on-year variations may also reflect changes in type or method of meal service and changes of contract. New guidelines for future social services accounting have been drawn up by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accounting and the local authorities, which should result in greater consistency.

North Tees NHS Trust

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health is she will provide details of the early retirement package given to Mr. Belton, the former chief executive of North Tees NHS trust. [26185]

Mr. Malone: Mr. Belton is still employed as chief executive of North Tees NHS trust.

Medical Records

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance she issues as to the grounds on which a health authority may restrict an individual's access to their own medical records; [25948]

(2) what is her Department's policy on procedure when individuals request their medical records; [25949]

(3) what guidelines her Department offers to health authorities on how to respond when patients request their medical records. [25950]

Mr. Sackville: Patients have a legal right to see their own health records. For records kept on paper and compiled on or after 1 November 1991, access is provided for by the Access to Health Records Act 1990. For records held on computer, access is provided for by the Data Protection Act 1984. Access may be denied to all or part of the record if disclosure of any information in it might cause serious harm to the physical or mental health of the patient. Access may also be denied if it contains information which would identify a third party, other than a health professional, unless that person has consented to the disclosure. The Access to Health Records Act also permits access to be withheld to protect the health of another person.

Guidance on the Access to Health Records Act 1990 was issued to the National Health Service in England in August 1991. Guidance on the Data Protection Act 1984 was issued to the NHS in England in 1987 and 1989. Guidance was also issued to the NHS in Wales. A revised handbook, "Introduction to Data Protection in the NHS" was issued in July 1994. All guidance contains advice on procedures to enable patients to see their records. Copies of the guidance are available in the Library.

Breast Cancer Screening

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many women (a) in England and (b) in the United Kingdom aged (i) 50 to 54, (ii) 55 to 59 (iii) 60 to 64, (iv) 65 and, (v) 66 years or over were screened for breast cancer following an invitation from the national health service breast screening programme in each of the last five years; [26021]

(2) what percentage of women aged 65 years or over (a) in England and (b) in the United Kingdom were screened for breast cancer through the national health service breast screening programme at their own request or the request of their general practitioner, excluding women who are screened through the diagnostic service, in the latest year for which figures are available; [26023]

(3) how many women (a) in England and (b) in the United Kingdom aged: (i) 50 to 54, (ii) 55 to 59, (iii) 60 to 64, (iv) 65 to 69, (v) 70 to 74, (vi) 75 to 79, (vii) 80 to 84 (viii) 85 years or over were screened for breast cancer through the national health service breast screening programme at their own request or the request of their general practitioner, excluding women who are screened through the diagnostic service, in each of the last five years. [26022]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally in the form requested. The available information is shown in the tables.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average cost per person screened on the national health service breast screening programme. [26025]

Mr. Sackville: The estimated average cost per person screened under the national health service breast screening programme in England in 1993–94 was £27.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what amount the national health service breast screening programme spends on screening women 65 years or over; and what percentage of the total budget this is. [26024]

Mr. Sackville: It is estimated that in 1993–94 in England, about £1.4 million, representing 5 per cent. of the total breast cancer screening budget, was spent on testing women aged 65 years or over for breast cancer.

Capital Underspending

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 23 January, Official Report, columns 13–14, if she will provide 1994–95 information on regional health authority capital underspending. [26088]

Mr. Sackville: Details of underspending on regional health authority capital cash limits will not be available until all authorities have completed their annual accounts for 1994–95.

Staff Cars

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was expended on cars for staff by (a) trusts and (b) in total in each of the last five years. [26288]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the right hon. Member to the replies I gave to the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 19 December 1994, column 990; the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) on 24 October 1994, column 450; the reply my right hon. Friend the then Minister for Health gave the hon. Member for Lewisham, East (Mrs. Prentice) on 1 March 1994, columns 678–79; and the reply I gave the hon. Member for Brightside on 6 December 1993, columns 70–71.

GP Vacancies

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioner posts were (a) filled and (b) vacant in each health region in each year since 1988. [26087]

Mr. Malone: The information is not available centrally.

Private Patients

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many bed days of finished episodes have been provided for private patients treated in NHS hospitals in total and by regional health authority in each of the last five years. [26289]

Mr. Sackville: The information requested is detailed in "Hospital Episode Statistics Volume 1", copies of which are available in the Library.

Vacant Medical Posts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the number of (a) consultant, (b) senior registrar, (c) registrar and (d) senior house officer posts that were vacant in each region, by speciality, in each year since 1988. [26085]

Mr. Malone: The available information has been placed in the Library in crown copyright table R5 of the Department's census of the medical and dental work force. As these relate to a single date each year, they may not fairly reflect the trend for the number of vacancies in the stated grades over the year as a whole.

Cardiac Services, Plymouth

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what cardiac services are available to patients in the Plymouth area. [26286]

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for the South and West Devon health commission. The right hon. Member may wish to contact Mrs. Judy Leverton, chairman of the health commission, for details.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Finance

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those local authorities which are considered to be debt free; and what are the Government guidelines on debt to equity ratio for local authorities.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: [pursuant to his reply, 4 April 1995, c. 1049–50]: the list of local authorities which were debt free as at 30 September 1994 given in that answer was incomplete and should have included Wansdyke. The complete list should therefore read:

Dorset

West Midlands Housing Corporation

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the West Midlands housing corporation cash allocations for 1995–96 and each of the previous five years broken down into (a) regional cash limit, (b) new rent allocations, (c) new sale allocations, (d) new do-it-yourself sale allocations and (e) rehabilitation-renovation with an indication as to the proportion of these allocations that are within (i) the west midlands metropolitan area and (ii) Birmingham. [24593]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The table shows the housing corporation allocations in 1995–96 and each of the previous five years, by the headings requested, for the corporation's west midlands region; and how much of these were allocated to Birmingham and the west midlands metropolitan area, which has been taken to be Coventry, Dudley, Sandwell, Solihull, Walsall and Wolverhampton. The allocations represent housing corporation resources going into new housing association scheme starts whilst the cash limit represents expenditure on new and existing schemes.

Union Flag

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidelines his Department issued to local authorities in respect of the flying of flags on (a) VE day and (b) VJ day; and to what extent local authorities are free to determine their own policy. [25328]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department issued no guidelines to local authorities about flying the Union Flag on VE or VJ Day. Local authorities are completely free to determine their own policy in this respect.

HM Inspectorate of Pollution

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many scientists employed by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution are specialists in air pollution. [25690]

Mr. Atkins: Under HMIP's integrated structure, work on air pollution is undertaken by staff working in multi-disciplinary teams where individuals address all aspects of the inspectorate's responsibilities for pollution regulation and control.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current starting salary for a professional at Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution now; and what it was in each of the years since 1990. [25686]

Mr. Atkins: The information is as follows:

Grade	Location	Salary minimum 1 January 1990	1 August 1990	1 April 1991	1 August 1991	1 August 1992	1 August 1993	1 April 1994

	National	18,488	20,059	21,905	23,329	24,239	24,239	24,724

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has had to re-advertise to fill vacancies in professional posts since 1990. [25689]

Mr. Atkins: Since 1990, seven recruitment campaigns have been held to increase the number of inspectors in line with the progressive growth in HMIP's complement over this period.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many of the professional posts at Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution are currently vacant. [25691]

Mr Atkins: Three.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people holding professional posts with Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution have resigned since 1990. [25687]

Mr. Atkins: Nine.

Environment Bill

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has, following the House of Lords' decision on 17 November 1994, in support of the Yorkshire Water Company against the National Rivers Authority under section 107 of the Water Act 1989, to bring forward amendments to the Act of the Environment Bill currently before Parliament. [25906]

Mr. Atkins: We have no such plans. Our views on this issue were fully set out by my hon. Friend, Viscount Ullswater, during consideration of the Environment Bill in another place.

Water Pollution

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many of the cases of water pollution due to agriculture, recorded in 1994 occurred as a result of (a) pesticides on crops, (b) silage and (c) fertilizers; [25853]

(2) what was the number of recorded cases of water pollution caused by agricultural practice in 1994. [25854]

Mr. Atkins: The National Rivers Authority publishes a detailed annual statistical report on water pollution incidents in England and Wales. The report for 1994 will be published this summer. However, on the basis of the information currently available which is still being validated, the NRA estimates that there were 3,329 pollution incidents arising from agriculture in 1994, of which 26 can be attributed to pesticides, 259 to silage and 17 to solid and liquid fertilizers. In addition, eight can be attributed to sheep dip.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many prosecutions there have been in each of the last five years of water companies for illegally breaching consents to discharge treated sewage. [25905]

Mr. Atkins: I understand that there have been 58 such prosecutions of water companies since 1989–90. The annual figures are:

1989–90: 4
1991: 17
1992: 17
1993: 11
1994: 9

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many court actions were taken in each of the last three years in total and in each region by the National Rivers Authority; at what gross and net cost to the authority; how many court actions were taken in each of the last three years in total and against each of the water and sewerage companies by the National Rivers Authority; at what gross and net costs; how many of the court actions taken by the National Rivers Authority in each of the last three years in each region resulted in the polluter being prosecuted; and what were the total fines imposed by the National Rivers Authority on (a) polluters and (b) statutory water undertakers in each of the last three years in each region. [25777]

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 23 May 1995]: The National Rivers Authority publishes an annual statistical report on water pollution incidents in England and Wales. The report for 1994 will be published later this year but the latest estimates for that year are included in the tables. In some cases the information is not available in exactly the form requested. As regards the cost of court actions, the NRA does not keep records of its costs categorised annually for individual regions or water and sewerage companies. The average cost to the NRA of bringing a prosecution—reflecting a wide range of prosecutions—is £660. Costs imposed by the courts can vary widely and can rarely be compared with the actual cost of taking a prosecution.

Recycling

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what action his Department has taken to encourage the use of remanufactured goods; [26163]

(2) what plans he has to encourage investment and expansion in the remanufactured products industry. [26164]

Mr. Atkins: The draft "Waste Strategy for England and Wales", published for consultation in January 1995, has opened up a wide debate to identify ways in which all of our waste can be managed in a more sustainable way including the promotion of recycling and manufacture using waste materials. Recycling rates reflect market forces including the costs of recyclate against virgin material, consumer preference and the way in which business buying specifications are set out. Several of the Government's policies set out in the strategy will help secure significant increases in recycling rates, and in particular the producer responsibility initiative which gives an incentive to businesses to increase the amount of recyclate which re-enters the productive loop.

Air Pollution

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effects on (a) public health, (b) asthma sufferers, (c) the elderly and (d) pregnant women, when ground level ozone reaches 90PPB. [26171]

Mr. Atkins: Within Government, the Department of Health takes the lead in assessing the health effects of air pollutants, including advice from its Committee on the Medical Aspects of Air Pollutants. The effects of exposure to ozone depend on the duration of the exposure as well as on the level of the pollutant. The main effects are on the respiratory system and vary considerably from individual to individual. In 1991, the expert advisory group on the medical aspects of air pollution episodes published a report on ozone. A copy is in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether any landfill sites within the parliamentary constituency of Nottingham, North will be used for the disposal of nuclear waste. [26244]

Mr. Atkins: At the present moment, there are no proposals for the disposal of radioactive waste from nuclear sites to Nottingham, North. My Department has no knowledge of any future plans in this regard.

Members' Interests

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to regulate possible conflicts of interest arising when an elected member of a local authority or appointed member of other public bodies acts in a professional capacity for individual employees of the same authority where the employee faces serious disciplinary action. [26204]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: We have no proposals to add to the existing legislation and guidance about members' interests.

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many appeals against uniform business rate valuations were received from businesses in (a) York and (b) north Yorkshire following the 1987 revaluation; how long on average these appeals took to resolve; and on what date the last of these appeals was resolved; [25965]

(2) how many appeals against uniform business rate valuations were received from businesses in (a) York and (b) north Yorkshire following the 1992 revaluation; how long on average these appeals are taking to resolve; and how many currently are outstanding. [25966]

Mr. Curry: I take it that the hon. Member is referring to the revaluations which took effect on 1 April 1990 and 1 April 1995. A total of 3,677 proposals to alter the 1990 rating list had been received in York and 21,899 in north Yorkshire by 30 April 1995, of which 903 and 4,616 respectively were outstanding at that date. Proposals to alter this list can still be made in some circumstances up to 31 March 1996. One hundred and forty proposals to alter the 1995 rating list had been received in York and 991 in north Yorkshire by 30 April 1995. None have yet been resolved.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of uniform business rate charged in each local authority in England is allocated, according to the uniform business rate distribution formula, to the business ratepayers own authorities. [25968]

Mr. Curry: National non-domestic rates—business rates—are collected by billing authorities during the year and paid into the NNDR pool. Funds from the pool, the "distributable amount" are re-distributed on a population basis to all classes of authority in line with the formula set out in the local government finance report. This includes distribution to police and fire and civil defence authorities which do not all operate within the boundary of a single billing authority.

Billing authorities may make adjustments during the year of the sums contributed to the pool, in line with their collection rates. No adjustments are made in year to the distributed amount.

It is not therefore possible to calculate the final amount of NDR charged by each billing authority until after the end of the relevant financial year.

As the distributable amount is calculated on a population basis for each year and the amount collected in that year is not known until the following year, the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost in the form requested.

Toner Cartridges

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of toner cartridges have been recycled or remanufactured in each year for the last five years. [26164]

Mr. Atkins: My Department does not hold this information, but I understand that the United Kingdom Cartridge Recyclers Association, established in March 1993 to promote the use of remanufactured toner cartridges, may be able to supply industry estimates of the current levels of toner cartridges remanufactured.

North Sea

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what research his Department has carried out into the levels of hydrocarbons in the North sea; [26167]

(2) if he will list the research work sponsored by his Department into the effects of oil-based drilling muds in the North sea; [26169]

(3) what estimates he has made of (a) the average level of hydrocarbons in the North sea and (b) the level of hydrocarbons in the 8 km radius of oil drilling platforms; [26168]

(4) what assessment his Department has made of contamination around oil drilling platforms in the North sea; [26166]

(5) what assessment his Department has made of the effects of oil-based drilling muds on the North sea. [26170]

Mr. Atkins: Marine laboratories of the fisheries departments carry out research into this area and relevant data are compiled by the Oslo and Paris Commission from information provided by all North sea states involved in offshore activities. This information was reported in the 1993 "North Sea Quality Status" report and its associated sub-regional reports, copies of which are in the House Library.

In the North sea as a whole, oil concentrations in water are generally low. These reports state that levels of oil may be higher close to production platforms than elsewhere in the North sea. Such concentrations influence the sea floor community in the immediate vicinity and some effects may persist up to several kilometres from the drilling site.

Going for Green Initiative

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what have been the results so far of the going for green initiative. [24725]

Sir Paul Beresford: On 6 February 1995, the going for green national committee launched its campaign to catalyse people's interest in the environment, inform their understanding of the consequences of the choices they make as consumers, and endorse actions to improve their environment, whether through managing resources better, reducing pollution or cultivating the local environment. Going for green is currently preparing a business plan which includes a strategy for a national campaign, the sustainable communities pilot project and the further development of the eco-schools programme.

Tinsley, Sheffield

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will make available to the National Audit Office, all agreements relating to the building of an airport at Tinsley, Sheffield. [25868]

(2) if he will make available to the National Audit Office all agreements relating to opencasting at Tinsley, Sheffield. [25869]

Sir Paul Beresford: No request has been received from the NAO for information relating to the building of an airport or the opencasting at Tinsley, Sheffield.

Mr. Clive Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will place in the Library all agreements relating to the operating at Tinsley, Sheffield; [25870]

(2) if he will place in the Library all the agreements relating to the building of an airport at Tinsley, Sheffield; [25871]

(3) if he will place in the Library such information held by Sheffield development corporation in respect of opencasting at Tinsley, Sheffield as would have been publicly available if the opencasting had been the responsibility of a local authority; [25872]

(4) if he will place in the Library information in respect of Tinsley airport such as would have been publicly available had the development been the responsibility of a local authority. [25873]

Sir Paul Beresford: Documentation relating to the planning decisions for the open casting and the building of an airport at Tinsley is available for inspection at the offices of Sheffield city council and Sheffield development corporation.

Documentation relating to the development, rather than the planning decisions, at Tinsley is commercially confidential and is not publically available.

Mr. Clive Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will undertake an investigation to determine if the land at Tinsley, Sheffield being prepared for building an airport runway has been properly compacted following opencasting. [25874]

Sir Paul Beresford: It is for Sheffield development corporation as landowner and local planning authority to be satisfied that the land at Tinsley has been properly compacted in accordance with the planning conditions.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which body currently has responsibility for defects resulting from compaction work on the opencast site at Tinsley, Sheffield. [25875]

Sir Paul Beresford: British Coal retains responsibility to deal with defects resulting from the compaction of the site.

Allerton Outreach Team

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further funding to support two staff and running costs of the Allerton Outreach team in Bradford has been secured; and if he will make a statement. [25981]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Employment.

Lister Mills

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much public money, including the cost of official time, he estimates has been spent to date on the re-development of Lister mills in Bradford, with particular reference to the establishment of a northern branch of the Victoria and Albert museum. [26136]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department contributed £18,500 towards a feasibility study funded jointly with Bradford metropolitan district council and Listers plc in 1989. Information on the cost of the official time spent by public organisations on the wide range of proposals under consideration since 1988 is not recorded.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what indication he has given formally or informally to Millview Developments, owners of Lister Mills in Bradford, that public financial support from his Department will be available to pay for redevelopment at the mills; and if he will make a statement. [26367]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department has given no formal or informal indication to Millview Developments that public financial support will be available to pay for development at Lister Mills, Bradford.

Drinking Water

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the limits of chlorine and chlorinated substances imposed by the current European Council drinking water regulations. [26394]

Mr. Atkins: The EC drinking water directive—80/778/EEC—does not include a maximum admissible concentration for chlorine. Persistent organochlorine insecticides, polychlorinated biphenyls and polychlorinated terphenyls are included within the pesticides and related products parameter and maximum admissible concentrations of 0.1 and 0.5 microgram per litre apply for individual and total substances respectively. There are no maximum admissible concentrations for other organochlorine compounds although there is a comment that haloform—trihalomethanes—concentrations must be as low as possible.

The Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989 set standards of 100 microgram per litre for total trihalomethanes and 3, 30 and 10 microgram per litre for the chlorinated solvents tetrachloromethane, trichloroethene and tetrachloroethane respectively in addition to those required by the EC directive.

Dry Stone Walls

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the cost of rebuilding a derelict dry stone wall for any length for which figures are available. [26450]

Mr. Atkins: My Department has not carried out specific research into the costs of rebuilding dry stone walls. The costs in particular cases are likely to be subject to considerable variation depending on a number of factors including a wall's design, height and width, the extent of dereliction, the availability of stone and the nature of the terrain.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking, following the Countryside Commission's national survey of the condition of dry stone walls, to ensure that walls which have major signs of advancing or potential deterioration or are in early stages of dereliction are rebuilt or otherwise repaired. [26436]

Mr. Atkins: The Government already offer payments for the repair and restoration of stone walls in landscapes eligible for support under the countryside stewardship scheme, the farm and conservation grant scheme and in environmentally sensitive areas. Proposals for the integration and focus of environmental land management schemes in England were published on 18 May by my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. Copies of the consultation document have been placed in the Library of the House.

Fire Authorities

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to extend the discretionary powers of fire authorities in county council offices to metropolitan fire authorities under section 137 of the Local Government Act 1972. [26313]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: There are no plans to extend the provisions of section 137 of the Local Government Act 1972 to apply to metropolitan fire authorities.

Leaseholders

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish his proposals to assist local authority leaseholders to sell their flats. [26525]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: We plan to announce a package of measures in the next few weeks.

Revenue Support Grant

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the level of revenue support grant per head in (a) Pendle, (b) Ribble valley, (c) the City of Westminster, (d) Wandsworth and (e) the City of London for 1994–95 and 1995–96. [26565]

Mr. Curry: The revenue support grant per head of these authorities is shown in the first row of figures in each of the tables. The tables also show the revenue support grant per head of the other types of authority which serve these areas, since the division of responsibilities for services between types of authorities is different in Lancashire, inner London and the City of London. In particular, in Pendle and Ribble valley, Lancashire county council provides major services which, in London, are provided by the borough and city authorities.

North Sea Conference

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what policy on toxic discharges into the North sea Her Majesty's Government will advance at the fourth North sea Ministers Conference in Esbjerg; and if he will make a statement. [26395]

Mr. Atkins: The Secretary of State announced on 16 May, columns 183–84 the United Kingdom's priorities for the North sea conference including that relating to toxic discharges. A note on our objectives was placed in the Library of the House.

Housing (Elderly and Disabled People)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many specialist housing schemes and associations providing care and support for vulnerable residents and those at risk there are in the United Kingdom. [26539]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Research published last year by the Department[1] found that there were a total of 14,206 units of very sheltered accommodation for elderly and disabled people provided in England by local authorities, registered housing associations, Abbeyfield societies and almshouses in 1990.

There were a further 52,679 supported units provided for non-elderly vulnerable residents in England through the Housing Corporation in 1994–95. The Housing Corporation supported a total of 317 housing associations providing care and support to their tenants.

[1]Living Independently—A study of the Housing Needs of elderly and disabled people, HMSO 1994.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give undertaking that no nuclear industry waste will be disposed of inside the boundary of the Bassetlaw constituency or the boundary of the Bassetlaw district council in north Nottinghamshire.

Mr. Atkins: There are no sites in the Bassetlaw constituency or the boundary of Bassetlaw district council which are authorised by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution for the disposal of waste from nuclear licensed sites. The Government's overall policy in this area will be set out this summer when the conclusions to its review of radioactive waste management are published.

Nitrate Consultation

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made on the Government's response to last year's consultation on proposed nitrate vulnerable zones under the EC nitrate directive; and if he will make a statement. [26621]

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friends the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Secretary of State for Wales and I issued today our response to last year's consultation. As with the original consultation document, the response document is being sent to farmers in parishes and communities containing a proposed nitrate vulnerable zone, and to other interested groups.

A major purpose of the consultation was to confirm the accuracy of the proposed zones, using farmers' local knowledge, before their formal designation. Over 500 sets of written comments were received, in the main from farmers in the proposed zones, and in each case an individual response has been sent out. In addition many points have been addressed directly at a local level by the National Rivers Authority and the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service.

The response document indicates how the Government propose to proceed with designations in the light of comments received. In all, the proposed boundaries for 31 of the 72 zones have been altered and it is proposed that two small groundwater zones should be deferred for further consideration. Maps of the revised zones are available free from MAFF regional services centres and WOAD divisional offices.

As foreshadowed in last year's consultation document, we have set up an independent review panel, chaired by Mr. Terence Etherton QC and assisted by Dr. Richard Downing and Mr. Alastair Allcock. The panel will assess whether the Government's published methodology has been correctly and consistently applied in drawing up the boundaries in those cases where consultees are dissatisfied with the amended boundaries as set out in the response document. In addition, because of the uniqueness of the proposed surface water zone at Nayland, we have asked the independent review panel to consider the case for and against its designation.

I am placing copies of the response document in the Library.

Environment Agency

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps are being taken to appoint senior directors of the proposed environment agency. [26620]

Mr. Atkins: I have informed the environment agency advisory committee that it may commence the recruitment of senior directors of the proposed environment agency. Approval has already been given for the recruitment of the chief executive, as announced in my reply of 21 April to my hon. Friend the Member for Wyre Forest (Mr. Coombs), columns 288–89.

Parliamentary approval to this new service will be sought in a summer supplementary estimate for the Department of the Environment's environmental protection and water vote, class VII, vote 3. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £135,000 will be met by repayable advances from the contingencies fund.

This expenditure is required to meet the cost of recruiting up to six directors. Its urgency reflects the need to have directors in place as soon as possible after Royal Assent, so that they can support the chief executive in planning for the agency to take over its functions from predecessor bodies on 1 April 1996. The successful candidates will not be formally appointed as directors until after the Bill has received Royal Assent.

Packaging

Mr. Dicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his proposals for producer responsibility for packaging. [26622]

Mr. Gummer: When my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade and I launched the producer responsibility challenge on 17 July 1993, we took the view that only industry could provide the leadership and know-how necessary to achieve a successful UK initiative on recycling and recovery of packaging waste. Nearly two years later, that industry-led approach has enabled us to meet many of our key objectives. The producer responsibility group of leading businesses involved in packaging has achieved widespread industry support for its plan to secure the recovery and recycling of 58 per cent. of United Kingdom packaging waste and create close to home recycling facilities for eight out of 10 households by the year 2000. After extensive negotiation, in which the UK played a leading part, the European Community has adopted a packaging and packaging waste directive which we now need to implement.

A major challenge remains. In its first report, the producer responsibility group made it very clear that the initiative could not be successful without legislative underpinning to deter "free riders". Enabling powers to provide that legislative underpinning are included in the Environment Bill, now being considered by Parliament. But we need to specify precisely who in business will be subject to a legal obligation and what action is required to satisfy it. Such an obligation must be simple and clear if it is to be effective and enforceable—in industry's interests as much as Government's. It must also be consistent with wider Government policies, for example on ensuring competition and minimising burdens on business.

The Government are today publishing, "Producer Responsibility for Packaging Waste—a Consultation Paper", which sets out a variety of options on how such a legal obligation might work and includes a compliance cost assessment. Copies are being placed in the Library. These options have been the subject of lengthy and detailed deliberation by different industry groups in the light of the legislative tests set out in the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minster of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Plymouth, Sutton (Mr. Streeter) on 2 February, Official Report, columns 763–64.

Several of the options have been put forward by the VALPAK—working representative advisory group—V—WRAG—the industry body which has succeeded PRG and which will continue to be a focus for discussions. Alternative approaches may emerge in consultation but they will need to demonstrate that they have been widely publicised in industry and tested against the same criteria as the options in this paper. The Government will need to make a decision to adopt a proposal based on one of these approaches and are keen to have the views of all sectors of industry and commerce, and others who will be involved in achieving our aims, including local authorities and consumers.

What is most needed now is further work by the proponents of different approaches to help build a consensus behind the best option. The Government would prefer to proceed on the basis of a board consensus on an approach which best meetws the test we have published. We invite all those involved in the production, distribution and use of packaging to meet this challenge.

Housing

Mr. Hinchcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the number of housing association homes for rent which could have been constructed at funding levels announced in the 1992 autumn statement. [25396]

Mr. Robert B. Jones [holding answer 24 May 1995]: Such estimates depend on the assumptions made. But if allocations and unit costs had been on the same basis as for the current programme, the Housing Corporation estimates that the 1995–96 approved development programme would have provided some 35,900 new build homes for rent if funding levels in the 1992 autumn statement had been maintained.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 260

SESSION 1994–95

15th May—31st May 1995

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
